

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2008 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

(Washington (Irving) AN

V.5

LIFE

OF

GEORGE WASHINGTON

THE NEW YORK
UBLIC LIBRARY
ANTOR, LENOX AND TILDER FOUNDATIONS
R

1

LIFE

OF

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

BY

WASHINGTON IRVING

VOL. V.

NEW YORK: GEO. P. PUTNAM.

1860.

ENTERED, according to Act of Congress, in the year 1859, by WASHINGTON IRVING,

In the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of New York

JOHN F. TROW, Printer, Stereotyper, and Electrotyper, 46, 48 & 50 Greene Street, Between Grand & Broome, New York.

PREFACE.

The present volume completes a work to which the author had long looked forward as the crowning effort of his literary career.

The idea of writing a life of Washington entered at an early day into his mind. It was especially pressed upon his attention nearly thirty years ago while he was in Europe, by a proposition of the late Mr. Archibald Constable, the eminent publisher of Edinburgh, and he resolved to undertake it as soon as he should return to the United States, and be within reach of the necessary documents. Various circumstances occurred to prevent him from carrying this resolution into prompt effect. It remained, however, a cherished purpose of his heart, which he has at length, though somewhat tardily, accomplished.

The manuscript for the present volume was nearly ready for the press some months since, but the author, by applying himself too closely in his eagerness to finish it, brought on a nervous indisposition, which unfitted him for a time for the irksome but indispensable task of revision. In this he has been kindly assisted by his nephew, Pierre Munro Irving, who had previously aided him in the course of his necessary researches, and who now carefully collated the manuscript with the works, letters, and inedited documents from which the facts had been derived. He has likewise had the kindness to superintend the printing of the volume, and the correction of the proof sheets. Thus aided, the author is enabled to lay the volume before the public.

∞ ∾ vi Preface.

How far this, the last labor of his pen, may meet with general acceptation is with him a matter of hope rather than of confidence. He is conscious of his own short-comings and of the splendid achievements of oratory of which the character of Washington has recently been made the theme. Grateful, however, for the kindly disposition which has greeted each successive volume, and with a profound sense of the indulgence he has experienced from the public through a long literary career, now extending through more than half a century, he resigns his last volume to its fate, with a feeling of satisfaction that he has at length reached the close of his task, and with the comforting assurance that it has been with him a labor of love, and as such has to a certain degree carried with it its own reward.

WASHINGTON IRVING.

Sunmyside, April, 1859

CONTENTS OF VOL. V.

CHAPTER I.

The new Government—Demestic and Foreign Relations—Washington's anxious Position—Its difficulties—Without Cabinet or Constitutional Advisers—John Jay—Hamilton—His efficient Support of the Constitution and Theoretic Doubts —James Madison—Knox—His Characteristics.	1
CHAPTER II.
Washington's Privacy beset with Visits of Compliment—Queries as to the proper Line of Conduct in his Presidential Intercourse—Opinions of Adams and Hamilton—Jefferson as to the Authors of the minor Forms and Ceremonies—Ilis whimsical Anecdote of the first Levee—Inaugural Ball	7
CHAPTER III.
Journey of Mrs. Washington to New York—Honors paid her in her Progress—Receptions at the Seat of Government—The President's Equipage.	14
CHAPTER IV.
Alarming Illness of the President—The Senate rejects one of his Nominations—His sensitive Vindication of it—Death of his Mother—Her Character—The Executive Departments instituted—Selection of Officers for the Treasury and War Departments—Hamilton instructed to report a Financial Plan at the next Session of Congress—Arrangement of the Judiciary Department—Edmund Randolph—Adjournment of Congress—Its Character, by Fisher Ames.	20
CHAPTER V.

The Department of State still without a Head—Sketch of Jefferson's Character and Opinions—Deeply immersed in French Politics at Parls—Gouverneur Morris abroad—Contrast of his and Jefferson's Views on the French Crisis—News of the French Revolution in America—Popular Excitement—Washington's cautious Opinion on the Subject—Hamilton's apprehensive View—Jefferson offered a Place in the Cabinet as Secretary of State.

CHAPTER VI.
Washington's Journey through the Eastern States—John Hancock—Clashing between the Civil and Municipal Authorities on the President's entry into Boston—A Contest of Etiquette—Washington's account of his Entry—His Reception—A new Punctilio—Address of the Cincinnati Society—Return to New York	88
CHAPTER VII.
Col. John Trumbull—Message to Washington from Lafayette—Jefferson's embarka- tion for America—Washington forwards his Commission as Secretary of State— His acceptance.	45
CHAPTER VIII.
Reassembling of Congress—Financial Condition of the Country—Its Debt at Home and Abroad—Debts of the States—Hamilton's Report—Opposition to it—Dr. Stuart's warning Letter to Washington—His Reply—Jefferson's arrival at the Seat of Government—New York at that Period—Jefferson apprehends Monarchical Designs.	50
CHAPTER IX.
The Assumption of the State Debts discussed—Washington in favor—A Majority of Two against it—Hamilton's Appeal to Jefferson on the Subject—The latter arranges for a Compromise—His account of it—Adjustment about the Seat of Government—Assumption carried—Treaty of Peace with the Creeks—Cavillings about Presidential Etiquette—Washington's Defence—Adjournment of Congress—Fancied Harmony of the Cabinet—Jefferson suspects Hamilton of Finesse in procuring his Agency in the Assumption.	60
CHAPTER X.
Larayette at the Head of the Revolution in France—His Letter to Washington—Gouverneur Morris's Opinion of his Position—Washington's dubious and anxious Views—Presented by Lafayetto with the Key of the Bastille—Visits Rhode Island and Mount Vernon.	68
CHAPTER XI.
Frontier Difficulties with the Indians—General Harmor's Expedition against them —Ambuscade of Col. Hardin's Detachment—Escape of Capt. Armstrong—A second Detachment of Col. Hardin compelled to retreat—Washington's long Anxiety as to the Result of the Enterprise—Final Tidings.	74

PAGE

CHAPTER XII.

Congress reassembles at Philadelphia—Residence of Washington at the new Seat of Government—The Staté Carriage—Hamilton's Financial Arrangements—Impost and Excise Bill—Passage of a Bill for a National Bank—Jefferson's Objections—Formation of two Political Parties under Hamilton and Jefferson—Their different Views—Dissatisfaction of Congress at the Report of Harmer's Expedition—Washington's Address to the Seneca Chiefs—His desire to civilize the Savages—Kentucky and Vermont admitted into the Union—First Congress expires—A new Expedition projected against the Hostile Tribes under General St. Clair—Washington's solemn Warning on taking leave of him	•
CHAPTER XIII.
Washington's Tour through the Southern States—Letter to Lafayette—Gloomy Picture of French Affairs by Gouverneur Morris—His allusion to Lafayette—Lafayette depicts the Troubles of a Patriot Leader—Washington's Reply—Jefferson's ardent Views of the French Revolution—Distrust of John Adams—His Contributions to Fenno's Gazette—Reprint of Paine's Rights of Man—Flight and Recapture of Louis XVI.—Jefferson communicates the News to Washington—His Satisfaction when the King accepts the Constitution.	- 3 - - 3
CHAPTER XIV.
Rural Hours at Mount Vernon—Assembling of Second Congress—Washington's opening Speech—Two Expeditions organized against the Indians, under Scott and Wilkinson—Their feeble Result—Third Expedition under St. Clair—His disastrous Contest and dismal Retreat—How Washington received the Intelligence
CHAPTER XV.
The Apportionment Bill—Washington's Veto—His Concern at the growing Asperlties of Congress—Intended Retirement—Jefferson's determination to retire at the same Time—Remonstrance of Washington—His request to Madison to prepare Valedictory—Wayne appointed to succeed St. Clair—Congress adjourns—Washington at Mount Vernon—Suggests Topics for his Farewell Address—Madison's Draft—Jefferson urges his continuance.
CHAPTER XVI.
Jefferson's Suspicions—Contemned by Hamilton—Washington's Expostulation—Complains of the Conduct of Freneau's Paper—Hamilton and Randolph urge him to a Re-election—A warring Cabinet—Hamilton's attack on Jefferson—Washington's healing Admonitions—Replies of the two Secretaries—Continued hostility to the Excise Law—Washington's Preclamation—Renewed effort to allay the Discord in his Cabinet.	•

GH
133
19 7
144

CHAPTER XX.

CHAPTER XXI.

Washington ealled to Mount Vernon—The case of the Little Sarah comes up in his absence—Governor Millin determined to prevent her Departure—Rage of Genet —Jefferson urges Detention of the Privateer until the President's return—Evasive assurance of Genet—Distrust of Hamilton and Knox—Washington returns to Philadelphia—A Cabinet Council—Its determination communicated to Genet—The Vessel sails in defiance of it—Formation of the Democratic Society—The recall of Genet determined on—The Ribald Lampoon—Washington's Outburst. 159

CHAPTER XXII.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Neutrality endangered by Great Britain—Her ill-advised Measures—Detention of Vessels bound for France—Impressment of American Scamen—Persistence in holding the Western Posts—Congress assembles in December—The President's opening Speech—His Censure of Genet—The Vice President's allusion to it— The Administration in a Minority in the House—Proclamation of Neutrality sustained—Jefferson's Report—Retires from the Cabinet—His parting Rebuke to Genet—His Character of Washington CHAPTER XXIV.

Debate on Jefferson's Report on Commercial Intercourse—A Naval Force proposed for the Protection of Commerce against Piratical Cruisers—Further instances of the Audacity of Genet—His Recall—Arrival of his Successor—Irritation excited by British Captures of American Vessels—Preparations for Defence—Embargo—Intense excitement at "British Spoliations"—Partisans of France in the Ascendant—A Chance for accommodating Difficulties—Jefferson's Hopes of Reconciliation—The War Cry uppermost—Washington determines to send a special Envoy to the British Government—Jefferson's Letter to Tench Coxe	85
CHAPTER XXV.
James Monroe appointed Minister to France in place of Gouverneur Morris re- called—His Reception—Pennsylvania Insurrection—Proclamation of Washing- ton—Perseverance of the Insurgents—Second Proclamation—The President pro- ceeds against them—General Morgan—Lawrence Lewis—Washington arranges a Plan of Military Operations—Returns to Philadelphia, leaving Lee in command —Submission of the Insurgents—The President's Letter on the Subject to Jay, Minister at London	96
CHAPTER XXVI.
Washington's Denunciation of self-created Societies—Not relished by Congress— Campaign of General Wayne—Hamilton reports a Plan for the Redemption of the Public Debt—And retires from his Post as Secretary of the Treasury—Is succeeded by Oliver Wolcott—Resignation of Knox—Succeeded by Timothy Pickering—Close of the Session	0 5
CHAPTER XXVII.
Washington's Anxiety about the Progress of the Negotiation with England—Jay's Treaty arrives for Ratification—Predisposition to Condemn—Return of Jay— Adet succeeds Fauchet as Minister from France—The Treaty laid before the Senate—Ratified with a Qualification—A Novel Question—Popular Discontent —Abstract of the Treaty published—Violent Opposition to it—Washington re- solved to ratify—His Resolution suspended—Goes to Mount Vernon—Reply to an Address from Boston—Increasing Clamor	12
CHAPTER XXVIII.
Washington recalled to the Scat of Government—Conduct of Randolph brought in Question—Treaty Signed—Resignation of Randolph—His Correspondence with Washington—Unlimited Disclosure permitted—Appearance of his Vindication—

Pickering transferred to the Department of State-M'Henry appointed Secretary

CHAPTER XXIX.	PAGE
Meeting of Congress—Washington's Official Summary of the Events of the Year-Cordial Response of the Senate—Partial Domur of the House—Washington' Position and Feelings with regard to England, as shown by himself—Mr. Ade presents the Colors of France—The Treaty returned—Proceedings thereupon—Thomas Pinckney resigns as Minister at London—Rufus King appointed in hi Place—Washington's View of the Political Campaign—Jefferson's Fears of an at tempt to sow Dissension between him and Washington—Mr. Monroe recalled and C. C. Pinckney appointed in his Stead—Resentful Policy of France	s t s
· CHAPTER XXX.
Washington's Farewell Address—Meets the two Houses of Congress for the las Time—His Speech—Replies of the Senate and House—Mr. Giles—Andrew Jack son—Offensive Publication of the French Minister—John Adams declared President—Washington's Letter to Knox on the eve of his Retirement—The spurious Letters—His Farewell Dinner—John Adams takes the Oath of Office—Greetings of Washington at the Close of the Ceremony.	- - 5
CHAPTER XXXI.
Washington at Monnt Vernon—Influx of strange Faces—Lawrence Lewis—Miss Nelly Custis—Washington's Counsel in Love Matters—A Romantic Episode— Return of George Washington Lafayette	-
CHAPTER XXXII.
Parting Address of the French Directory to Mr. Monroe—The new American Minister ordered to leave the Republic—Congress convened—Measures of Defence recommended—Washington's Concern—Appointment of three Envoys Extraordinary—Doubts their Success—Hears of an old Companion in Arms—The three Ministers and Talleyrand—Their degrading Treatment—Threatened War with France—Washington appointed Commander-in-chief—Arranges for three Major Generals—Knox aggrieved.	• • • • •
CHAPTER XXXIII.
Washington taxed anew with the Cares of Office—Correspondence with Lafayette—A Marriage at Mount Vernon—Appointment of a Minister to the French Republic—Washington's Surprise—His Activity on his Estate—I'olitical Anxieties—Concern about the Army.	•
CHAPTER XXXIV.
Washington digests a Plan for the Management of his Estate—His Views in regard to a Military Academy—Letter to Hamilton—His last Hours—The Funeral—The Will—Its Provisions in regard to his Slaves—Proceedings of Congress on his Death—Conclusion.	- 3
APPENDIX.
I.—Portraits of Washington.  II.—Washington's Farowell Address.  III.—Proceedings of Congress in consequence of the Death of Washington.  IV.—Washington's Will.	83 0 85 2

LIFE OF WASHINGTON.

CHAPTER I.

THE NEW GOVERNMENT—DOMESTIC AND FOREIGN RELATIONS—WASHINGTON'S

ANXIOUS POSITION—ITS DIFFICULTIES—WITHOUT CABINET OR CONSTITUTIONAL ADVISERS—JOHN JAY—HAMILTON—HIS EFFICIENT SUPPORT OF THE CONSTITUTION AND THEORETIC DOUBTS—JAMES MADISON—KNOX—HIS CHARACTERISTICS.

The eyes of the world were upon Washington at the commencement of his administration. He had won laurels in the field: would they continue to flourish in the cabinet? His position was surrounded by difficulties. Inexperienced in the duties of civil administration, he was to inaugurate a new and untried system of government, composed of States and people, as yet a mere experiment, to which some looked forward with buoyant confidence,—many with doubt and apprehension.

He had moreover a high-spirited people to manage, in whom a jealous passion for freedom and independence had been strength ened by war, and who might bear with impatience even the restraints of self-imposed government. The constitution which he was to inaugurate had met with vehement opposition, when under discussion in the General and State governments. Only three States, New Jersey, Delaware and Georgia, had accepted it unanimously. Several of the most important States had adopted it by a mere majority; five of them under an expressed expectation of specified amendments or modifications; while two States, Rhode Island and North Carolina, still stood aloof.

It is true, the irritation produced by the conflict of opinions in the general and State conventions, had, in a great measure, subsided; but circumstances might occur to inflame it anew. A diversity of opinions still existed concerning the new government. Some feared that it would have too little control over the individual States; that the political connection would prove too weak to preserve order and prevent civil strife; others, that it would be too strong for their separate independence, and would tend toward consolidation and despotism.

The very extent of the country he was called upon to govern, ten times larger than that of any previous republic, must have pressed with weight upon Washington's mind. It presented to the Atlantic a front of fifteen hundred miles, divided into individual States, differing in the forms of their local governments, differing from each other in interests, in territorial magnitudes, in amount of population, in manners, soils, climates and productions, and the characteristics of their several peoples.

Beyond the Alleghanies extended regions almost boundless, as yet for the most part wild and uncultivated, the asylum of roving Indians and restless, discontented white men. Vast tracts, however, were rapidly being peopled, and would soon be portioned into sections requiring local governments. The great natural outlet for the exportation of the products of this region of inexhaustible fertility, was the Mississippi; but Spain opposed a barrier to the free navigation of this river. Here was peculiar cause of solicitude. Before leaving Mount Vernon, Washington had heard that the hardy yeomanry of the far West were becoming impatient of this barrier, and indignant at the apparent indifference of Congress to their prayers for its removal. He had heard, moreover, that British emissaries were fostering these discontents, sowing the seeds of disaffection, and offering assistance to the Western people to seize on the city of New Orleans and fortify the mouth of the Mississippi; while, on the other hand, the Spanish authorities at New Orleans were represented as intriguing to effect a separation of the Western territory from the Union, with a view or hope of attaching it to the dominion of Spain.

Great Britain, too, was giving grounds for territorial solicitude in these distant quarters by retaining possession of the Western posts, the surrender of which had been stipulated by treaty. Her plea was, that debts due to British subjects, for which by the same treaty the United States were bound, remained unpaid. This the Americans alleged was a mere pretext; the real object of their retention being the monopoly of the fur trade; and to the mischievous influence exercised by these posts over the Indian tribes, was attributed much of the hostile disposition manifested by the latter along the Western frontier.

While these brooding causes of anxiety existed at home, the foreign commerce of the Union was on a most unsatisfactory footing, and required prompt and thorough attention. It was subject to maraud, even by the corsairs of Algiers, Tunis and Tripoli, who captured American merchant vessels and carried their crews into slavery; no treaty having yet been made with any of the Barbary powers excepting Morocco.

To complete the perplexities which beset the new government, the finances of the country were in a lamentable state. There was no money in the treasury. The efforts of the former government to pay or fund its debts, had failed; there was universal state of indebtedness, foreign and domestic, and public credit was prostrate.

Such was the condition of affairs when Washington entered upon his new field of action. He was painfully aware of the difficulties and dangers of an undertaking in which past history and past experience afforded no precedents. "I walk, as it were, on untrodden ground," said he; "so many untoward circumstances may intervene in such a new and critical situation, that I shall feel an insuperable diffidence in my own abilities. I feel, in the execution of my arduous office, how much I shall stand in need of the countenance and aid of every friend to myself, of every friend to the revolution, and of every lover of good government."*

As yet he was without the support of constitutional advisers, the departments under the new government not being organized; he could turn with confidence, however, for counsel in an emergency to John Jay, who still remained at the head of affairs, where he had been placed in 1784. He was sure of sympathy also in his old comrade, General Knox, who continued to officiate as secretary of war; while the affairs of the treasury were managed by a board, consisting of Samuel Osgood, Walter Livingston, and Arthur Lee. Among the personal friends not in office, to whom Washington felt that he could safely have recourse for aid in initiating the new government, was Alexander Hamilton. It is true, many had their doubts of his sincere adhesion to it. In the convention in Philadelphia, he had held up the British constitution as a model to be approached as nearly as possible, by blending some of the advantages of monarchy with the republican form. The form finally adopted was too low-toned for him; he feared it might prove feeble and inefficient; but he voted for it as the best attainable, advocated it in the State convention in New York, and in a series of essays, collectively known as The Federalist, written conjunctively with Madison and Jay; and it was mainly through his efforts as a speaker and a writer that the constitution was ultimately accept-Still many considered him at heart a monarchist, and suspected him of being secretly bent upon bringing the existing government to the monarchical form. In this they did him in-He still continued, it is true, to doubt whether the republican theory would admit of a vigorous execution of the laws, but was clear that it ought to be adhered to as long as there was any chance for its success. "The idea of a perfect equality of political rights among the citizens, exclusive of all permanent or hereditary distinctions," had not hitherto, he thought, from an imperfect structure of the government, had a fair trial, and "was of a nature to engage the good wishes of every good man, whatever might be his theoretic doubts;" the endeavor, therefore, in his opinion, ought to be to give it "a better chance of success by a government more capable of energy and order."*

* Letter to Edward Rutledge.

Washington, who knew and appreciated Hamilton's character, had implicit confidence in his sincerity, and felt assured that he would loyally aid in carrying into effect the constitution as adopted.

* Hamilton's Writings, iv. 273.

It was a great satisfaction to Washington, on looking round for reliable advisers at this moment, to see James Madison among the members of Congress: Madison, who had been with him in the convention, who had labored in The Federalist, and whose talents as a speaker, and calm, dispassionate reasoner; whose extensive information and legislative experience destined him to be a leader in the House. Highly appreciating his intellectual and moral worth, Washington would often turn to him for counsel. "I am troublesome," would he say "but you must excuse me; ascribe it to friendship and confidence."

Knox, of whose sure sympathies we have spoken, was in strong contrast with the cool statesman just mentioned. His mind was ardent and active, his imagination vivid, as was his language. He had abandoned the military garb, but still maintained his soldier-like air. He was large in person, above the middle stature, with a full face, radiant and benignant, bespeaking his open, buoyant, generous nature. He had a sonorous voice, and sometimes talked rather grandly, flourishing his cane to give effect to his periods.* He was cordially appreciated by Washington, who had experienced his prompt and efficient talent in time of war, had considered him one of the ablest officers of the revolution, and now looked to him as an energetic man of business, capable of giving practical advice in time of peace, and cherished for him that strong feeling of ancient companionship in toil and danger, which bound the veterans of the revolution firmly to each other.

* See Sullivan's Letters on Public Characters, p. 84.

CHAPTER II.

WASHINGTON'S PRIVACY BESET WITH VISITS OF COMPLIMENT—QUERIES AS TO THE PROPER LINE OF CONDUCT IN HIS PRESIDENTIAL INTERCOURSE—OPINIONS OF ADAMS AND HAMILTON—JEFFERSON AS TO THE AUTHORS OF THE MINOR FORMS AND CEREMONIES—HIS WHIMSICAL ANECDOTE OF THE FIRST LEVEE—INAUGURAL BALL.

The moment the inauguration was over, Washington was made to perceive that he was no longer master of himself or of his home. "By the time I had done breakfast," writes he, "and thence till dinner, and afterwards till bed-time, I could not get rid of the ceremony of one visit before I had to attend to another. In a word, I had no leisure to read or to answer the despatches that were pouring in upon me from all quarters."

How was he to be protected from these intrusions? In his former capacity as commander-in-chief of the armies, his head-quarters had been guarded by sentinels and military etiquette; but what was to guard the privacy of a popular chief magistrate?

What, too, were to be the forms and ceremonials to be adopted in the presidential mansion, that would maintain the lignity of his station, allow him time for the performance of its official duties, and yet be in harmony with the temper and feel ings of the people, and the prevalent notions of equality and republican simplicity?

The conflict of opinions that had already occurred as to the form and title by which the President was to be addressed, had made him aware that every step at the outset of his career would be subject to scrutiny, perhaps cavil, and might hereafter be cited as a precedent. Looking round, therefore, upon the able men at hand, such as Adams, Hamilton, Jay, Madison, he propounded to them a series of questions as to a line of conduct proper for him to observe.

In regard to visitors, for instance, would not one day in the week be sufficient for visits of compliment, and one hour every morning (at eight o'clock for example) for visits on business?

Might he make social visits to acquaintances and public characters, not as President, but as private individual? And then as to his table—under the preceding form of government, the Presidents of Cengress had been accustomed to give dinners twice a week to large parties of both sexes, and invitations had been so indiscriminate, that every one who could get introduced to the President, conceived he had a right to be invited to his board. The table was, therefore, always crowded, and with a mixed company; yet, as it was in the nature of things impracticable to invite everybody, as many offences were given as if no table had been kept.

Washington was resolved not to give general entertainments of this kind, but in his series of questions he asked whether he might not invite, informally or otherwise, six, eight, or ten official characters, including in rotation the members of both Houses of Congress, to dine with him on the days fixed for receiving company, without exciting clamors in the rest of the community.

Adams in his reply talked of chamberlains, aides-de-camp, masters of ceremony, and evinced a high idea of the presidential office and the state with which it ought to be maintained. "The office," writes he, "by its legal authority defined in the constitution, has no equal in the world excepting those only which are held by crowned heads; nor is the royal authority in all cases to be compared to it. The royal office in Poland is a mere shadow in comparison with it. The Dogeship in Venice, and the Stadtholdership in Holland, are not so much-neither dignity nor authority can be supported in human minds, collected into nations or any great numbers, without a splendor and majesty in some degree proportioned to them. The sending and receiving ambassadors is one of the most splendid and important prerogatives of sovereigns, absolute or limited, and this in our constitution is wholly in the President. If the state and pomp essential to this great department are not in a good degree preserved, it will be in vain for America to hope for consideration with foreign powers."*

According to Mr. Adams, two days in a week would be required for the receipt of visits of compliment. Persons desiring an interview with the President should make application through the minister of state. In every case the name, quality or business of the visitor should be communicated to a chamber lain or gentleman in waiting, who should judge whom to admit, and whom to exclude. The time for receiving visits ought to be limited, as for example, from eight to nine or ten o'clock, lest the whole morning be taken up. The President might invite what official character, members of Congress, strangers, or eitizens of distinction he pleased, in small parties without exciting clamors; but this should always be done without formality. His private life should be at his own discretion, as to giving or receiving informal visits among friends and acquaintances; but in his official character, he should have no intercourse with society but upon public business, or at his levees. Adams, in the conclusion of his reply, ingenuously confessed that his long residence abroad might have impressed him with views of things incompatible with the present temper and feelings of his fellowcitizens; and Jefferson seems to have been heartily of the same opinion, for speaking of Adams in his anas, he observes that "the glare of royalty and nobility, during his mission to England, had made him believe their fascination a necessary ingredient in government." * Hamilton, in his reply, while he con sidered it a primary object for the public good, that the dignity of the presidential office should be supported, advised that care should be taken to avoid so high a tone in the demeanor of the occupant, as to shock the prevalent notions of equality.

* Life and Works of John Adams, vol. viii. p. 493.
VOL. v.—1*

The President, he thought, should hold a levee at a fixed time once a week, remain half an hour, converse cursorily on indifferent subjects with such persons as invited his attention, and then retire.

He should accept no invitations, give formal entertainments twice, or at most, four times in the year; if twice, on the anniversaries of the declaration of independence and of his inauguration: if four times, the anniversary of the treaty of alliance with

* Jefferson's Works, ix. 97.

France and that of the definitive treaty with Great Britain to be added.

The President on levee days to give informal invitations to family dinners; not more than six or eight to be asked at a time, and the civility to be confined essentially to members of the legislature, and other official characters:—the President neve. to remain long at table.

The heads of departments should, of course, have access to the President on business. Foreign ministers of some descriptions should also be entitled to it. "In Europe, I am informed," writes Hamilton, "ambassadors only have direct access to the chief magistrate. Something very near what prevails there would, in my opinion, be right. The distinction of rank between diplomatic characters requires attention, and the door of access ought not to be too wide to that class of persons. I have thought that the members of the Senate should also have a right of individual access on matters relative to the public administration. In England and France peers of the realm have this right. We have none such in this country, but I believe it will be satisfactory to the people to know that there is some body of men in the state who have a right of continual communication with the President. It will be considered a safeguard against secret combinations to deceive him. " *

The reason alleged by Hamilton for giving the Senate this privilege, and not the Representatives, was, that in the constitution "the Senate are coupled with the President in certain executive functions, treaties, and appointments. This makes them in a degree his constitutional counsellors, and gives them a peculiar claim to the right of access."

* Hamilton's Works, vol. iv., p. 3.

These are the only written replies that we have before us of Washington's advisers on this subject.

Colonel Humphreys, formerly one of Washington's aides-decamp, and recently secretary of Jefferson's legation at Paris, way at present an inmate in the presidential mansion. General Know was frequently there; to these Jefferson assures us, on Wash ington's authority, was assigned the task of considering and prescribing the minor forms and ceremonies, the etiquette, in fact, to be observed on public occasions. Some of the forms proposed by them, he adds, were adopted. Others were so highly strained that Washington absolutely rejected them. Knox was no favorite with Jefferson, who had no sympathies with the veteran soldier, and styles him "a man of parade," and Humphreys, he appears to think captivated by the ceremonials of He gives a whimsical account, which he had at foreign courts. a second or third hand, of the first levee. An ante-chamber and presence room were provided, and, when those who were to pay their court were assembled, the President set out, preceded by Humphreys. After passing through the ante-chamber, the door of the inner room was thrown open, and Humphreys entered first, calling out with a loud voice, "The President of the United States." The President was so much disconcerted with it that he did not recover in the whole time of the levee, and, when the company was gone, he said to Humphreys, "Well, you have taken me in once, but by ----, you shall never take me in a second time."

This anecdote is to be taken with caution, for Jefferson was disposed to receive any report that placed the forms adopted in a disparaging point of view.

He gives in his Ana a still more whimsical account on the authority of "a Mr. Brown," of the ceremonials at an inauguration ball at which Washington and Mrs. Washington presided in almost regal style. As it has been proved to be entirely incorrect, we have not deemed it worthy an insertion. A splendid ball was in fact given at the Assembly Rooms, and another by the French Minister, the Count de Moustier, at both of which Washington was present and danced; but Mrs. Washington was not at either of them, not being yet arrived, and on neither occasion were any mock regal ceremonials observed. Washington was the last man that would have tolerated any thing of the kind. Our next chapter will show the almost casual manner in which the simple formalities of his republican court originated.

CHAPTER III.

JOURNEY OF MRS. WASHINGTON TO NEW YORK—HONORS PAID HER IN HER PROGRESS—RECEPTIONS AT THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT—THE PRESIDENT'S EQUIPAGE.

On the 17th of May, Mrs. Washington, accompanied by her grandchildren, Eleanor Custis and George Washington Parke Custis, set out from Mount Vernon in her travelling carriage with a small escort of horse, to join her husband at the seat of government; as she had been accustomed to join him at head-quarters, in the intervals of his revolutionary campaigns.

Throughout the journey she was greeted with public testimonials of respect and affection. As she approached Philadelphia, the President of Pennsylvania and other of the State functionaries, with a number of the principal inhabitants of both sexes, came forth to meet her, and she was attended into the city by a numerous cavalcade, and welcomed with the ringing of bells and firing of cannon.

Similar honors were paid her in her progress through New Jersey. At Elizabethtown she alighted at the residence of Governor Livingston, whither Washington came from New York to meet her. They proceeded thence by water, in the same splendid barge in which the general had been conveyed for his inauguration. It was manned, as on that occasion, by thirteen master pilots, arrayed in white, and had several persons of note on board. There was a salute of thirteen guns as the barge passed the Battery at New York. The landing took place at Peck Slip, not far from the presidential residence, amid the enthusiastic cheers of an immense multitude.

On the following day, Washington gave a demi-official dinner, of which Mr. Wingate, a senator from New Hampshire, who was present, writes as follows: "The guests consisted of the Vice President, the foreign ministers, the heads of departments, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the Senators from New Hampshire and Georgia, the then most Northern and Southern States. It was the least showy dinner that I ever saw at the President's table, and the company was not large. As there was no chaplain present, the President himself said a very short grace as he was sitting down. After dinner and dessert were finished, one glass of wine was passed around the table, and no toast. The President rose, and all the company retired to the drawing-room, from which the guests departed, as every one chose, without ceremony."

On the evening of the following day, (Friday, May 29th,) Mrs. Washington had a general reception, which was attended by all that was distinguished in official and fashionable society. Henceforward there were similar receptions every Friday evening, from eight to ten o'clock, to which the families of all persons of respectability, native or foreign, had access, without special invitation; and at which the President was always present. These assemblages were as free from ostentation and restraint as the ordinary receptions of polite society; yet the reader will find they were soon subject to invidious misrepresentation; and cavilled at as "court-like levees" and "queenly drawing-rooms."

Beside these public receptions, the presidential family had its private circle of social intimacy; the President, moreover, was always ready to receive visits by appointment on public or private business.

The sanctity and quiet of Sunday were strictly observed by Washington. He attended church in the morning, and passed the afternoon alone in his closet. No visitors were admitted, excepting perhaps an intimate friend in the evening, which was spent by him in the bosom of his family.

The household establishment was conducted on an ample and dignified scale, but without ostentation, and regulated with characteristic system and exactness. Samuel Fraunces, once landlord of the city tavern in Broad street, where Washington took leave of the officers of the army in 1783, was now Steward of the presidential household. He was required to render a weekly statement of receipts and expenditures, and warned to guard against waste and extravagance. "We are happy to inform our readers," says Fenno's Gazette of the day, "that the President is determined to pursue that system of regularity and economy in his household which has always marked his public and private life."

In regard to the deportment of Washington at this juncture, we have been informed by one who had opportunities of seeing him, that he still retained a military air of command which had become habitual to him. At levees and drawing-rooms he sometimes appeared cold and distant, but this was attributed by those who best knew him to the novelty of his position and his innate diffidence, which seemed to increase with the light which his re nown shed about him. Though reserved at times, his reserve had nothing repulsive in it, and in social intercourse, where he was no longer under the eye of critical supervision, soon gave way to soldier-like frankness and cordiality. At all times his courtesy was genuine and benignant, and totally free from that stately condescension sometimes mistaken for politeness. Nothing we are told could surpass the noble grace with which he presided at a ceremonial dinner; kindly attentive to all his guests, but particularly attentive to put those at their ease and in a favorable light, who appeared to be most diffident.

As to Mrs. Washington, those who really knew her at the time, speak of her as free from pretension or affectation; undazzled by her position, and discharging its duties with the truthful simplicity and real good-breeding of one accustomed to preside over a hospitable mansion in the "Ancient Dominion." She had her husband's predilection for private life. In a letter to an intimate she writes: "It is owing to the kindness of our numerous friends in all quarters that my new and unwished for situation is not indeed a burden to me. When I was much younger, I should probably have enjoyed the innocent gayeties of life as much as most persons of my age; but I had long since placed all the prospects of my future worldly happiness in the still enjoyments of the fireside at Mount Vernon.

"I little thought, when the war was finished, that any circumstances could possibly happen, which would call the General into public life again. I had anticipated that from that moment we should be suffered to grow old together in solitude and tranquillity. That was the first and dearest wish of my heart."

* Quoted in a note to Sparks, p. 422.

Much has been said of Washington's equipages, when at New York, and of his having four, and sometimes six horses before his carriage, with servants and outriders in rich livery. Such style we would premise was usual at the time both in England and the colonies, and had been occasionally maintained by the continental dignitaries, and by Governors of the several States, prior to the adoption of the new constitution. It was still prevalent, we are told, among the wealthy planters of the South, and sometimes adopted by 'merchant princes' and rich individuals at the North. It does not appear, however, that Washington ever indulged in it through ostentation. When he repaired to the Hall of Congress, at his inauguration, he was drawn by a single pair of horses in a chariot presented for the occasion, on the panels of which were emblazoned the arms of the United States.

Beside this modest equipage there was the ample family carriage which had been brought from Virginia. To this four horses were put when the family drove out into the country, the state of the roads in those days requiring it. For the same reason six horses were put to the same vehicle on journeys, and once on a state occasion. If there was any thing he was likely to take a pride in, it was horses; he was passionately fond of that noble animal, and mention is occasionally made of four white horses of great beauty which he owned while in New York.* His favorite exercise when the weather permitted it was on horseback, accompanied by one or more of the members of his household, and he was noted always for being admirably mounted, and one of the best horsemen of his day.

* For some of these particulars concerning Washington we are indebted to the late William A. Duer, president of Columbia College, who in his boyhood was frequently in the President's house, playmate of young Custis, Mrs. Washington's grandson.

Washington's Residences in New York.—The first Presidential residence was at the junction of Pearl and Cherry streets, Franklin square. At the

end of about a year, the President removed to the house on the west side of Broadway, near Rector street, afterwards known as Bunker's Mansion House. Both of these buildings have disappeared, in the course of modern "improvements."

CHAPTER IV.

ALARMING ILLNESS OF THE PRESIDENT—THE SENATE REJECTS ONE OF HIS NOMINATIONS—HIS SENSITIVE VINDICATION OF IT—DEATH OF HIS MOTHER—HER CHARACTER—THE EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENTS INSTITUTED—SELECTION OF OFFICERS FOR THE TREASURY AND WAR DEPARTMENTS—HAMILTON INSTRUCTED TO REPORT A FINANCIAL PLAN AT THE NEXT SESSION OF CONGRESS—ARRANGEMENT OF THE JUDICIARY DEPARTMENT—EDMUND RANDULPH—ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS—ITS CHARACTER, BY FISHER AMES.

As soon as Washington could command sufficient leisure to inspect papers and documents, he called unofficially upon the heads of departments to furnish him with such reports in writing as would aid him in gaining a distinct idea of the state of public affairs. For this purpose also he had recourse to the public archives, and proceeded to make notes of the foreign official correspondence from the close of the war until his inauguration. He was interrupted in his task by a virulent attack of anthrax, which for several days threatened mortification. The knowledge of his perilous condition spread alarm through the community; he, however, remained unagitated. His medical adviser was Dr. Samuel Bard, of New York, an excellent physician and most estimable man, who attended him with unremitting assiduity. Being alone one day with the doctor, Washington regarded him steadily, and asked his candid opinion as to the probable result of his case. "Do not flatter me with vain hopes," said he, with placid firmness; "I am not afraid to die, and therefore can bear the worst." The doctor expressed hope, but owned that he had apprehensions. "Whether to-night or twenty years hence, makes no difference," observed Washington. "I know that I am in the hands of a good Providence." His sufferings were intense, and his recovery was slow. For six weeks he was obliged to lie on his right side; but after a time he had his carriage so contrived that he could extend himself at full length in it, and take exercise in the open air.

While rendered morbidly sensitive by bodily pain, he suffered deep annoyance from having one of his earliest nominations, that of Benjamin Fishburn, for the place of naval officer of the port of Savannah, rejected by the Senate.

If there was any thing in which Washington was scrupulously conscientious, it was in the exercise of the nominating power; scrutinizing the fitness of candidates; their comparative claims on account of public services and sacrifices, and with regard to the equable distribution of offices among the States; in all which he governed himself solely by considerations for the public good. He was especially scrupulous where his own friends and connections were concerned. "So far as I know my own mind," would he say, "I would not be in the remotest degree influenced in making nominations by motives arising from the ties of family or blood."

He was principally hurt in the present instance by the want of deference on the part of the Senate, in assigning no reason for rejecting his nomination of Mr. Fishburn. He acquiesced, however, in the rejection, and forthwith sent in the name of another candidate; but at the same time administered a temperate and dignified rebuke. "Whatever may have been the reasons which induced your dissent," writes he to the Senate, "I am persuaded that they were such as you deemed sufficient. Permit me to submit to your consideration, whether, on occasions where the propriety of nominations appears questionable to you, it would not be expedient to communicate that circumstance to me, and thereby avail yourselves of the information which led me to make them, and which I would with pleasure lay before you. Probably my reasons for nominating Mr. Fishburn may tend to show that such a mode of proceeding, in such cases, might be useful. I will therefore detail them."

He then proceeds to state, that Colonel Fishburn had served under his own eye with reputation as an officer and a gentleman; had distinguished himself at the storming of Stony Point; had repeatedly been elected to the Assembly of Georgia as a representative from Chatham County, in which Savannah was situated; had been elected by the officers of the militia of that county Lieutenant Colonel of the militia of the district; had been member of the Executive Council of the State, and president of the same; had been appointed by the council to an office which he actually held, in the port of Savannah, nearly similar to that for which Washington had nominated him.

"It appeared therefore to me," adds Washington, "that Mr. Fishburn must have enjoyed the confidence of the militia officers in order to have been elected to a military rank—the confidence of the freemen, to have been elected to the Assembly—the confidence of the Assembly to have been selected for the Council, and the confidence of the Council to have been appointed collector of the port of Savannah."

We give this letter in some detail, as relating to the only instance in which a nomination by Washington was rejected. The reasons of the Senate for rejecting it do not appear. They seem to have felt his rebuke, for the nomination last made by him was instantly confirmed.

While yet in a state of convalescence, Washington received intelligence of the death of his mother. The event, which took place at Fredericksburg in Virginia, on the 25th of August, was not unexpected; she was eighty-two years of age, and had for some time been sinking under an incurable malady, so that when he last parted with her he had apprehended that it was a final separation. Still he was deeply affected by the intelligence; consoling himself, however, with the reflection that "Heaven had spared her to an age beyond which few attain; had favored her with the full enjoyment of her mental faculties, and as much bodily health as usually falls to the lot of fourscore."

Mrs. Mary Washington is represented as a woman of strong plain sense, strict integrity, and an inflexible spirit of command. We have mentioned the exemplary manner in which she, a lone widow, had trained her little flock in their childhood. The deference for her, then instilled into their minds, continued throughout life, and was manifested by Washington when at the height of his power and reputation. Eminently practical, she had thwarted his military aspirings when he was about to seek honor in the British navy. During his early and disastrous campaigns on the frontier, she would often shake her head and exclaim, "Ah, George had better have staid at home and cultivated his farm." Even his ultimate success and renown had never dazzled, however much they may have gratified her. When others congratulated her, and were enthusiastic in his praise, she listened in silence, and would temperately reply that he had been a good son, and she believed he had done his duty as a man.

Hitherto the new government had not been properly organized, but its several duties had been performed by the officers who had them in charge at the time of Washington's inauguration. It was not until the 10th of September that laws were passed instituting a department of Foreign Affairs (afterwards termed Department of State), a Treasury department, and a department of War, and fixing their respective salaries. On the following day, Washington nominated General Knox to the department of War, the duties of which that officer had hitherto discharged.

The post of Secretary of the Treasury was one of far greater importance at the present moment. It was a time of financial exigency. As yet no statistical account of the country had been attempted; its fiscal resources were wholly unknown; its credit was almost annihilated, for it was obliged to borrow money even to pay the interest of its debts.

We have already quoted the language held by Washington in regard to this state of things before he had assumed the direction of affairs. "My endeavors shall be unremittingly exerted, even at the hazard of former fame, or present popularity to extricate my country from the embarrassments in which it is entangled through want of credit."

Under all these circumstances, and to carry out these views, he needed an able and zealous coadjutor in the Treasury department; one equally solicitous with himself on the points in question, and more prepared upon them by financial studies and investigations than he could pretend to be. Such a person he considered Alexander Hamilton, whom he nominated as Secretary of the Treasury, and whose qualifications for the office were so well understood by the Senate that his nomination was confirmed on the same day on which it was made.

Within a few days after Hamilton's appointment, the House of Representatives (Sept. 21), acting upon the policy so ardently desired by Washington, passed a resolution, declaring their opinion of the high importance to the honor and prosperity of the United States, that an adequate provision should be made for the support of public credit; and instructing the Secretary of the Treasury to prepare a plan for the purpose, and report it at their next session.

The arrangement of the Judicial department was one of Washington's earliest cares. On the 27th of September, he wrote unofficially to Edmund Randolph, of Virginia, informing him that he had nominated him Attorney-General of the United States, and would be highly gratified with his acceptance of that office. Some old recollections of the camp and of the early days of the revolution, may have been at the bottom of this good-will, for Randolph had joined the army at Cambridge in 1775, and acted for a time as aide-de-camp to Washington in place of Mifflin. He had since gained experience in legislative business as member of Congress, from 1779 to 1782, Governor of Virginia in 1786, and delegate to the convention in 1787. In the discussions of that celebrated body, he had been opposed to a single executive, professing to discern in the unity of that power the "feetus of monarchy;" and preferring an executive consisting of three; whereas, in the opinion of others, this plural executive would be "a kind of Cerberus with three heads." Like Madison, he had disapproved of the equality of suffrage in the Senate, and been, moreover, of opinion, that the President should be ineligible to office after a given number of years.

Dissatisfied with some of the provisions of the constitution as adopted, he had refused to sign it; but had afterwards supported it in the State convention of Virginia. As we recollect him many years afterwards, his appearance and address were dignified and prepossessing; he had an expressive countenance, a beaming eye, and somewhat of the ore rotundo in speaking. Randolph promptly accepted the nomination, but did not take his seat in the cabinet until some months after Knox and Hamilton.

By the judicial system established for the Federal Government, the Supreme Court of the United States was to be composed of a chief justice and five associate judges. There were to be district courts with a judge in each State, and circuit courts held by an associate judge and a district judge. John Jay, of New York, received the appointment of Chief Justice, and in a letter enclosing his commission, Washington expressed the singular pleasure he felt in addressing him "as the head of that department which must be considered as the keystone of our political fabric."

Jay's associate judges were, John Rutledge of South Carolina, James Wilson of Pennsylvania, William Cushing of Massachusetts, John Blair of Virginia, and James Iredell of North Carolina. Washington had originally nominated to one of the judgeships his former military secretary, Robert Harrison, familiarly known as the old Secretary; but he preferred the office of Chancellor of Maryland, recently conferred upon him.

On the 29th of September, Congress adjourned to the first Monday in January, after an arduous session, in which many important questions had been discussed, and powers organized and distributed. The actual Congress was inferior in eloquence and shining talent to the first Congress of the revolution; but it possessed men well fitted for the momentous work before them; sober, solid, upright, and well informed. An admirable harmony had prevailed between the legislature and the executive, and the utmost decorum had reigned over the public deliberations.

Fisher Ames, then a young man, who had acquired a brilliant reputation in Massachusetts by the eloquence with which he had championed the new constitution in the convention of that important State, and who had recently been elected to Congress, speaks of it in the following terms: "I have never seen an assembly where so little art was used. If they wish to carry a point, it is directly declared and justified. Its merits and defects are plainly stated, not without sophistry and prejudice, but without management. * * * There is no intrigue, no caucusing, little of clanning together, little asperity in debate. or personal bitterness out of the House."

CHAPTER V.

THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE STILL WITHOUT A READ—SKETCH OF JEFFERSON'S CHARACTER AND OPINIONS—DEEPLY IMMERSED IN FRENCH POLITICS AT PARIS—GOUVERNEUR MORRIS ABROAD—CONTRAST OF HIS AND JEFFERSON'S VIEWS ON THE FRENCH CRISIS—NEWS OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION IN AMERICA—POPULAR EXCITEMENT—WASHINGTON'S CAUTIOUS OPINION ON THE SUBJECT—HAMILTON'S APPREHENSIVE VIEW—JEFFERSON OFFERED A PLACE IN THE CABINET AS SECRETARY OF STATE.

The cabinet was still incomplete; the department of foreign affairs, or rather of State, as it was now called, was yet to be supplied with a head. John Jay would have received the nomination had he not preferred the bench. Washington next thought of Thomas Jefferson, who had so long filled the post of Minister Plenipotentiary at the Court of Versailles, but had recently solicited and obtained permission to return, for a few months, to the United States for the purpose of placing his children among their friends in their native country, and of arranging his private affairs, which had suffered from his protracted absence. And here we will venture a few particulars concerning this eminent statesman, introductory to the important influence he was to exercise on national affairs.

His political principles as a democratic republican, had been avowed at an early date in his draft of the Declaration of Independence, and subsequently in the successful war which he made upon the old cavalier traditions of his native State; its laws of entails and primogeniture, and its church establishment, a war which broke down the hereditary fortunes and hereditary families, and put an end to the hereditary aristocracy of the Ancient Dominion.

Being sent to Paris as minister plenipotentiary a year or two after the peace, he arrived there, as he says, "when the American revolution seemed to have awakened the thinking part of the French nation from the sleep of despotism in which they had been sunk."

Carrying with him his republican principles and zeal, his house became the resort of Lafayette and others of the French officers who had served in the American revolution. They were mostly, he said, young men little shackled by habits and prejudices, and had come back with new ideas and new impressions which began to be disseminated by the press and in conversation. Politics became the theme of all societies, male and female, and a very extensive and zealous party was formed which acquired the appellation of the Patriot Party, who, sensible of the abuses of the government under which they lived, sighed for occasions of reforming it. This party, writes Jefferson, "comprehended all the honesty of the kingdom sufficiently at leisure to think, the men of letters, the easy bourgeois, the young nobility, partly from reflection, partly from the mode; for these sentiments became matter of mode, and, as such, united most of the young women to the party."

By this party Jefferson was considered high authority from his republican principles and experience, and his advice was con tinually sought in the great effort for political reform which was daily growing stronger and stronger. His absence in Europe had prevented his taking part in the debates on the new constitution, but he had exercised his influence through his correspondence. "I expressed freely," writes he, "in letters to my friends, and most particularly to Mr. Madison and General Washington, my approbations and objections." What those approbations and objections were appears by the following citations, which are important to be kept in mind as illustrating his after conduct:

"I approved, from the first moment, of the great mass of what is in the new constitution, the consolidation of the government, the organization into executive, legislative, and judiciary; the subdivision of the legislature, the happy compromise of the interests between the great and little States, by the different manner of voting in the different Houses, the voting by persons instead of States, the qualified negative on laws given to the executive, which, however, I should have liked better if associated with the judiciary also, as in New York, and the power of taxation: what I disapproved from the first moment, was the want of a Bill of rights to guard liberty against the legislative as well as against the executive branches of the government; that is to say, to secure freedom of religion, freedom of the press, freedom from monopolies, freedom from unlawful imprisonment, freedom from a permanent military, and a trial by jury in all cases determinable by the laws of the land."

What he greatly objected to was the perpetual re-eligibility of the President. "This, I fear," said he, "will make that an office for life, first, and then hereditary. I was much an enemy to monarchies before I came to Europe, and am ten thousand times more so since I have seen what they are. There is scarcely an evil known in these countries which may not be traced to their king as its source, nor a good which is not derived from the small fibres of republicanism existing among them. I can further say, with safety, there is not a crowned head in Europe whose talents or merits would entitle him to be elected a vestryman by the people of any parish in America."*

* Autobiography, Works, i. 79.

In short, such a horror had he imbibed of kingly rule, that, in a familiar letter to Colonel Humphreys, who had been his Secretary of Legation, he gives it as the duty of our young Republic "to besiege the throne of heaven with eternal prayers to extirpate from creation this class of human lions, tigers, and mammoths, called kings, from whom, let him perish who does not say, 'Good Lord, deliver us!'"

Jefferson's political fervor occasionally tended to exaltation, but it was genuine. In his excited state he regarded with quick suspicion every thing in his own country that appeared to him to have a regal tendency. His sensitiveness had been awakened by the debates in Congress as to the title to be given to the President, whether or not he should be addressed as His Highness; and had been relieved by the decision that he was to have no title but that of office, viz.: President of the United States. "I hope," said Jefferson, "the terms of Excellency, Honor, Worship, Esquire, forever disappear from among us from that moment. I wish that of Mr. would follow them." †

* Letter to Washington May 2, 1788. Works ii. 375.

† Letter to Mr. Carmichael, Works iii. 88.

With regard to the re-eligibility of the President, his anxiety was quieted for the present, by the elevation of Washington to the Presidential chair. "Since the thing [re-eligibility] is established," writes he, "I would wish it not to be altered during the life-time of our great leader, whose executive talents are superior to those, I believe, of any man in the world, and who, alone, by the authority of his name, and the confidence reposed in his perfect integrity, is fully qualified to put the new government so under way as to secure it against the efforts of opposition. But, having derived from our error all the good there was in it, I hope we shall correct it the moment we can no longer have the same name at the helm."*

Jefferson, at the time of which we are speaking, was, as we have shown, deeply immersed in French politics and interested in the success of the "Patriot Party," in its efforts to reform the country. His despatches to government all proved how strongly he was on the side of the people. "He considered a successful reformation in France as insuring a general reformation throughout Europe, and the resurrection to a new life of their people now ground to dust by the abuses of the governing powers."

Gouverneur Morris, who was at that time in Paris on private business, gives a different view of the state of things produced by the Patriot party. Morris had arrived in Paris on the 3d of February, 1789, furnished by Washington with letters of introduction to persons in England, France, and Holland. His brilliant talents, ready conversational powers, easy confidence in society, and striking aristocratical appearance, had given him great currency, especially in the court party and among the ancient nobility; in which direction his tastes most inclined. He had renewed his intimacy with Lafayette, whom he found "full of politics," but "too republican for the genius of his country."

* Letter to F. Hopkinson, Works ii. 587.

In a letter to the French Minister, residing in New York, Morris writes on the 23d of February, 1789: "Your nation is now in a most important crisis, and the great question—shall we hereafter have a constitution, or shall will continue to be law—employs every mind and agitates every heart in France. Even voluptuousness itself rises from its couch of roses and looks anxiously abroad at the busy scene to which nothing can now be indifferent.

"Your nobles, your clergy, your people, are all in motion for the elections. A spirit which has been dormant for generations starts up and stares about, ignorant of the means of obtaining, but ardently desirous to possess its object—consequently active, energetic, easily led, but also easily, too easily, misled. Such is the instinctive love of freedom which now grows warm in the bosom of your country."

When the king was constrained by the popular voice to convene the States General at Versailles for the purpose of discussing measures of reform, Jefferson was a constant attendant upon the debates of that body. "I was much acquainted with the leading patriots of the Assembly," writes he, "being from a country which had successfully passed through similar reform; they were disposed to my acquaintance and had some confidence in me. I urged most strenuously an immediate compromise to secure what the government was now ready to yield, and trust to future occasions for what might still be wanting."

The "leading patriots" here spoken of, were chiefly the vol. v.—2*

7

deputies from Brittany, who, with others, formed an association called the Breton Club, to watch the matters debated in Parliament and shape the course of affairs.

Morris, speaking of Jefferson at this juncture, observes, "He and I differ in our system of politics. He, with all the leaders of liberty here, is desirous of annihilating distinctions of order. How far such views may be right, respecting mankind in general, is, I think, extremely problematical. But, with respect to this nation, I am sure it is wrong and cannot eventuate well."*

Jefferson, in a letter to Thomas Paine (July 11), giving some account of the proceedings of the States General, observes, "The National Assembly (for that is the name they take) having shown, through every stage of these transactions, a coolness, wisdom, and resolution to set fire to the four corners of the kingdom, and to perish with it themselves rather than to relinquish an iota from their plan of a total change of government, are now in complete and undisputed possession of the Sovereignty. 'The executive and aristocracy are at their feet; the mass of the nation, the mass of the clergy, and the army are with them; they have prostrated the old government and are now beginning to build one from the foundation."

It was but three days after the date of this letter that the people of Paris rose in their might, plundered the arsenal of the Invalides, furnished themselves with arms, stormed the Bastille; and a national guard, formed of the Bourgeoisie, with the tricolored cockade for an emblem and Lafayette as commander, took Paris under its protection.

Information of these events was given at midnight to the king

* Life of G. Morris, i. 313.

at Versailles by Rochefoucauld-Liancourt. "It is a revolt," exclaimed the king. "Sire," replied Liancourt, "it is a revolution!"

Jefferson, in his dispatches to government, spoke with admiration of the conduct of the people throughout the violent scenes which accompanied this popular convulsion. "There was a severity of honesty observed, of which no example has been known. Bags of money, offered on various occasions through fear or guilt, have been uniformly refused by the mobs. The churches are now occupied in singing 'De Profundis' and 'Requiems' for the repose of the souls of the brave and valiant citizens who have sealed, with their blood, the liberty of the nation. * * We cannot suppose this paroxysm confined to Paris alone; the whole country must pass successively through it, and happy if they get through as soon and as well as Paris has done."*

Gouverneur Morris, writing on the same subject to Washington, on the 31st of July, observes: "You may consider the revolution as complete. The authority of the king and of the nobility is completely subdued; yet I tremble for the constitution. They have all the romantic spirit and all the romantic ideas of government, which, happily for America, we were cured of before it was too late."

The foregoing brief notices of affairs in revolutionary France, and of the feelings with which they were viewed by American statesmen resident there, will be found of service in illustrating subsequent events in the United States.

The first news of the revolution reached America in October, and was hailed by the great mass of the people with enthusiasm. Washington, in reply to his old comrade in arms, the Count de Rochambeau, observes: "I am persuaded I express the sentiments of my fellow-citizens, when I offer an earnest prayer that it may terminate in the permanent honor and happiness of your government and people."

* Letter to John Jay. Jefferson's Works, iii. 80.

But, in a reply of the same date (13th Oct.) to Gouverneur Morris, he shows that his circumspect and cautious spirit was not to be hurried away by popular excitement. "The revolution which has been effected in France," writes he, "is of so wonderful a nature, that the mind can hardly realize the fact. If it ends as our last accounts to the 1st of August predict, that nation will be the most powerful and happy in Europe; but I fear, though it has gone triumphantly through the first paroxysm, it is not the last it has to encounter before matters are finally settled. word, the revolution is of too great a magnitude to be effected in so short a space, and with the loss of so little blood. The mortification of the king, the intrigues of the queen, and the discontent of the princes and noblesse, will foment divisions, if possible, in the National Assembly; and they will, unquestionably, avail themselves of every faux pas in the formation of the constitution, if they do not give a more open, active opposition. In addition to these, the licentiousness of the people on one hand, and sanguinary punishments on the other, will alarm the best disposed friends to the measure, and contribute not a little to the overthrow of their object. Great temperance, firmness, and foresight are necessary in the movements of that body. To forbear running from one extreme to another, is no easy matter: and should this be the case, rocks and shelves, not visible at present, may wreck the vessel and give a higher-toned despotism than the one which existed before."*

Hamilton, too, regarded the recent events in France with a mixture of pleasure and apprehension. In a letter to Lafayette he writes: "As a friend to mankind and to liberty, I rejoice in the efforts which you are making to establish it, while I fear much for the final success of the attempts, for the fate of those who are engaged in it, and for the danger, in case of success, of innovations greater than will consist with the real felicity of your I dread disagreements among those who are nation. now united, about the nature of your constitution; I dread the vehement character of your people, whom, I fear, you may find it more easy to bring on, than to keep within proper bounds after you have put them in motion. I dread the interested refractoriness of your nobles, who cannot all be gratified, and who may be unwilling to submit to the requisite sacrifices. And I dread the reveries of your philosophic politicians, who appear in the moment to have great influence, and who, being mere speculatists, may aim at more refinement than suits either with human nature or the composition of your nation.";

The opposite views and feelings of Hamilton and Jefferson, with regard to the French revolution, are the more interesting, as these eminent statesmen were soon to be brought face to face in the cabinet, the policy of which would be greatly influenced by French affairs; for it was at this time that Washington wrote to Jefferson, offering him the situation of Secretary of State, but forbearing to nominate a successor to his post at the Court of Versailles, until he should be informed of his determination.

* Writings of Washington, x. 39.

+ Hamilton's Works, v. 440.

CHAPTER VI.

WASHINGTON'S JOURNEY THROUGH THE EASTERN STATES—JOHN HANCOCK—CLASHING BETWEEN THE CIVIL AND MUNICIPAL AUTHORITIES ON THE PRESIDENT'S ENTRY INTO BOSTON—A CONTEST OF ETIQUETTE—WASHING—TON'S ACCOUNT OF HIS ENTRY—HIS RECEPTION—A NEW PUNCTILIO—ADDRESS OF THE CINCINNATI SOCIETY—RETURN TO NEW YORK.

At the time of writing the letter to Jefferson, offering him the department of State, Washington was on the eve of a journey through the Eastern States, with a view, as he said, to observe the situation of the country, and with a hope of perfectly reestablishing his health, which a series of indispositions had much impaired. Having made all his arrangements, and left the papers appertaining to the office of Foreign Affairs under the temporary superintendence of Mr. Jay, he set out from New York on the 15th of October, travelling in his carriage with four horses, and accompanied by his official secretary, Major Jackson, and his private secretary, Mr. Lear. Though averse from public parade, he could not but be deeply affected and gratified at every step by the manifestations of a people's love. Wherever he came, all labor was suspended; business neglected. The bells were rung, the guns were fired; there were civic processions and military parades and triumphal arches, and all classes poured forth to testify, in every possible manner, their gratitude and affection for the man whom they hailed as the Father of his country; and well did his noble stature, his dignified demeanor, his matured years, and his benevolent aspect, suit that venerable appellation.

On the 22d, just after entering Massachusetts, he was met by an express from the Governor of the State (the Hon. John Hancock), inviting him to make his quarters at his house while he should remain in Boston, and announcing to him that he had issued orders for proper escorts to attend him, and that the troops with the gentlemen of the Council would receive him at Cambridge and wait on him to town.

Washington, in a courteous reply, declined the Governor's invitation to his residence, having resolved, he said, on leaving New York, to accept of no invitations of the kind while on his journey, through an unwillingness to give trouble to private families. He had accordingly instructed a friend to engage lodgings for him during his stay in Boston. He was highly sensible, he observed, of the honors intended him; but, could his wishes prevail, he would desire to visit the metropolis without any parade or extraordinary ceremony. It was never Washington's good fortune, on occasions of the kind, to have his modest inclinations consulted; in the present instance they were little in accord with the habits and notions of the Governor, who, accustomed to fill public stations and preside at public assemblies, which he did with the punctilio of the old school, was strictly observant of every thing appertaining to official rank and dignity. Governor Hancock was now about fifty-two years of age, tall and thin, of a commanding deportment and graceful manner, though stooping a little and much afflicted with the gout. He was really hospitable, which his ample wealth enabled him to be, and was no doubt desirous of having Washington as a guest under his roof, but resolved, at all events, to give him a signal reception as the guest of the State over which he presided. Now it so happened that the "select men," or municipal authorities of Boston, had also made arrangements for receiving the President in their civic domain, and in so doing had proceeded without consulting the Governor; as might have been expected, some clashing of rival plans was the result.

In pursuance of the Governor's arrangement, the militia, with General Brooks at their head, and Mr. Samuel Adams, the Lieutenant Governor, at the head of the Executive Council, met Washington at Cambridge, and escorted him with great ceremony to town. Being arrived at the grand entrance, which is over what is called "The Neck," the Lieutenant Governor and the Executive Council were brought to a sudden halt by observing the municipal authorities drawn up in their carriages, in formal array, to pay civic honors to the city's guest. Here ensued a great question of etiquette. The Executive Council insisted on the right of the Governor, as chief of the State, to receive and welcome its guest, at the entrance of its capital. "He should have met him at the boundary of the State over which he presides," replied the others; "and there have welcomed him to the hospitalities of the commonwealth. When the President is about to enter the town, it is the delegated right of the municipal au thorities thereof to receive and bid him welcome."

The contending parties remained drawn up resolutely in their carriages, while aides-de-camp and marshals were posting to and fro between them, carrying on a kind of diplomatic parley.

In the mean time the President, and Major Jackson, his secretary, had mounted on horseback, and were waiting on the Neck to be conducted into the town. The day was unusually cold and murky. Washington became chilled and impatient, and when informed of the cause of the detention, "Is there no other avenue into the town?" demanded he of Major Jackson. He was, in fact, on the point of wheeling about, when word was brought that the controversy was over, and that he would be received by the municipal authorities.

We give his own account of the succeeding part of the ceremony. "At the entrance, I was welcomed by the select men in a body. Then following the Lieutenant Governor and Council in the order we came from Cambridge (preceded by the town corps, very handsomely dressed), we passed through the citizens, classed in their different professions, and under their own banners, till we came to the State House."

The streets, the doors, the windows, the housetops, were crowded with well-dressed people of both sexes. "He was on horseback," says an observer, "dressed in his old continental uniform, with his hat off. He did not bow to the spectators as he passed, but sat on his horse with a calm, dignified air. He dismounted at the old State House, now City Hall,* and came out on a temporary balcony at the west end; a long procession passed before him, whose salutations he occasionally returned. These and other ceremonials being over, the Lieutenant Governor and Council, accompanied by the Vice President, conducted Washington to his lodgings, where they took leave of him." And now he is doomed to the annoyance of a new question of etiquette. He had previously accepted the invitation of Governor Hancock to an informal dinner, but had expected that that functionary would wait upon him as soon as he should arrive; instead of which he received a message from him, pleading that he was too much indisposed to do so. Washington distrusted the sincerity of the apology. He had been given to understand that the Governor wished to evade paying the first visit, conceiving that, as Governor of a State, and within the bounds of that State, the point of etiquette made it proper that he should receive the first visit, even from the President of the United States. Washington determined to resist this pretension; he therefore excused himself from the informal dinner, and dined at his lodgings, where the Vice President favored him with his company.

* This was written some years ago.

The next day the Governor, on consultation with his friends, was persuaded to waive the point of etiquette, and sent "his best respects to the President," informing him that, if at home and at leisure, he would do himself the honor to visit him in half an hour, intimating that he would have done it sooner had his health permitted, and that it was not without hazard to his health that he did it now.

The following was Washington's reply, the last sentence of which almost savors of irony:

"Sunday, 26th October, 1 o'clock.

"The President of the United States presents his best respects to the Governor, and has the honor to inform him that he shall be home till two o'clock.

"The President need not express the pleasure it will give him to see the Governor; but at the same time, he most earnestly begs that the Governor will not hazard his health on the occasion."

From Washington's diary we find that the Governor found strength to pay the litigated visit within the specified time—though, according to one authority, he went enveloped in red baize and was borne, in the arms of servants, into the house.*

It does not appear that any harm resulted from the hazard to which the Governor exposed himself. At all events, the hydra etiquette was silenced and every thing went on pleasantly and decorously throughout the remainder of Washington's sojourn in Boston.

Various addresses were made to him in the course of his visit, but none that reached his heart more directly than that of his old companions in arms, the Cincinnati Society of Massachusetts, who hailed him as "their glorious leader in war, their illustrious example in peace."

"Dear, indeed," said he, in reply, "is the occasion which restores an intercourse with my associates in prosperous and adverse fortune; and enhanced are the triumphs of peace participated with those whose virtue and valor so largely contributed to procure them. To that virtue and valor your country has confessed her obligations. Be mine the grateful task to add to the testimony of a connection which it was my pride to own in the field, and is now my happiness to acknowledge in the enjoyments of peace and freedom."

After remaining in Boston for a week, fêted in the most hospitable manner, he appointed eight o'clock, on Thursday the 29th, for his departure. The appointed time arrived, but not the escort; whereupon, punctual himself, and fearing, perhaps, to be detained by some new question of etiquette, he departed without them, and was overtaken by them on the road.

* Sullivan's Letters on Public Characters, p. 15.

His journey eastward terminated at Portsmouth, whence he turned his face homeward by a middle route through the interior of the country to Hartford, and thence to New York, where he arrived between two and three o'clock on the 13th of November.

CHAPTER VII.

COL, JOHN TRUMBULL—MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON FROM LAFAYETTE—JEFFER-SON'S EMBARKATION FOR AMERICA—WASHINGTON FORWARDS HIS COMMIS-SION AS SECRETARY OF STATE—HIS ACCEPTANCE.

Nor long after Washington's return from his eastern tour, Colonel John Trumbull, his aide-de-camp in former days, now an historical painter of eminence, arrived from Europe, where he had been successfully prosecuting his art and preparing for his grand pictures, illustrative of our revolutionary history. At Mr. Jefferson's house in Paris, he had been enabled to sketch from the life the portraits of several of the French officers who had been present at the capture of Cornwallis, and were now among the popular agitators of France. He had renewed his military acquaintance with Lafayette; witnessed the outbreak of the revolution; the storming of the Bastille; and attended the Marquis on one occasion, when the latter succeeded in calming the riotons excesses of a mob, principally workmen, in the Faubourg St. Antoine.

Trumbull brought an especial message from Lafayette. The Marquis had been anxious that Washington should know the state of affairs in France, and the progress and prospects of the momentous cause in which he was engaged, but, in the hurry of occupation, had not time to write with the necessary detail; finding, however, that Trumbull was soon to depart for the United States, he invited him to breakfast with him at an early hour and alone, for the express purpose of explaining matters to him frankly and fully, to be communicated by him to Washington, immediately on his arrival in America.

We give the Colonel's report of Lafayette's conversation, as he has recorded it in his autobiography.

"You have witnessed the surface of things," said the Marquis; "it is for me to explain the interior. The object which is aimed at by the Duke de Rochefoucauld, M. Condorcet, myself, and some others, who consider ourselves leaders, is to obtain from France a constitution nearly resembling that of England, which we regard as the most perfect model of government hitherto known. To accomplish this, it is necessary to diminish, very essentially, the power of the king; but our object is to retain the throne, in great majesty, as the first branch of the legislative power, but retrenching its executive power in one point, which, though very important in the British crown, we think is needless here. The peerage of France is already so numerous, that we would take from our king the right of creating new peers, except in cases where old families may become extinct. To all this, the king (who is one of the best of men, and sincerely desirous of the happiness of his people) most freely and cordially consents.

"We wish a House of Peers with powers of legislation similar to that of England, restricted in number to one hundred members, to be elected by the whole body from among themselves, in the same manner as the Scotch peers are in the British Parliament.

* * We wish, as the third branch of the legislative body, a House of Representatives, chosen by the great body of the people from among themselves, by such a ratio as shall not make the House too numerous; and this branch of our project meets unanimous applause. * * * Unhappily, there is one powerful and wicked man, who, I fear, will destroy this beautiful fabric of human happiness—the Duke of Orleans. He does not, indeed, possess talent to carry into execution a great project, but he possesses immense wealth, and France abounds in marketable talents. Every city and town has young men eminent for abilities, particularly in the law—ardent in character, eloquent, ambitious of distinction, but poor. These are the instruments which the Duke may command by money, and they will do his bidding. His hatred of the royal family can be satiated only by their ruin; his ambition, probably, leads him to aspire to the throne.

"You saw the other day, in the mob, men who were called les Marseillois, les patriots par excellence. You saw them particularly active and audacious in stimulating the discontented artisans and laborers, who composed the great mass of the mob, to acts of violence and ferocity; these men are, in truth, desperadoes, assassins from the south of France, familiar with murder, robbery, and every atrocious crime, who have been brought up to Paris by the money of the Duke, for the very purpose in which you saw them employed, of mingling in all mobs, and exciting the passions of the people to frenzy.

"This is the first act of the drama. The second will be to influence the elections, to fill the approaching Assembly with ardent, inexperienced, desperate, ambitious young men, who, instead of proceeding to discuss calmly the details of the plan of which I have given you the general outline, and to carry it quietly into operation, will, under disguise of zeal for the people, and abhorrence of the aristocrats, drive every measure to extremity, for the purpose of throwing the affairs of the nation into utter confu sion, when the master spirit may accomplish his ultimate purpose."*

Such was the report of affairs in France which Lafayette transmitted by Trumbull to Washington. It was not long after this conversation of the Colonel with the Marquis that, the sittings of the National Assembly being transferred from Versailles to Paris, the Breton club fixed itself on the site of the convent of Jacobins; threw open its doors to the public and soon, under the appellation of the Jacobin Club, exercised the baleful influence in public affairs, which Lafayette apprehended.

Washington had listened with profound attention to the report rendered by Trumbull. In the course of a subsequent conversation the latter informed him that Mr. Jefferson had embarked for America, and, it was probable, had already landed at Norfolk in Virginia. Washington immediately forwarded to him his commission as Secretary of State, requesting to know his determination on the subject.

Jefferson, in reply, expressed himself flattered by the nomination, but dubious of his being equal to its extensive and various duties, while, on the other hand, he felt familiar with the duties of his present office. "But it is not for an individual to choose his path," said he. "You are to marshal us as may best be for the public good. * * * Signify to me, by another line, your ultimate wish, and I shall conform to it cordially. If it should be to remain in New York, my chief comfort will be to work under your eye; my only shelter the authority of your name and the wisdom of measures to be dictated by you and implicitly executed by me."*

* Trumbull's Autobiography, 151.

Washington, in answer, informed him that he considered the successful administration of the general government an object of almost infinite consequence to the present and future happiness of the citizens of the United States; that he regarded the office of Secretary for the department of State very important, and that he knew of no person who, in his judgment, could better execute the duties of it than himself.†

Jefferson accordingly accepted the nomination, but observed that the matters which had called him home, would probably prevent his setting out for New York before the month of March.

CHAPTER VIII.

REASSEMBLING OF CONGRESS—FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE COUNTRY—ITS

DEET AT HOME AND ABROAD—DEETS OF THE STATES—HAMILTON'S REPORT—OPPOSITION TO IT—DR. STUART'S WARNING LETTER TO WASHINGTON

—HIS REPLY—JEFFERSON'S ARRIVAL AT THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT—NEW YORK AT THAT PERIOD—JEFFERSON APPREHENDS MONARCHICAL DESIGNS.

Congress reassembled on the 4th of January (1790), but a quorum of the two Houses was not present until the 8th, when the session was opened by Washington in form, with an address delivered before them in the Senate chamber.*

* As the degree of state with which the session was opened was subsequently a matter of comment, we extract from Washington's diary his own account of it, premising that the regulations were devised by General Knox and Colonel Humphreys.

"Friday 8th, according to appointment, at 11 o'clock, I set out for the City Hall in my coach, preceded by Colonel Humphreys and Major Jackson in uniform (on my two white horses), and followed by Messrs. Lear and Nelson in my chariot, and Mr. Lewis, on horseback, following them. In their rear was the Chief Justice of the United States and Secretaries of the Treasury and War Departments in their respective carriages, and in the order they are named. At the outer door of the Hall, I was met by the doorkeepers of the Senate and House and conducted to the door of the Senate chamber, and passing from thence to the chair through the Senate on the right and House of Representatives on the left, I took my seat. The gen-

Among the most important objects suggested in the address for the deliberation of Congress, were provisions for national defence; provisions for facilitating intercourse with foreign nations, and defraying the expenses of diplomatic agents; laws for the naturalization of foreigners; uniformity in the currency, weights, and measures of the United States; facilities for the advancement of commerce, agriculture, and manufactures; attention to the post-office and post-roads; measures for the promotion of science and literature, and for the support of public credit.

This last object was the one which Washington had more immediately at heart. The government was now organized, apparently, to the satisfaction of all parties; but its efficiency would essentially depend on the success of a measure which Washington had pledged himself to institute, and which was yet to be tried; namely, a system of finance adapted to revive the national credit, and place the public debt in a condition to be paid off. The credit of the country was at a low ebb. The confederacy, by its articles, had the power of contracting debts for a national object, but no control over the means of payment. Thirteen independent legislatures could grant or withhold the means. The government was then a government under governments—the States had more power than Congress. At the close of the war the debt amounted to forty-two millions of dollars; tlemen who attended me followed and took their stands behind the senators; the whole rising as I entered. After being seated, at which time the members of both Houses also sat, I rose (as they also did), and made my speech, delivering one copy to the President of the Senate and another to the Speaker of the House of Representatives—after which, and being a few moments seated, I retired, bowing on each side to the assembly (who stood) as I passed, and descending to the lower hall attended as before, I returned with them to my house."

but so little had the country been able to fulfil its engagements, owing to the want of a sovereign legislature having the sole and exclusive power of laying duties upon imports, and thus providing adequate resources, that the debt had swollen, through arrears of interest, to upwards of fifty-four millions. Of this amount nearly eight millions were due to France, between three and four millions to private lenders in Holland, and about two hundred and fifty thousand in Spain; making, altogether, nearly twelve millions due abroad. The debt contracted at home amounted to upwards of forty-two millions, and was due, originally, to officers and soldiers of the revolutionary war, who had risked their lives for the cause; farmers who had furnished supplies for the public service, or whose property had been assumed for it; capitalists who, in critical periods of the war, had adventured their fortunes in support of their country's independence. The domestic debt, therefore, could not have had a more sacred and patriotic origin; but, in the long delay of national justice, the paper which represented these outstanding claims, had sunk to less than a sixth of its nominal value, and the larger portion of it had been parted with at that depreciated rate, either in the course of trade, or to speculative purchasers, who were willing to take the risk of eventual payment, however little their confidence seemed to be warranted. at the time, by the pecuniary condition and prospects of the country,

The debt, when thus transferred, lost its commanding appeal to patriotic sympathy; but remained as obligatory in the eye of justice. In public newspapers, however, and in private circles, the propriety of a discrimination between the assignees and the original holders of the public securities, was freely discussed. Beside the foreign and domestic debt of the federal government, the States, individually, were involved in liabilities contracted for the common cause, to an aggregate amount of about twenty-five millions of dollars; of which, more than one-half was due from three of them; Massachusetts and South Carolina each owing more than five millions, and Virginia more than three and a half. The reputation and the well-being of the government were, therefore, at stake upon the issue of some plan to retrieve the national credit, and establish it upon a firm and secure foundation.

The Secretary of the Treasury (Mr. Hamilton), it will be remembered, had been directed by Congress to prepare such a plan during its recess. In the one thus prepared, he asserted, what none were disposed to question, the propriety of paying the foreign debt according to its terms. He asserted, also, the equal validity of the original claims of the American creditors of the government; whether those creditors were the original holders of its certificates or subsequent purchasers of them at a depreciated value. The idea of any distinction between them, which some were inclined to advance, he repudiated as alike unjust, impolitic, and impracticable. He urged, moreover, the assumption, by the general government, of the separate debts of the States, contracted for the common cause, and that a like provision should be made for their payment as for the payment of those of the Union. They were all contracted in the struggle for national independence, not for the independence of any particular part. No more money would be required for their discharge as federal, than as State debts. Money could be raised more readily by the federal government than by the States, and all clashing and jealousy between State and federal debtors would thus be prevented. A reason, also, which, no doubt, had great weight with him, though he did not bring it under consideration in his report, for fear, probably, of offending the jealousy of State sovereignty, dormant, but not extinct, was, that it would tend to unite the States financially, as they were united politically, and strengthen the central government by rallying capitalists around it; subjecting them to its influence, and rendering them agents of its will. He recommended, therefore, that the entire mass of debt be funded; the Union made responsible for it, and taxes imposed for its liquidation. He suggested, moreover, the expediency, for the greater security of the debt and punctuality in the payment of interest, that the domestic creditors submit to an abatement of accruing interest.

The plan was reported to the House by Mr. Hamilton, the 14th of January, but did not undergo consideration until the 8th of February, when it was opposed with great earnestness, especially the point of assuming the State debts, as tending to consolidation, as giving an undue influence to the general government, and as being of doubtful constitutionality. This financial union of the States was reprobated, not only on the floor of Congress, but in different parts of the Union, as fraught with political evil. The Northern and Eastern States generally favored the plan, as did also South Carolina, but Virginia manifested a determined opposition. The measure, however, passed, in Committee of the Whole, on the 9th of March, by a vote of 31 to 26.

The funding of the State debts was supposed to benefit, materially, the Northern States, in which was the entire capital of the country; yet, South Carolina voted for the assumption. The fact is, opinions were honestly divided on the subject. The great majority were aiming to do their duty—to do what was right; but their disagreement was the result of real difficulties incident to the intricate and complicated problem with which they had to deal.

A letter from Washington's monitory friend, Dr. Stuart of Virginia (dated March 15th), spoke with alarm of the jealous belief growing up in that quarter, that the Northern and Eastern States were combining to pursue their own exclusive interests. Many, he observed, who had heretofore been warm supporters of the government, were changing their sentiments, from a conviction of the impracticability of union with States whose interests were so dissimilar.

Washington had little sympathy with these sectional jealousies; and the noble language in which he rebukes them, cannot be too largely cited. "I am sorry," observes he, "such jealousies as you speak of, should be gaining ground and poisoning the minds of the southern people; but, admit the fact which is alleged as the cause of them, and give it full scope, does it amount to more than was known to every man of information before, at, and since the adoption of the Constitution? Was it not always believed that there are some points which peculiarly interest the Eastern States? And did any one who reads human nature, and more especially the character of the eastern people, conceive that they would not pursue them steadily, by a combination of their force? Are there not other points which equally concern the Southern If these States are less tenacious of their interest, or if, while the Eastern move in a solid phalanx to effect their views, the Southern are always divided, which of the two is most to be blamed? That there is a diversity of interests in the Union, none has denied. That this is the case, also, in every State, is equally certain; and that it even extends to the counties of individual States, can be as readily proved. Instance the southern and northern parts of Virginia, the upper and lower parts of South Carolina. Have not the interests of these always been at variance? Witness the county of Fairfax. Have not the interests of the people of that county varied, or the inhabitants been taught to believe so? These are well-known truths, and yet it did not follow that separation was to result from the disagreement.

"To constitute a dispute, there must be two parties. To understand it well, both parties, and all the circumstances must be fully heard; and, to accommodate differences, temper and mutual forbearance are requisite. Common danger brought the States into confederacy, and on their union our safety and importance depend. A spirit of accommodation was the basis of the present Constitution. Can it be expected, then, that the southern or eastern parts of the empire will succeed in all their measures? Certainly not. But I will readily grant that more points will be carried by the latter than the former, and for the reason which has been mentioned; namely, that in all great national questions, they move in unison, whilst the others are divided. But I ask again, which is most blameworthy, those who see and will steadily pursue their interest, or those who cannot see, or seeing, will not act wisely? And I will ask another question, of the highest magnitude in my mind, to wit, if the Eastern and Northern States are dangerous in union, will they be less so in separation? If self-interest is their governing principle, will it forsake them, or be restrained by such an event? I hardly think it would. Then, independently of other considerations, what would Virginia, and such other States as might be inclined to join her, gain by a separation? Would they not, most unquestionably, be the weaker party?"

At this juncture (March 21st), when Virginian discontents were daily gaining strength, Mr. Jefferson arrived in New York to undertake the duties of the Department of State. We have shown his strong antipathies, while in Paris, to every thing of a monarchical or aristocratical tendency; he had just been in Virginia, where the forms and ceremonials adopted at the seat of our government, were subjects of cavil and sneer; where it was reported that Washington affected a monarchical style in his official intercourse, that he held court-like levees, and Mrs. Washington "queenly drawing-rooms," at which none but the aristocracy were admitted, that the manners of both were haughty, and their personal habits reserved and exclusive.

The impressions thus made on Jefferson's mind, received a deeper stamp on his arrival in New York, from conversations with his friend Madison, in the course of which the latter observed, that "the satellites and sycophants which surrounded Washington, had wound up the ceremonials of the government to a pitch of stateliness which nothing but his personal character could have supported, and which no character after him could ever maintain."

Thus prepossessed and premonished, Jefferson looked round him with an apprehensive eye, and appears to have seen something to startle him at every turn. We give, from his private correspondence, his own account of his impressions. "Being fresh from the French revolution, while in its first and pure stage, and, consequently, somewhat whetted up in my own republican principles, I found a state of things in the general society of the place, which I could not have supposed possible. The revolution I had left, and that we had just gone through in the recent change of our own government, being the common topics of conversation, I was astonished to find the general prevalence of monarchical sentiments, insomuch, that in maintaining those of republicanism, I had always the whole company on my hands, never searcely finding among them a single co-advocate in that argument, unless some old member of Congress happened to be present. The furthest that any one would go in support of the republican features of our new government, would be to say, 'the present constitution is well as a beginning, and may be allowed a fair trial, but it is, in fact, only a stepping stone to something better.'"

This picture, given under excitement and with preconceived notions, is probably over-charged; but, allowing it to be true, we can hardly wonder at it, viewed in connection with the place and times. New York, during the session of Congress, was the gathering place of politicians of every party. The revolution of France had made the forms of government once more the universal topics of conversation, and revived the conflict of opinions on the subject. As yet, the history of the world had furnished no favorable examples of popular government; speculative writers in England had contended that no government more popular than their own, was consistent with either internal tranquillity, the supremacy of the laws, or a great extent of empire. Our republic was ten times larger than any that had yet existed. Jay, one of the calmest thinkers of the Union, expressed himself dubiously on the subject.

"Whether any people could long govern themselves in an equal, uniform, and orderly manner, was a question of vital importance to the cause of liberty, but a question which, like others, whose solution depends on facts, could only be determined by experience—now, as yet, there had been very few opportunities of making the experiment."

Alexander Hamilton, though pledged and sincerely disposed to support the republican form, with regard to our country, preferred, theoretically, a monarchical form; and, being frank of speech, and, as Gouverneur Morris writes, "prone to mount his hobby," may have spoken openly in favor of that form as suitable to France; and as his admirers took their creed from him, opinions of the kind may have been uttered pretty freely at dinner-tables. These, however, which so much surprised and shocked Mr. Jefferson, were probably merely speculative opinions, broached in unguarded hours, with no sinister design, by men who had no thought of paving the way for a monarchy. They made, however, a deep impression on his apprehensive mind, which sank deeper and deeper until it became a fixed opinion with him, that there was the desire and aim of a large party, of which Hamilton was the leader, to give a regal form to the government.

CHAPTER IX.

THE ASSUMPTION OF THE STATE DEBTS DISCUSSED—WASHINGTON IN FAVOR—A MAJORITY OF TWO AGAINST IT—HAMILTON'S APPEAL TO JEFFERSON ON THE SUBJECT—THE LATTER ARRANGES FOR A COMPROMISE—HIS ACCOUNT OF IT—ADJUSTMENT ABOUT THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT—ASSUMPTION CARRIED—TREATY OF PEACE WITH THE CREEKS—CAVILLINGS ABOUT PRESIDENTIAL ETIQUETTE—WASHINGTON'S DEFENCE—ADJOURNMENT OF CONGRESS —FANCIED HARMONY OF THE CABINET—JEFFERSON SUSPECTS HAMILTON OF FINESSE IN PROCURING HIS AGENCY IN THE ASSUMPTION.

The question of the assumption of the State debts was resumed in Congress on the 29th of March, on a motion to commit, which was carried by a majority of two; the five members from North Carolina (now a State of the Union) who were strongly opposed to assumption, having taken their seats and reversed the position of parties on the question. An angry and intemperate discussion was revived, much to the chagrin of Washington, who was concerned for the dignity of Congress; and who considered the assumption of the State debts, under proper restrictions and scrutiny into accounts, to be just and reasonable.* On the 12th of April, when the question to commit was taken, there was a majority of two against the assumption.

* See letter to David Stuart, Writings, x. p. 98.

On the 26th the House was discharged, for the present, from proceeding on so much of the report as related to the assumption. Jefferson, who had arrived in New York in the midst of what he terms "this bitter and angry contest," had taken no concern in it; being, as he says, "a stranger to the ground, a stranger to the actors in it, so long absent as to have lost all familiarity with the subject, and to be unaware of its object." We give his own account of an earnest effort made by Hamilton, who, he says, was "in despair," to resuscitate, through his influence, his almost hopeless project. "As I was going to the President's one day, I met him [Hamilton] in the street. He walked me backwards and forwards before the President's door for half an hour. He painted pathetically the temper into which the legislature had been wrought; the disgust of those who were called the creditor States; the danger of the secession of their members, and the separation of the States. He observed that the members of the administration ought to act in concert; that though this question was not of my department, yet a common duty should make it a common concern; that the President was the centre on which all administrative questions ultimately rested, and that all of us should rally around him, and support, with joint efforts, measures approved by him; and that the question having been lost by a small majority only, it was probable that an appeal from me to the judgment and discretion of some of my friends, might effect a change in the vote, and the machine of government, now suspended, might be again set into motion. I told him that I was really a stranger to the whole subject; that not having yet informed myself of the system of finance adopted, I knew not how far this was a necessary sequence; that undoubtedly, if its rejection endangered a dissolution of our Union at this incipient stage, I should deem that the most unfortunate of all consequences, to avert which all partial and temporary evils should be yielded. I proposed to him, however, to dine with me the next day, and I would invite another friend or two, bring them into conference together, and I thought it impossible that reasonable men, consulting together coolly, could fail, by some mutual sacrifices of opinion, to form a compromise which was to save the Union. The discussion took place. I could take no part in it but an exhortatory one, because I was a stranger to the circumstances which should govern it. But it was finally agreed, that whatever importance had been attached to the rejection of this proposition, the preservation of the Union and of concord among the States, was more important, and that, therefore, it would be better that the vote of rejection should be rescinded, to effect which some members should change their votes. But it was observed that this pill would be peculiarly bitter to the Southern States, and that some concomitant measure should be adopted to sweeten it a little to them. There had before been projects to fix the seat of government either at Philadelphia or at Georgetown on the Potomac; and it was thought that, by giving it to Philadelphia for ten years, and to Georgetown permanently afterwards, this might, as an anodyne, calm in some degree the ferment which might be excited by the other measure alone. So two of the Potomac members (White and Lee, but White with a revulsion of stomach almost convulsive) agreed to change their votes, and Hamilton undertook to carry the other point. In doing this, the influence he had established over the eastern members, with the agency of Robert Morris with those of the Middle States, effected his side of the engagement." *

* Jefferson's Works, ix. 93, The Anas.

The decision of Congress was ultimately in favor of assumption, though the form in which it finally passed differed somewhat from the proposition of Hamilton. A specific sum was assumed ($21,500,000), and this was distributed among the States in specific portions. Thus modified, it passed the Senate, July 22d, by the close vote of fourteen to twelve; and the House, July 24th, by thirty-four to twenty-eight, "after having," says Washington, "been agitated with a warmth and intemperance, with prolixity and threats which, it is to be feared, have lessened the dignity of Congress and decreased the respect once entertained for it."

The question about the permanent seat of government, which, from the variety of contending interests, had been equally a subject of violent contest, was now compromised. It was agreed that Congress should continue for ten years to hold its sessions at Philadelphia; during which time the public buildings should be erected at some place on the Potomac, to which the government should remove at the expiration of the above term. A territory, ten miles square, selected for the purpose on the confines of Maryland and Virginia, was ceded by those States to the United States, and subsequently designated as the District of Columbia.

One of the last acts of the Executive during this session was the conclusion of a treaty of peace and friendship with the Creek nation of Indians, represented at New York by Mr. M'Gillivray, and thirty of the chiefs and head men. By this treaty (signed August 7th), an extensive territory, claimed by Georgia, was relinquished greatly to the discontent of that State; being considered by it an unjustifiable abandonment of its rights and interests. Jefferson, however, lauded the treaty as important,

"drawing a line," said he, "between the Creeks and Georgia, and enabling the government to do, as it will do, justice against either party offending."

In familiar conversations with the President, Jefferson remonstrated frequently and earnestly against the forms and ceremonies prevailing at the seat of government. Washington, in reply, gave the explanation which we have stated in a preceding chapter; that they had been adopted at the advice of others, and that for himself he was indifferent to all forms. He soon, however, became painfully aware of the exaggerated notions on the subject prevalent in Virginia. A letter from his friend, Dr. Stuart, informed him that Patrick Henry had scouted the idea of being elected to the Senate; he was too old, he said, to fall into the awkward imitations which were now become fashionable. "From this expression," adds Mr. Stuart, "I suspect the old patriot has heard some extraordinary representations of the etiquette established at your levees." Another person whom Dr. Stuart designates as Col. B-, had affirmed "that there was more pomp used there than at St. James's where he had been, and that Washington's bows were more distant and stiff."

These misapprehensions and exaggerations, prevalent in his native State, touched Washington to the quick, and called forth a more sensitive reply than, on such subjects, he was accustomed to make. "That I have not been able," writes he, "to make bows to the taste of poor Colonel B—— (who, by the by, I believe, never saw one of them), is to be regretted, especially, too, as, upon those occasions, they were indiscriminately bestowed, and the best I was master of. Would it not have been better to throw the veil of charity over them, ascribing their stiffness to the effects of age, or to the unskilfulness of my teacher, rather than to pride and the dignity of office, which, God knows, has no charms for me? For I can truly say, I had rather be at Mount Vernon with a friend or two about me, than to be attended at the seat of government by the officers of State and the representatives of every power in Europe."

He then goes on to give a sketch of his levees, and the little ceremony that prevailed there. As to the visits made on those occasions to the presidential mausion, they were optional, and made without invitation. "Between the hours of three and four, every Tuesday, I am prepared to receive them. Gentlemen, often in great numbers, come and go, chat with each other, and act as they please; a porter shows them into the room, and they retire from it when they please, and without ceremony. At their first entrance they salute me, and I them, and as many as I can talk to, I do. What pomp there is in all this, I am unable to discover. Perhaps it consists in not sitting. To this, two reasons are opposed: first, it is unusual; secondly, which is a more substantial one, because I have no room large enough to contain a third of the chairs which would be sufficient to admit it.

"Similar to the above, but of a more sociable kind, are the visits every Friday afternoon to Mrs. Washington, where I always am. These public meetings, and a dinner once a week, to as many as my table will hold, with the references to and from the different departments of State, and other communications with all parts of the Union, are as much, if not more, than I am able to undergo; for I have already had, within less than a year, two severe attacks—the last worse than the first. A third, more than probably, will put me to sleep with my fathers."

Congress adjourned on the 12th of August. Jefferson, commenting on the discord that had prevailed for a time among the members, observes, that in the latter part of the session, they had reacquired the harmony which had always distinguished their proceedings before the introduction of the two disagreeable subjects of the Assumption and the Residence: "these," said he, "really threatened, at one time, a separation of the legislature sine die."

"It is not foreseen," adds he, sanguinely, "that any thing so generative of dissension can arise again; and, therefore, the friends of government hope that, that difficulty surmounted in the States, every thing will work well."*

Washington, too, however grieved and disappointed he may have been by the dissensions which had prevailed in Congress, consoled himself by the fancied harmony of his cabinet. Singularly free himself from all jealousy of the talents and popularity of others, and solely actuated by zeal for the public good, he had sought the ablest men to assist him in his arduous task, and supposed them influenced by the same unselfish spirit. In a letter to Lafayette, he writes, "Many of your old acquaintances and friends are concerned with me in the administration of this government. By having Mr. Jefferson at the head of the department of State, Mr. Jay of the judiciary, Hamilton of the treasury, and Knox of war, I feel myself supported by able coadjutors who harmonize extremely well together."

Yet, at this very moment, a lurking spirit of rivalry between Jefferson and Hamilton was already existing and daily gaining strength. Jefferson, who, as we have intimated, already considered Hamilton a monarchist in his principles, regarded all his financial schemes with suspicion, as intended to strengthen the influence of the treasury and make its chief the master of every vote in the legislature, "which might give to the government the direction suited to his political views."

* Jefferson's Works, iii. 184.

Under these impressions, Jefferson looked back with an angry and resentful eye, to the manner in which Hamilton had procured his aid in effecting the measure of assumption. He now regarded it as a finesse by which he had been entrapped, and stigmatized the measure itself as a "fiscal manœuvre, to which he had most ignorantly and innocently been made to hold the candle."*

* Jefferson's Works, ix. 92.

CHAPTER X.

LAFAYETTE AT THE HELD OF THE REVOLUTION IN FRANCE—HIS LETTER 'TO WASHINGTON—GOUVERNEUR MORRIS'S OPINION OF HIS POSITION—WASHINGTON'S DUBIOUS AND ANXIOUS VIEWS—PRESENTED BY LAFAYETTE WITH THE KEY OF THE EASTILLE—VISITS RHODE ISLAND AND MOUNT VERNON.

During these early stages of his administration the attention of Washington was often called off from affairs at home to affairs in France; and to the conspicuous and perilous part which his friend and disciple Lafayette, was playing in the great revolutionary drama.

"Your friend, the Marquis de Lafayette," writes the Marquis de la Luzerne, "finds himself at the head of the revolution; and, indeed, it is a very fortunate circumstance for the State that he is, but very little so for himself. Never has any man been placed in a more critical situation. A good citizen, a faithful subject, he is embarrassed by a thousand difficulties in making many people sensible of what is proper, who very often feel it not, and who sometimes do not understand what it is."

Lafayette, too, amid the perplexities of conducting a revolution, looked back to the time when, in his early campaigns in America, he had shared Washington's councils, bivouacked with him on the field of battle, and been benefited by his guardian wisdom in every emergency

"How often, my well-beloved general," writes he (January, 1790), "have I regretted your sage councils and friendly support. We have advanced in the career of the revolution without the vessel of State being wrecked against the rocks of aristocracy or In the midst of efforts, always renewing, of the partisans of the past and of the ambitious, we advance towards a tolerable conclusion. At present, that which existed has been destroyed; a new political edifice is forming; without being perfect, it is sufficient to assure liberty. Thus prepared, the nation will be in a state to elect, in two years, a convention which can correct the faults of the constitution. * * * The result will, I hope, be happy for my country and for humanity. One perceives the germs of liberty in other parts of Europe. I will encourage their development by all the means in my power."

Gouverneur Morris, who is no enthusiast of the revolution, regards its progress with a dubious eye. Lafayette, in the previous month of November, had asked his opinion of his situation. "I give it to him," writes Morris, "sans menagement. I tell him that the time approaches when all good men must cling to the That the present king is very valuable on account of his moderation; and if he should possess too great authority, might be persuaded to grant a proper constitution. That the thing called a constitution, which the Assembly have framed, is good for nothing. That, as to himself, his personal situation is very That he nominally, but not really, commands his That I really cannot understand how he is to establish discipline among them, but, unless he can accomplish that object, he must be ruined sooner or later."

On the 22d of January, 1790, Morris writes to Washington, "Our friend, Lafayette, burns with desire to be at the head of an army in Flanders, and drive the Stadtholder into a ditch. He acts now a splendid, but dangerous part. Unluckily, he has given in to measures, as to the constitution, which he does not heartily approve, and heartily approves many things which experience will demonstrate to be injurious."*

Far removed as Washington was from the theatre of political action, and but little acquainted with many of the minute circumstances which might influence important decisions, he was cautious in hazarding opinions in his replies to his French correspondents. Indeed, the whole revolutionary movement appeared to him so extraordinary in its commencement, so wonderful in its progress, and so stupendous in its possible consequences, that he declared himself almost lost in the contemplation of it. "Of one thing you may rest perfectly assured," writes he to the Marquis de la Luzerne, "that nobody is more anxious for the happy issue of that business than I am; as no one can wish more sincerely for the prosperity of the French nation than I do. Nor is it without the most sensible pleasure that I learn that our friend, the Marquis de Lafayette, has, in acting the arduous part which has fallen to his share, conducted himself with so much wisdom and apparently with such general satisfaction."

A letter subsequently received from Lafayette gives him two months' later tidings, extending to the middle of March. "Our revolution pursues its march as happily as is possible, with a nation which, receiving at once all its liberties, is yet subject to confound them with licentiousness. The Assembly has more of hatred against the ancient system, than of experience to organize the new constitutional government; the ministers regret their ancient power, and do not dare to make use of that which they have; in short, as all which existed has been destroyed, and replaced by institutions very incomplete, there is ample matter for critiques and calumnics. Add to this, we are attacked by two sorts of enemies; the aristocrats who aim at a counter-revolution, and the factious who would annihilate all authority, perhaps even attempt the life of the members of the reigning branch. These two parties foment all the troubles.

* Sparks' Life of Morris, ii. 86.

"After having avowed all this, my dear general, I will tell you, with the same frankness, that we have made an admirable and almost incredible destruction of all the abuses, of all the prejudices; that all which was not useful to the people; all which did not come from them, has been retrenched; that, in considering the situation, topographical, moral, and political of France, we have effected more changes in ten months, than the most presumptuous patriots could have hoped, and that the reports about our anarchy, our internal troubles, are greatly exaggerated."

In concluding his letter, he writes: "Permit me, my dear general, to offer you a picture representing the Bastille, such as it was some days after I had given orders for its demolition. I make you homage, also, of the principal key of this fortress of despotism. It is a tribute which I owe you, as son to my adopted father, as aide-de-camp to my general, as missionary of liberty to its patriarch."*

Thomas Paine was to have been the bearer of the key, but he forwarded it to Washington from London. "I feel myself happy," writes he, "in being the person through whom the Marquis has conveyed this early trophy of the spoils of despotism, and the first ripe fruits of American principles, transplanted into Europe, to his great master and patron. That the principles of America opened the Bastille is not to be doubted, and, therefore, the key comes to the right place."

* Mem. de Lafayette, T. ii. 446.

Washington received the key with reverence, as "a token of the victory gained by liberty over despotism;" and it is still preserved at Mount Vernon, as a precious historical relic.

His affectionate solicitude for the well-being of Lafayette, was somewhat relieved by the contents of his letter; but, while his regard for the French nation made him rejoice in the progress of the political reform which he considered essential to its welfare, ne felt a generous solicitude for the personal safety of the youthful monarch, who had befriended America in its time of need.

"Happy am I, my good friend," writes he to the Marquis, "that, amidst all the tremendous tempests which have assailed your political ship, you have had address and fortitude enough to steer her hitherto safely through the quicksands and rocks which threatened instant destruction on every side; and that your young king, in all things, seems so well disposed to conform to the wishes of the nation. In such an important, such a hazardous voyage, when every thing dear and sacred is embarked, you know full well, my best wishes have never left you for a moment. Yet I will avow, that the accounts we received through the English papers, which were sometimes our only channels of information, caused our fears of failure almost to exceed our expectations of success."

Those fears were not chimerical; for, at the very time he penned this letter, the Jacobin club of Paris had already sent forth ramifications throughout France; corresponding clubs were springing up by hundreds in the provinces, and every thing was hurrying forward to a violent catastrophe.

Three days after the despatch of the last-cited letter, and two days after the adjournment of Congress, Washington, accompanied by Mr. Jefferson, departed by water on a visit to Rhode Island, which State had recently acceded to the Union. He was cordially welcomed by the inhabitants, and returned to New York, after an absence of ten days, whence he again departed for his beloved Mount Vernon, there to cast off public cares as much as possible, and enjoy the pleasures of the country during the residue of the recess of Congress.

VOL. V.

CHAPTER XI.

FRONTIER DIFFICULTIES WITH THE INDIANS—GENERAL HARMER'S EXPEDITION AGAINST THEM—AMBUSCADE OF COL, HARDIN'S DETACHMENT—ESCAPE OF CAPT. ARMSTRONG—A SECOND DETACHMENT OF COL, HARDIN COMPELLED TO RETREAT—WASHINGTON'S LONG ANXIETY AS TO THE RESULT OF THE ENTERPRISE—FINAL TIDINGS.

FREQUENT depredations had of late been made on our frontier settlements by what Washington termed "certain banditti of Indians" from the north-west side of the Ohio. Some of our people had been massacred and others carried into deplorable captivity.

Strict justice and equity had always formed the basis of Washington's dealings with the Indian tribes, and he had en deavored to convince them that such was the general policy of our government; but his efforts were often thwarted by the conduct of our own people; the encroachments of land speculators and the lawless conduct of our frontiersmen; and jealousies thus excited were fomented by the intrigues of foreign agents.

The Indians of the Wabash and the Miami rivers, who were the present aggressors, were numerous, warlike, and not deficient in discipline. They were well armed also, obtaining weapons and ammunition from the posts which the British still retained within the territories of the United States, contrary to the treaty of peace.

Washington had deprecated a war with these savages, whom ne considered acting under delusion; but finding all pacific over tures unavailing, and rather productive of more daring atrocities, he felt compelled to resort to it, alike by motives of policy, humanity, and justice. An act had been provided for emergencies, by which the President was empowered to call out the militia for the protection of the frontier; this act he put in force in the interval of Congress; and under it an expedition was set on foot, which began its march on the 30th of September from Fort Washington (which stood on the site of the present city of Cincinnati). Brigadier General Harmer, a veteran of the revolution, led the expedition, having under him three hundred and twenty regulars, with militia detachments from Pennsylvania and Virginia (or Kentucky), making in all fourteen hundred and fiftythree men. After a march of seventeen days, they approached the principal village of the Miamis. The Indians did not await an attack, but set fire to the village and fled to the woods. destruction of the place, with that of large quantities of provisions, was completed.

An Indian trail being discovered, Colonel Hardin, a continental officer who commanded the Kentucky militia, was detached to follow it, at the head of one hundred and fifty of his men, and about thirty regulars, under Captain Armstrong and Ensign Hartshorn. They followed the trail for about six miles, and were crossing a plain covered by thickets, when suddenly there were volleys of rifles on each side, from unseen marksmen, accompanied by the horrid war-whoop. The trail had, in fact, decoyed them into an ambush of seven hundred savages, under the famous warrior Little Turtle. The militia fled, without firing a musket. The savages now turned upon the little handful of regulars, who stood their ground, and made a brave resistance with the bayonet until all were slain, excepting Captain Armstrong, Ensign Hartshorn, and five privates. The ensign was saved by falling behind a log, which screened him from his pursuers. Armstrong plunged into a swamp, where he sank up to his neck, and remained for several hours of the night within two hundred yards of the field of action, a spectator of the war-dance of the savages over the slain. The two officers who escaped thus narrowly, found their way back to the camp about six miles distant.*

The army, notwithstanding, effected the main purpose of the expedition in laying waste the Indian villages and destroying their winter's stock of provisions, after which it commenced its march back to Fort Washington. On the 21st of October, when it was halted about ten miles to the west of Chillicothe, an opportunity was given Colonel Hardin to wipe out the late disgrace of his arms. He was detached with a larger body of militia than before, and sixty regulars, under Major Willys, to seek and bring the savages to action. The accounts of these Indian wars are very confused. It appears, however, that he had another encounter with Little Turtle and his braves. It was a bloody battle, fought well on both sides. The militia behaved bravely, and lost many men and officers, as did the regulars; Major Willys fell at the commencement of the action. Colonel Hardin was at length compelled to retreat, leaving the dead and wounded in the hands of the enemy. After he had rejoined the main force, the whole expedition made its way back to Fort Washington, on the banks of the Ohio.

* Butler's Hist. of Kentucky, 192.

During all this time, Washington had been rusticating a Mount Vernon, in utter ignorance of the events of this expedition. Week after week elapsed, without any tidings of its issue progress, or even commencement. On the 2d of November he wrote to the Secretary of War (General Knox), expressing his surprise at this lack of information, and his anxiety as to the result of the enterprise, and requesting him to forward any official or other accounts that he might have relating to it.

"This matter," observed he, "favorable or otherwise in the issue, will require to be laid before Congress, that the motives which induced the expedition may appear." Nearly another month elapsed; the time for the reassembling of Congress was at hand, yet Washington was still without the desired information It was not until the last of November, that he received a letter from Governor George Clinton, of New York, communicating particulars of the affair related to him by Brant, the celebrated Indian chief.

"If the information of Captain Brant be true," wrote Washington, in reply, "the issue of the expedition against the Indians will indeed prove unfortunate and disgraceful to the troops who suffered themselves to be ambuscaded."

CHAPTER XII.

CONGRESS REASSEMBLES AT PHILADELPHIA—RESIDENCE OF WASHINGTON AT THE NEW SEAT OF GOVERNMENT—THE STATE CARRIAGE—HAMILTON'S FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS—IMPOST AND EXCISE BILL—PASSAGE OF A BILL FOR A NATIONAL BANK—JEFFERSON'S OBJECTIONS—FORMATION OF TWO POLITICAL PARTIES UNDER HAMILTON AND JEFFERSON—THEIR DIFFERENT VIEWS—DISSATISFACTION OF CONGRESS AT THE REPORT OF HARMER'S EXPEDITION—WASHINGTON'S ADDRESS TO THE SENECA CHIEFS—HIS DESIRE TO CIVILIZE THE SAVAGES—KENTUCKY AND VERMONT ADMITTED INTO THE UNION—FIRST CONGRESS EXPIRES—A NEW EXPEDITION PROJECTED AGAINST THE HOSTILE TRIBES UNDER GENERAL ST. CLAIR—WASHINGTON'S SOLEMN WARNING ON TAKING LEAVE OF HIM.

Congress reassembled, according to adjournment, on the first Monday in December, at Philadelphia, which was now, for a time, the seat of government. A house belonging to Mr. Robert Morris, the financier, had been hired by Washington for his residence, and at his request, had undergone additions and alterations "in a plain and neat, and not by any means in an extravagant style."

His secretary, Mr. Lear, had made every preparation for his arrival and accommodation, and, among other things, had spoken of the rich and elegant style in which the state carriage was fitted up. "I had rather have heard," replied Washington, "that my repaired coach was plain and elegant than rich and elegant."

Congress, at its opening, was chiefly occupied in financial arrangements, intended to establish the public credit and provide for the expenses of government. According to the statement of the Secretary of the Treasury, an additional annual revenue of eight hundred and twenty-six thousand dollars would be required, principally to meet the additional charges arising from the assumption of the State debts. He proposed to raise it by an increase of the impost on foreign distilled spirits, and a tax by way of excise on spirits distilled at home. An Impost and Excise bill was accordingly introduced into Congress, and met with violent opposition. An attempt was made to strike out the excise, but failed, and the whole bill was finally carried through the House.

Mr. Hamilton, in his former Treasury report, had recommended the establishment of a National Bank; he now, in a special report, urged the policy of the measure. A bill, introduced in conformity with his views, was passed in the Senate, but vehemently opposed in the House; partly on considerations of policy; but chiefly on the ground of constitutionality. On one side it was denied that the constitution had given to Congress the power of incorporation; on the other side it was insisted that such power was incident to the power vested in Congress for raising money.

The question was argued at length, and with great ardor, and after passing the House of Representatives by a majority of nineteen votes, came before the executive for his approval. Washington was fully alive to the magnitude of the question and the interest felt in it by the opposing parties. The cabinet was divided on it. Jefferson and Randolph denied its constitutionality; Hamilton and Knox maintained it. Washington required of each minister the reasons of his opinion in writing; and, after maturely weighing them, gave his sanction to the act, and the bill was carried into effect.

The objection of Jefferson to a bank was not merely on con stitutional grounds. In his subsequent writings he avows himself opposed to banks, as introducing a paper instead of a cash system—raising up a moneyed aristocracy, and abandoning the public to the discretion of avarice and swindlers. Paper money might have some advantages, but its abuses were inevitable, and by breaking up the measure of value, it made a lottery of all private property. These objections he maintained to his dying day; but he had others, which may have been more cogent with him in the present instance. He considered the bank as a powerful engine intended by Hamilton to complete the machinery by which the whole action of the legislature was to be placed under the direction of the Treasury, and shaped to further a monarchical system of government. Washington, he affirmed, was not aware of the drift or effect of Hamilton's schemes. "Unversed in financial projects and calculations and budgets, his approbation of them was bottomed on his confidence in the man."

Washington, however, was not prone to be swayed in his judgments by blind partiality. When he distrusted his own knowledge in regard to any important measure, he asked the written opinions of those of his council who he thought were better informed, and examined and weighed them, and put them to the test of his almost unfailing sagacity. This was the way he had acted as a general, in his military councils, and he found the same plan efficacious in his cabinet. His confidence in Hamilton's talents, information, and integrity had led him to seek his counsels; but his approbation of those counsels was bottomed on a careful investigation of them. It was the same in regard to the counsels of Jefferson; they were received with great deference, but always deliberately and scrupulously weighed. The opposite policy of these rival statesmen brought them into incessant collision. "Hamilton and myself," writes Jefferson, "were daily pitted in the cabinet like two cocks." The warm-hearted Knox always sided with his old companion in arms; whose talents he revered. He is often noticed with a disparaging sneer by Jefferson, in consequence. Randolph commonly adhered to the latter. Washington's calm and massive intellect overruled any occasional discord. His policy with regard to his constitutional advisers has been happily estimated by a modern statesman: "He sought no unit cabinet, according to the set phrase of succeeding times. He asked no suppression of sentiment, no concealment of opinion; he exhibited no mean jealousy of high talent in others. He gathered around him the greatest public men of that day, and some of them to be ranked with the greatest of any day. He did not leave Jefferson and Hamilton without the cabinet, to shake, perhaps, the whole fabric of government in their fierce wars and rivalries, but he took them within, where he himself might arbitrate their disputes as they arose, and turn to the best account for the country their suggestions as they were made "*

In the mean time two political parties were forming throughout the Union, under the adverse standards of these statesmen. Both had the good of the country at heart, but differed as to the policy by which it was to be secured. The Federalists, who looked up to Hamilton as their model, were in favor of strengthening the general government so as to give it weight and dignity abroad and efficiency at home; to guard it against the encroachments of the individual States and a general tendency to anarchy. The other party, known as republicans or democrats, and taking Mr. Jefferson's view of affairs, saw in all the measures advocated by the Federalists, an intention to convert the Federal into a great central or consolidated government, preparatory to a change from a republic to a monarchy.

* Speech of R. M. T. Hunter, of Virginia. vol. v.—4*

The particulars of General Harmer's expedition against the Indians, when reported to Congress, gave great dissatisfaction. The conduct of the troops, in suffering themselves to be surprised, was for some time stigmatized as disgraceful. Further troubles in that quarter were apprehended, for the Miamis were said to be less disheartened by the ravage of their villages than exultant at the successful ambuscades of Little Turtle.

Three Seneca chiefs, Cornplanter, Half Town, and Great Tree, being at the seat of government on business of their own nation, offered to visit these belligerent tribes, and persuade them to bury the hatchet. Washington, in a set speech, encouraged them in the undertaking. "By this humane measure," said he, "you will render these mistaken people a great service, and probably prevent their being swept off of the face of the earth. The United States require only that these people should demean themselves peaceably. But they may be assured that the United States are able, and will most certainly punish them severely for all their robberies and murders."

Washington had always been earnest in his desire to civilize the savages, but had little faith in the expedient which had been pursued, of sending their young men to our colleges; the true means, he thought, was to introduce the arts and habits of husbandry among them. In concluding his speech to the Seneca chiefs, he observed, "When you return to your country, tell your nation that it is my desire to promote their prosperity by teaching them the use of domestic animals, and the manner that the white people plough and raise so much corn; and if, upon consideration, it would be agreeable to the nation at large to learn those arts, I will find some means of teaching them at some places within their country as shall be agreed upon."

In the course of the present session, Congress received and granted the applications of Kentucky and Vermont for admission into the Union, the former after August, 1792; the latter immediately.

On the 3d of March the term of this first Congress expired. Washington, after reciting the various important measures that had been effected, testified to the great harmony and cordiality which had prevailed. In some few instances, he admitted, particularly in passing the law for higher duties on spirituous liquors, and more especially on the subject of the bank, "the line between the southern and eastern interests had appeared more strongly marked than could be wished," the former against and the latter in favor of those measures, "but the debates," adds he, "were conducted with temper and candor."

As the Indians on the north-west side of the Ohio still continued their hostilities, one of the last measures of Congress had been an act to augment the military establishments, and to place in the hands of the executive more ample means for the protection of the frontiers.  $\Lambda$  new expedition against the belligerent tribes had, in consequence, been projected. General St. Clair, actually governor of the territory west of the Ohio, was appointed commander-in-chief of the forces to be employed.

Washington had been deeply chagrined by the mortifying disasters of General Harmer's expedition to the Wabash, resulting from Indian ambushes. In taking leave of his old military comrade, St. Clair, he wished him success and honor, but gave him a solemn warning. "You have your instructions from the Secretary of War. I had a strict eye to them, and will add but one word—Beware of a surprise! You know how the Indians fight. I repeat it—Beware of a surprise!" With these warning words sounding in his ear, St. Clair departed.*

* Rush's Washington in Domestic Life, p. 67.

CHAPTER XIII.

WASHINGTON'S TOUR THROUGH THE SOUTHERN STATES—LETTER TO LAFAYETTE —GLOOMY PICTURE OF FRENCH AFFAIRS BY GOUVERNEUR MORRIS—HIS ALLUSION TO LAFAYETTE—LAFAYETTE DEPICTS THE TROUBLES OF A PATRIOT LEADER—WASHINGTON'S REPLY—JEFFERSON'S ARDENT VIEWS OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION—DISTRUST OF JOHN ADAMS—HIS CONTRIBUTIONS TO FENNO'S GAZETTE—REPRINT OF PAINE'S RIGHTS OF MAN—FLIGHT AND RECAPTURE OF LOUIS XVI.—JEFFERSON COMMUNICATES THE NEWS TO WASHINGTON—HIS SATISFACTION WHEN THE KING ACCEPTS THE CONSTITUTION.

In the month of March Washington set out on a tour through the Southern States; travelling with one set of horses and making occasional halts. The route projected, and of which he had marked off the halting places, was by Fredericksburg, Richmond, Wilmington (N. C.), and Charleston to Savannah; thence to Augusta, Columbia, and the interior towns of North Carolina and Virginia, comprising a journey of eighteen hundred and eightyseven miles; all which he accomplished without any interruption from sickness, bad weather, or any untoward accident. "Indeed," writes he, "so highly were we favored that we arrived at each place where I proposed to make any halt, on the very day I fixed upon before we set out. The same horses performed the whole tour; and, although much reduced in flesh, kept up their full spirits to the last day."

He returned to Philadelphia on the 6th of July, much pleased with his tour. It had enabled him, he said, to see, with his own eyes, the situation of the country, and to learn more accurately the disposition of the people, than he could have done from any verbal information. He had looked around him, in fact, with a paternal eye, been cheered as usual by continual demonstrations of a nation's love, and his heart had warmed with the reflection how much of this national happiness had been won by his own patriotic exertions.

"Every day's experience of the government of the United States," writes he to David Humphreys, "seems to confirm its establishment, and to render it more popular. A ready acquiescence in the laws made under it shows, in a strong light, the confidence which the people have in their representatives, and in the upright views of those who administer the government. At the time of passing a law imposing a duty on home-made spirits, it was vehemently affirmed by many that such a law could never be executed in the Southern States, particularly in Virginia and South Carolina. * * * But from the best information I could get on my journey respecting its operations on the minds of the people-and I took some pains to obtain information on this point—there remains not a doubt but it will be carried into effect, not only without opposition, but with very general approbation, in those very parts where it was foretold that it never would be submitted to by any one."

"Our public credit," adds he, "stands on that ground, which, three years ago, it would have been madness to have foretold. The astonishing rapidity with which the newly instituted bank was filled, gives an unexampled proof of the resources of our countrymen and their confidence in public measures. On the first day of opening the subscription the whole number of shares (twenty thousand) were taken up in one hour, and application made for upwards of four thousand shares more than were granted by the institution, besides many others that were coming in from various quarters."*

To his comrade in arms, Lafayette, he also writes exultingly of the flourishing state of the country and the attachment of all classes to the government:

"While in Europe, wars or commotions seem to agitate almost every nation, peace and tranquillity prevail among us, except in some parts of our Western frontiers, where the Indians have been troublesome, to reclaim or chastise whom, proper measures are now pursuing. This contrast between the situation of the people of the United States and those of Europe, is too striking to be passed over, even by the most superficial observer, and may, I believe, be considered as one great cause of leading the people here to reflect more attentively on their own prosperous state, and to examine, more minutely, and consequently approve more fully, of the government under which they live, than they otherwise would have done. But we do not wish to be the only people who may taste the sweets of an equal and good government. We look with an anxious eye to the time when happiness and tranquillity shall prevail in your country, and when all Europe shall be freed from commotion, tumults, and alarms."

Letters from Gouverneur Morris had given him a gloomy picture of French affairs. "This unhappy country," writes he, bewildered in pursuit of metaphysical whimsies, presents to our moral view a mighty ruin. Like the remnants of ancient magnificence, we admire the architecture of the temple, while we detest the false god to whom it was dedicated. Daws and ravens, and the birds of night, now build their nests in its niches. The sovereign, humbled to the level of a beggar's pity, without resources, without authority, without a friend. The Assembly at once a master and a slave, new in power, wild in theory, raw in practice. It engrosses all functions, though incapable of exercising any, and has taken from this fierce, ferocious people, every restraint of religion and of respect. * * Lafayette has hitherto acted a splendid part. The king obeys but detests him. He obeys because he fears. Whoever possesses the royal person may do whatever he pleases with the royal character and authority. Hence, it happens that the ministers are of Lafayette's appointment."* Lafayette's own letters depict the troubles of a patriot leader in the stormy time of a revolution: a leader warm, generous, honest, impulsive, but not far-seeing. "I continue to be forever tossed about on an ocean of factions and commotions of every kind; for it is my fate to be attacked with equal animosity; on one side, by all that is aristocratic, servile, parliamentary, in a word, by all the adversaries of my free and levelling doctrine; on the other, by the Orleans and anti-monarchical factions, and all the workers of disorder and pillage. If it is doubtful whether I may escape personally from so many enemies, the success of our grand and good revolution is, at least, thank heaven, assured in France, and soon it will propagate itself in the rest of the world, if we succeed in establishing public order in this country. Unfortunately, the people have much better learnt how to overturn despotism, than to comprehend the duty of submission to law It is to you, my dear General, the patriarch and generalissimo of the promoters of universal liberty, that I ought always to render a faithful account of the conduct of your aide-de-camp in the service of this grand cause."

* Sparks' Life of G. Morris, ii. 117-119.

And in a subsequent letter: "I would that I could give you the assurance that our troubles were terminated and our constitution established. Nevertheless, though our horizon is still very dark, we commence to foresee the moment when a new legislative body will replace this Assembly; and, unless there come an intervention of foreign powers, I hope that four months from this your friend will have resumed the life of a peaceful and simple citizen.

"The rage of party, even between the different shades of patriots, has gone as far as possible without the effusion of blood; but if animosities are far from subsiding, present circumstances are somewhat less menacing of a collision between the different supporters of the popular cause. As to myself, I am always the butt for attacks of all parties, because they see in my person an insurmountable obstacle to their evil designs. In the mean time, what appears to me a species of phenomenon, my popularity hitherto has not been shaken."

And in another letter, he speaks of the multiplying dangers which menaced the progress of reform in France: "The refugees hovering about the frontiers, intrigues in most of the despotic and aristocratic cabinets, our regular army divided into Tory officers and undisciplined soldiers, licentiousness among the people not easily repressed, the capital, that gives the tone to the empire, tossed about by anti-revolutionary or factious parties, the Assembly fatigued by hard labor, and very unmanageable. However, according to the popular motto, ça ira, it will do."

When Lafayette thus wrote, faction was predominant at Paris. Liberty and equality began to be the watch-words, and the Jacobin club had set up a journal which was spreading the spirit of revolt and preparing the fate of royalty.

"I assure you," writes Washington, "I have often contemplated, with great anxiety, the danger to which you are personally exposed by your peculiar and delicate situation in the tumult of the time, and your letters are far from quieting that friendly concern. But to one who engages in hazardous enterprises for the good of his country, and who is guided by pure and upright views, as I am sure is the case with you, life is but a secondary consideration.

"The tumultuous populace of large cities are ever to be dreaded. Their indiscriminate violence prostrates, for the time, all public authority, and its consequences are sometimes extensive and terrible. In Paris, we may suppose these tumults are peculiarly disastrous at this time, when the public mind is in a ferment, and when, as is always the case on such occasions, there are not wanting wicked and designing men whose element is confusion, and who will not hesitate in destroying the public tranquillity to gain a favorite point."

Sympathy with the popular cause prevailed with a part of Washington's cabinet. Jefferson was ardent in his wishes that the revolution might be established. He felt, he said, that the permanence of our own revolution leaned, in some degree, on that of France; that a failure there would be a powerful argument to prove there must be a failure here, and that the success of the French revolution was necessary to stay up our own and "prevent its falling back to that kind of half-way house, the English constitution."

Outside of the cabinet, the Vice President, John Adams, regarded the French revolution with strong distrust. His official position, however, was too negative in its nature to afford him an opportunity of exerting influence on public affairs. He considered the post of Vice President beneath his talents. "My country," writes he, "has, in its wisdom, contrived for me the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived or his imagination conceived."* Impatient of a situation in which, as he said, he could do neither good nor evil, he resorted, for mental relief, to the press, and for upwards of a year had exercised his fertile and ever ready pen, in furnishing Fenno's Gazette of the United States, with a series of papers entitled, "Discourses on Davila," being an analysis of Davila's History of the Civil Wars of France in the 16th century. The aim of Mr. Adams, in this series, was to point out to his countrymen the dangers to be apprehended from powerful factions in ill-balanced forms of government; but his aim was mistaken, and he was charged with advocating monarchy, and laboring to prepare the way for an hereditary presidency. To counteract these "political heresies," a reprint of Paine's Rights of Man, written in reply to Burke's pamphlet on the French revolution, appeared under the auspices of Mr. Jefferson.

While the public mind was thus agitated with conflicting opinions, news arrived in August, of the flight of Louis XVI. from Paris, and his recapture at Varennes. All Jefferson's hatred of royalty was aroused by this breach of royal faith.

"Such are the fruits of that form of government," said he, scornfully, "which heaps importance on idiots, and which the tories of the present day are trying to preach into our favor. It would be unfortunate were it in the power of any one man to defeat the issue of so beautiful a revolution. I hope and trust that it is not, and that, for the good of suffering humanity all over the earth, that revolution will be established and spread all over the world."

He was the first to communicate the intelligence to Washington, who was holding one of his levees, and observes, "I never saw him so much dejected by any event in my life." Washington, himself, declares that he remained for some time in painful suspense, as to what would be the consequences of this event. Ultimately, when news arrived that the king had accepted the constitution from the hands of the National Assembly, he hailed the event as promising happy consequences to France, and to mankind in general; and what added to his joy, was the noble and disinterested part which his friend, Lafayette, had acted in this great drama. "The prayers and wishes of the human race," writes he to the Marquis, "have attended the exertions of your nation; and when your affairs are settled under an energetic and equal government, the hearts of all good men will be satisfied."

CHAPTER XIV.

RURAL HOURS AT MOUNT VERNON—ASSEMBLING OF SECOND CONGRESS—WASHINGTON'S OPENING SPEECH—TWO EXPEDITIONS ORGANIZED AGAINST THE INDIANS, UNDER SCOTT AND WILKINSON—THEIR FEEBLE RESULT—THIRD EXPEDITION UNDER ST. CLAIR—HIS DISASTROUS CONTEST AND DISMAL RE TREAT—HOW WASHINGTON RECEIVED THE INTELLIGENCE.

A FEW weeks of autumn were passed by Washington at Mount Vernon, with his family in rural enjoyment, and in instructing a new agent, Mr. Robert Lewis, in the management of his estate; his nephew, Major George A. Washington, who ordinarily attended to his landed concerns, being absent among the mountains in quest of health.

The second Congress assembled at Philadelphia on the 24th of October, and on the 25th Washington delivered his opening speech. After remarking upon the prosperous situation of the country, and the success which had attended its financial measures, he adverted to the offensive operations against the Indians, which government had been compelled to adopt for the protection of the Western frontier. Some of these operations, he observed, had been successful, others were still depending. A brief statement will be sufficient for the successful operations alluded to

To reconcile some of the people of the West, to the appointment of General St. Clair as commander-in-chief in that quarter, a local board of war had been formed for the Western country, empowered to act in conjunction with the commanding officer of the United States, in calling out the militia; sending out expeditions against the Indians, and apportioning scouts through the exposed parts of the district of Kentucky.

Under this arrangement two expeditions had been organized in Kentucky against the villages on the Wabash. The first, in May, was led by General Charles Scott, having General Wilkinson as second in command. The second, a volunteer enterprise, in August, was led by Wilkinson alone. Very little good was effected, or glory gained by either of these expeditions. Indian villages and wigwams were burned, and fields laid waste; some few warriors were killed and prisoners taken, and an immense expense incurred.

Of the events of a third enterprise, led by General St. Clair himself, no tidings had been received at the time of Washington's opening speech; but we will anticipate the official despatches, and proceed to show how it fared with that veteran soldier, and how far he profited by the impressive warning which he had received from the President at parting.

The troops for his expedition assembled early in September, in the vicinity of Fort Washington (now Cincinnati). There were about two thousand regulars, and one thousand militia. The regulars included a corps of artillery and several squadrons of horse. An arduous task was before them. Roads were to be opened through a wilderness; bridges constructed for the conveyance of artillery and stores, and forts to be built so as to keep up a line of communication between the Wabash and the Ohio.

the base of operations. The troops commenced their march directly North, on the 6th or 7th of September, cutting their way through the woods, and slowly constructing the line of forts. The little army, on the 24th of October, according to the diary of an officer, was respectable in numbers-"upon paper"-but, adds he, "the absence of the first Regiment, and desertions from the militia, had very much reduced us. With the residue there was too generally wanting the essential stamina of soldiers. Picked up and recruited from the off-scourings of large towns and cities, enervated by idleness, debauchery, and every species of vice, it was impossible they could have been made competent to the arduous duties of Indian warfare. An extraordinary aversion to service was also conspicuous amongst them, and demonstrated by repeated desertions; in many instances, to the very foe we were to combat. The late period at which they had been brought into the field, left no leisure nor opportunity to discipline them. They were, moreover, badly clothed, badly paid, and badly fed. The military stores and arms were sent on in infamous order. Notwithstanding pointed orders against firing, and a penalty of one hundred lashes, game was so plenty and presented such a strong temptation, that the militia and the levies were constantly offending, to the great injury of the service and the destruction of all order in the army." *

After placing garrisons in the forts, the general continued his march. It was a forced one with him, for he was so afflicted with the gout that he could not walk, and had to be helped on and off of his horse; but his only chance to keep his little army together was to move on. A number of the Virginia troops had already, on the 27th of October, insisted on their discharges; there was danger that the whole battalion would follow their example, and the time of the other battalions was nearly up. The plan of the general was to push so far into the enemy's country, that such detachments as might be entitled to their discharges, would be afraid to return.

* Diary of Col. Winthrop Sargent, Adjutant General of the U.S. army during the campaign of 1791.

The army had proceeded six days after leaving Fort Jefferson, and were drawing near a part of the country where they were likely to meet with Indians, when, on the 30th of October, sixty of the militia deserted in a body; intending to supply themselves by plundering the convoys of provisions which were coming forward in the rear. The 1st United States regiment, under Major Hamtranck, was detached to march back beyond Fort Jefferson, apprehend these deserters, if possible, and, at all events, prevent the provisions that might be on the way, from being rifled. The force thus detached, consisted of three hundred of the best disciplined men in the service, with experienced officers.

Thus reduced to 1,400 effective rank and file, the army continued its march to a point about twenty-nine miles from Fort Jefferson, and ninety-seven from Fort Washington, and fifteen miles south of the Miami villages, where it encamped, November 3d, on a rising ground with a stream forty feet wide in front, running westerly. This stream was mistaken by General St. Clair for the St. Mary, which empties itself into the Miami of the lakes; but it was, in fact, a tributary of the Wabash.

A number of new and old Indian camps showed that this had been a place of general resort; and in the bends of the stream were tracks of a party of fifteen, horse and foot; a scouting party most probably, which must have quitted the ground just before the arrival of the army.

The troops were encamped in two lines, the right wing composed of Butler, Clarke, and Patterson's battalions, commanded by Major General Butler, forming the first line; Patterson on the right, and four pieces of artillery on the right of Butler. The left wing, consisting of Beddinger and Gaither's battalions, and the second United States regiment, commanded by Colonel Darke, formed the second line; with an interval of about seventy yards, which was all that the ground allowed. The length of the lines was nearly four hundred yards; the rear somewhat more, and the front somewhat less. A troop of horse, commanded by Captain Truman, and a company of riflemen under Captain Faulkner, were upon the right flank, and Snowden's troop of horse on the left.

The ground descended gradually in front of the encampment to the stream, which, at this time, was fordable, and meandered in its course; in some places, one hundred yards distant from the camp, in others not more than twenty-five. The immediate spot of the encampment was very defensible against regular troops; but it was surrounded by close woods, dense thickets, and the trunks of fallen trees, with here and there a ravine, and a small swamp—all the best kind of cover for stealthy Indian warfare.

The militia were encamped beyond the stream about a quarter of a mile in the advance, on a high flat; a much more favorable position than that occupied by the main body; and capacious enough to have accommodated the whole, and admitted any extent of lines.

It was the intention of St. Clair to throw up a slight work on vol. v -5 the following day, and to move on to the attack of the Indian villages as soon as he should be rejoined by Major Hamtranck and the first United States regiment. The plan of this work he concerted in the evening with Major Ferguson of the artillery, a cool, indefatigable, determined man. In the mean time, Colonel Oldham, the commanding officer of the militia, was directed to send out two detachments that evening, to explore the country and gain information concerning the enemy. The militia, however, showed signs of insubordination. They complained of being too much fatigued for the purpose; in short, the service was not, and probably could not be enforced. Sentinels posted around the camp, about fifty paces distant from each other, formed the principal security.

About half an hour before sunrise on the next morning (Nov. 4th), and just after the troops had been dismissed on parade, a horrible sound burst forth from the woods around the militia camp, resembling, says an officer, the jangling of an infinitude of horse-bells. It was the direful Indian yell, followed by the sharp reports of the deadly rifle. The militia returned a feeble fire and then took to flight, dashing helter-skelter into the other camp. The first line of the continental troops, which was hastily forming, was thrown into disorder. The Indians were close upon the heels of the flying militia, and would have entered the camp with them, but the sight of troops drawn up with fixed bayonets to receive them, checked their ardor, and they threw themselves behind logs and bushes at the distance of seventy yards; and immediately commenced an attack upon the first line, which soon was extended to the second. The great weight of the attack was upon the centre of each line where the artillery was placed. The artillery, if not well served, was bravely fought; a quantity of canister and some round shot were thrown in the direction whence the Indians fired; but, concealed as they were, and only seen occasionally as they sprang from one covert to another, it was impossible to direct the pieces to advantage. The artillerists themselves were exposed to a murderous fire, and every officer, and more than two-thirds of the men, were killed and wounded. Twice the Indians pushed into the camp, delivering their fire and then rushing on with the tomahawk, but each time they were driven back. General Butler had been shot from his horse, and was sitting down to have his wound dressed, when a daring savage, darting into the camp, tomahawked and scalped him. He failed to carry off his trophy, being instantly slain.

The veteran St. Clair, who, unable to mount his horse, was borne about on a litter, preserved his coolness in the midst of the peril and disaster, giving his orders with judgment and self-possession. Seeing to what disadvantage his troops fought with a concealed enemy, he ordered Colonel Darke, with his regiment of regulars, to rouse the Indians from their covert with the bayonet, and turn their left flank. This was executed with great spirit: the enemy were driven three or four hundred yards; but, for want of cavalry or riflemen, the pursuit slackened, and the troops were forced to give back in turn. The savages had now got into the camp by the left flank; again several charges were made, but in vain. Great carnage was suffered from the enemy concealed in the woods; every shot seemed to take effect; all the officers of the second regiment were picked off, excepting three. The contest had now endured for more than two hours and a half. The spirits of the troops flagged under the loss of the officers; half the army was killed, and the situation of the remainder was desperate. There appeared to be no alternative but a retreat.

At half-past nine, General St. Clair ordered Colonel Darke, with the second regiment, to make another charge, as if to turn the right wing of the enemy, but, in fact, to regain the road from which the army was cut off. This object was effected. "Having collected in one body the greatest part of the troops," writes one of the officers, "and such of the wounded as could possibly hobble along with us, we pushed out from the left of the rear line, sacrificing our artillery and baggage." Some of the wounded officers were brought off on horses, but several of the disabled men had to be left on the ground. The poor fellows charged their pieces before they were left: and the firing of musketry heard by the troops after they quitted the camp, told that their unfortunate comrades were selling their lives dear.

It was a disorderly flight. The troops threw away arms, ammunition, and accourrements; even the officers, in some instances, divested themselves of their fusees. The general was mounted on a pack horse which could not be pricked out of a walk. Fortunately, the enemy did not pursue above a mile or two, returning, most probably, to plunder the camp.

By seven in the evening, the fugitives reached Fort Jefferson, a distance of twenty-nine miles. Here they met Major Hamtranck with the first regiment; but, as this force was far from sufficient to make up for the losses of the morning, the retreat was continued to Fort Washington, where the army arrived on the 8th at noon, shattered and broken-spirited. Many poor fellows fell behind in the retreat, and fancying the savages were upon them, left the road, and some of them were wandering several days, until nearly starved.

In this disastrous battle the whole loss of regular troops and levies amounted to five hundred and fifty killed, and two hundred wounded. Out of ninety-five commissioned officers who were on the field, thirty-one were slain and twenty-four wounded. Of the three hundred and nineteen militia, Colonel Oldham and three other officers were killed and five wounded; and of non-commissioned officers and privates, thirty-eight were killed and twenty-nine wounded. Fourteen artificers and ten pack horsemen were also killed, and thirteen wounded. So that, according to Colonel Sargent's estimate, the whole loss amounted to six hundred and seventy-seven killed, including thirty women, and twe hundred and seventy-one wounded.

Poor St. Clair's defeat has been paralleled with that of Braddock. No doubt, when he realized the terrible havoc that had been made, he thought sadly of Washington's parting words, "Beware of a surprise!"

We have a graphic account of the manner in which the intelligence of the disaster was received by Washington at Philadelphia. Towards the close of a winter's day in December, an officer in uniform dismounted in front of the President's house, and, giving the bridle to his servant, knocked at the door. He was informed by the porter that the President was at dinner and had company. The officer was not to be denied; he was on public business, he brought despatches for the President. A servant was sent into the dining-room to communicate the matter to Mr. Lear. The latter left the table and went into the hall, where the officer repeated what he had said to the porter. Mr. Lear, as secretary of the President, offered to take charge of the despatches and deliver them at the proper time. The officer replied that he was just arrived from the Western army; his orders were to deliver the despatches promptly to the President in person; but that he would wait his directions. Mr. Lear returned, and, in a whisper, communicated to the President what had passed. Washington rose from the table and went into the hall, whence he returned in a short time and resumed his seat, apologizing for his absence, but without alluding to the cause of it. One of the company, however, overheard him, as he took his seat, mutter to himself, with an ejaculation of extreme impatience, "I knew it would be so!"

Mrs. Washington held her drawing-room that evening. The gentlemen repaired thither from the table. Washington appeared there with his usual screnity; speaking courteously to every lady, as was his custom. By ten o'clock all the company had gone; Mrs. Washington retired soon after, and Washington and his secretary alone remained.

The general walked slowly backward and forward for some minutes in silence. As yet there had been no change in his manner. Taking a seat on a sofa by the fire he told Mr. Lear to sit down; the latter had scarce time to notice that he was extremely agitated, when he broke out suddenly: "It's all over!—St. Clair's defeated!—routed: the officers nearly all killed, the men by wholesale; the rout complete; too shocking to think of, and a surprise into the bargain!" All this was uttered with great vehemence. Then pausing and rising from the sofa, he walked up and down the room in silence, violently agitated, but saying nothing. When near the door he stopped short; stood still for a few moments, when there was another terrible explosion of wrath.

"Yes," exclaimed he, "HERE, on this very spot, I took leave of him; I wished him success and honor. 'You have your instructions from the Secretary of War,' said I, 'I had a strict eye to them, and will add but one word, BEWARE OF A SURPRISE!

You know how the Indians fight us. I repeat it, BEWARE OF A SURPRISE.' He went off with that, my last warning, thrown into his ears. And yet!! To suffer that army to be cut to pieces, hacked, butchered, tomahawked, by a surprise—the very thing I guarded him against—O God! O God!" exclaimed he, throwing up his hands, and while his very frame shook with emotion, "he's worse than a murderer! How can he answer it to his country! The blood of the slain is upon him—the curse of widows and orphans—the curse of heaven!"

Mr. Lear remained speechless; awed into breathless silence by the appalling tones in which this torrent of invective was poured forth. The paroxysm passed by. Washington again sat down on the sofa—he was silent—apparently uncomfortable, as if conscious of the ungovernable burst of passion which had overcome him. "This must not go beyond this room," said he at length, in a subdued and altered tone—there was another and a longer pause; then, in a tone quite low: "General St. Clair shall have justice," said he. "I looked hastily through the despatches; saw the whole disaster, but not all the particulars. I will receive him without displeasure; I will hear him without prejudice; he shall have full justice." *

Washington had recovered his equanimity. "The storm," we are told, "was over, and no sign of it was afterwards seen in his conduct or heard in his conversation." How well he kept his word, in regard to General St. Clair, will hereafter be shown.

* Rush's Washington in Domestic Life.

CHAPTER XV.

THE APPORTIONMENT BILL—WASHINGTON'S VETO—HIS CONCERN AT THE GROWING ASPERITIES OF CONGRESS—INTENDED RETIREMENT—JEFFERSON'S DETERMINATION TO RETIRE AT THE SAME TIME—REMONSTRANCE OF WASHINGTON—HIS REQUEST TO MADISON TO PREPARE VALEDICTORY—WAYNE APPOINTED TO SUCCEED ST. CLAIR—CONGRESS ADJOURNS—WASHINGTON AT MOUNT VERNON—SUGGESTS TOPICS FOR HIS FAREWELL ADDRESS—MADI SON'S DRAFT—JEFFERSON URGES HIS CONTINUANCE.

In the course of the present session of Congress a bill was introduced for apportioning representatives among the people of the several States, according to the first enumeration.

The constitution had provided that the number of representatives should not exceed one for every thirty thousand persons, and the House of Representatives passed a bill allotting to each State one member for this amount of population. This ratio would leave a fraction, greater or less, in each State. Its operation was unequal, as in some States a large surplus would be unrepresented, and hence, in one branch of the legislature, the relative power of the State be affected. That, too, was the popular branch, which those who feared a strong executive, desired to provide with the counterpoise of as full a representation as possible.

To obviate this difficulty the Senate adopted a new principle of apportionment. They assumed the total population of the United States, and not the population of each State, as the basis on which the whole number of representatives should be ascertained. This aggregate they divided by thirty thousand: the quotient gave one hundred and twenty as the number of representatives; and this number they apportioned upon the several States according to their population; allotting to each one mem ber for every thirty thousand, and distributing the residuary members (to make up the one hundred and twenty) among the States having the largest fractions.

After an earnest debate, the House concurred, and the bilst came before the President for his decision. The sole questions was as to its constitutionality; that being admitted, it was unest ceptionable. Washington took the opinion of his cabinet. Jefferson and Randolph considered the act at variance with the constitution. Knox was undecided. Hamilton thought the clause of the constitution relating to the subject somewhat vague, and was in favor of the construction given to it by the legislature.

After weighing the arguments on both sides, and maturely deliberating, the President made up his mind that the act was unconstitutional. It was the obvious intent of the constitution to apply the ratio of representation according to the separate numbers of each State, and not to the aggregate of the population of the United States. Now this bill allotted to eight of the States more than one representative for thirty thousand inhabitants. He accordingly returned the bill with his objections, being the first exercise of the veto power. A new bill was substituted, and passed into a law; giving a representative for every thirty-three thousand to each State.

Great heat and asperity were manifested in the discussions of Congress throughout the present session. Washington had observed with pain the political divisions which were growing up in the country; and was deeply concerned at finding that they were pervading the halls of legislation. The press, too, was contributing its powerful aid to keep up and increase the irritation Two rival papers existed at the seat of government; one was Fenno's Gazette of the United States, in which John Adams had published his "Discourses on Davila;" the other was the National Gazette, edited by Philip Freneau. Freneau had been editor of the New York Daily Advertiser, but had come to Philadelphia in the autumn of 1791 to occupy the post of translating clerk in Mr. Jefferson's office, and had almost immediately (Oct. 31) published the first number of his Gazette. Notwithstanding his situation in the office of the Secretary of State, Freneau became and continued to be throughout the session, a virulent assailant of most of the measures of government; excepting such as originated with Mr. Jefferson, or were approved by him.

Heart-weary by the political strifes and disagreements which were disturbing the country and marring the harmony of his cabinet, the charge of government was becoming intolerably irksome to Washington; and he longed to be released from it, and to be once more master of himself, free to indulge those rural and agricultural tastes which were to give verdure and freshness to his future existence. He had some time before this expressed a determination to retire from public life at the end of his presidential term. But one more year of that term remained to be endured; he was congratulating himself with the thought, when Mr. Jefferson intimated that it was his intention to retire from office at the same time with himself.

Washington was exceedingly discomposed by this determination. Jefferson, in his Anas, assures us that the President remonstrated with him against it, "in an affectionate tone." For his own part, he observed, many motives compelled him to retire. It was only after much pressing that he had consented to take a part in the new government and get it under way. Were he to continue in it longer, it might give room to say that, having tasted the sweets of office, he could not do without them.

He observed, moreover, to Jefferson, that he really felt himself growing old; that his bodily health was less firm, and his memory, always bad, was becoming worse. The other faculties of his mind, perhaps, might be evincing to others a decay of which he himself might be insensible. This apprehension, he said, particularly oppressed him.

His activity, too, had declined; business was consequently more irksome, and the longing for tranquillity and retirement had become an irresistible passion. For these reasons he felt himself obliged, he said, to retire; yet he should consider it unfortunate if, in so doing, he should bring on the retirement of the great officers of government, which might produce a shock on the public mind of a dangerous consequence.

Jefferson, in reply, stated the reluctance with which he himself had entered upon public employment, and the resolution he had formed on accepting his station in the cabinet, to make the resignation of the President the epoch of his own retirement from labors of which he was heartily tired. He did not believe, however, that any of his brethren in the administration had any idea of retiring; on the contrary, he had perceived, at a late meeting of the trustees of the sinking fund, that the Secretary of the Treasury had developed the plan he intended to pursue, and that it embraced years in its view.

Washington rejoined, that he considered the Treasury department a limited one, going only to the single object of revenue, while that of the Secretary of State, embracing nearly all the objects of administration, was much more important, and the retirement of the officer, therefore, would be more noticed; that though the government had set out with a pretty general goodwill, yet that symptoms of dissatisfaction had lately shown themselves, far beyond what he could have expected; and to what height these might arise, in case of too great a change in the administration, could not be foreseen.

Jefferson availed himself of this opportunity to have a thrust at his political rival. "I told him," (the President,) relates he, "that in my opinion there was only a single source of these discontents. Though they had, indeed, appeared to spread themselves over the war department also, yet I considered that as an overflowing only from their real channel, which would never have taken place if they had not first been generated in another department, to wit, that of the Treasury. That a system had there been contrived for deluging the States with paper money instead of gold and silver, for withdrawing our citizens from the pursuits of commerce, manufactures, buildings, and other branches of useful industry, to occupy themselves and their capitals in a species of gambling, destructive of morality, and which had introduced its poison into the government itself." *

Mr. Jefferson went on, in the same strain, to comment at large upon the measures of Mr. Hamilton, but records no reply of importance on the part of Washington, whose object in seeking the conversation had been merely to persuade his Secretary to remain in the cabinet; and who had no relish for the censorious comments to which it had given rise.

* Jefferson's Works, ix. 102.

Yet with all this political rivalry, Jefferson has left on record his appreciation of the sterling merit of Hamilton. In his Anas, he speaks of him as "of acute understanding, disinterested, honest, and honorable in all private transactions; amiable in society, and duly valuing virtue in private life. Yet so bewitched and perverted by the British example, as to be under thorough conviction that corruption was essential to the government of a nation."

In support of this sweeping exception to Mr. Hamilton's political orthodoxy, Mr. Jefferson gives, in his Anas, a conversation which occurred between that gentleman and Mr. Adams, at his (Mr. Jefferson's) table, after the cloth was removed. "Conversation," writes he, "began on other matters, and by some circumstance was led to the British constitution, on which Mr. Adams observed, "purge that constitution of its corruption, and give to its popular branch equality of representation, and it would be the most perfect constitution ever devised by the wit of man." Hamilton paused and said, "purge it of its corruption, and give to its popular branch equality of representation, and it would become an impracticable government; as it stands at present, with all its supposed defects, it is the most perfect government which ever existed."*

This after-dinner conversation appears to us very loose ground on which to found the opinion continually expressed by

* Jefferson's Works, vol. ix. p. 96.

Mr. Jefferson, that "Mr. Hamilton was not only a monarchist, but for a monarchy bottomed on corruption."

Subsequent to Washington's remonstrance with Mr. Jefferson above cited, he had confidential conversations with Mr. Madison on the subject of his intended retirement from office at the end of the presidential term, and asked him to think what would be the proper time and mode of announcing his intention to the public; and intimating a wish that Mr. Madison would prepare for him the announcement.

Mr. Madison remonstrated in the most earnest manner against such a resolution, setting forth, in urgent language, the importance to the country of his continuing in the presidency. Washington listened to his reasoning with profound attention, but still clung to his resolution.

In consequence of St. Clair's disastrous defeat and the increasing pressure of the Indian war, bills had been passed in Congress for increasing the army, by adding three regiments of infantry and a squadron of cavalry (which additional force was to serve for three years, unless sooner discharged), also for establishing a uniform militia system.

The question now came up as to the appointment of an officer to command in the Western frontier. General St. Clair, in a letter to Washington, expressed a wish that a court of inquiry might be instituted to investigate his conduct in the late expedition. "Your desire," replied Washington, March 28th, "of rectifying any errors of the public opinion relative to your conduct, by an investigation of a court of inquiry, is highly laudable, and would be readily complied with, were the measure practicable. But a total deficiency of officers in actual service, of competent rank to form a legal court for that purpose, precludes the power of gratifying your wishes on this occasion.

"The intimation of your wishes to afford your successor all the information of which you are capable, although unnecessary for my personal conviction, must be regarded as an additional evidence of the goodness of your heart, and of your attachment to your country."

In a letter dated March 31st, St. Clair urged reasons for being permitted to retain his commission "until an opportunity should be presented, if necessary, of investigating his conduct in every mode presented by law."

These reasons, Washington replied, would be conclusive with him under any other circumstances than the present. "But the establishment of the troops," observes he, "allows only of one Major General. You have manifested your intention of retiring, and the essential interests of the public require that your successor should be immediately appointed, in order to repair to the frontiers.

"As the House of Representatives have been pleased to institute an inquiry into the causes of the failure of the late expedition, I should hope an opportunity would thereby be afforded you of explaining your conduct in a manner satisfactory to the public and yourself."

St. Clair resigned his commission, and was succeeded in his Western command by General Wayne, the mad Anthony of the revolution, still in the vigor of his days, being forty-seven years of age. "He has many good points as an officer," writes Washington, "and it is to be hoped that time, reflection, good advice, and, above all, a due sense of the importance of the trust which is committed to him, will correct his foibles, or cast a shade over them." *

Washington's first thought was that a decisive expedition conducted by this energetic man of the sword, might retrieve the recent frontier disgrace, and put an end to the persevering hostility of the Indians. In deference, however, to the clamors which had been raised against the war and its expenses, and to meet what appeared to be the prevalent wish of the nation, he reluctantly relinquished his more energetic policy, and gave in to that which advised further negotiations for peace; though he was far from anticipating a beneficial result.

In regard to St. Clair, we will here add: that a committee of the House of Representatives ultimately inquired into the cause of the failure of his expedition, and rendered a report, in which he was explicitly exculpated. His adjutant general also (Winthrop Sargent), in his private diary, testifies to St. Clair's coolness and bravery, though debilitated by illness. Public sentiment, however, remained for a long time adverse to him; but Washington, satisfied with the explanations which had been given, continued to honor him with his confidence and friendship.

Congress adjourned on the 8th of May, and soon afterward Washington set off on a short visit to Mount Vernon. The season was in all its beauty, and never had this rallying place of his affections appeared to him more attractive. How could be give up the prospect of a speedy return to its genial pursuits and pleasures from the harassing cares and janglings of public life. On the 20th of May, he wrote to Mr. Madison on the subject of their late conversation. "I have not been unmindful," says he, "of the sentiments expressed by you. On the contrary, I have again and again revolved them with thoughtful anxiety, but without being able to dispose my mind to a longer continuation in the office I have now the honor to hold. I, therefore, still look forward with the fondest and most ardent wishes to spend the remainder of my days, which I cannot expect to be long, in ease and tranquillity."

* Letter to Governor Lee. Washington's Writings, x. 248.

He now renewed the request he had made Mr. Madison, for advice as to the proper time and mode for announcing his intention of retiring, and for assistance in preparing the announcement. "In revolving this subject myself," writes he, "my judgment has always been embarrassed. On the one hand, a previous declaration to retire, not only carries with it the appearance of vanity and self-importance, but it may be construed into a manœuvre to be invited to remain; and, on the other hand, to say nothing, implies consent, or, at any rate, would leave the matter in doubt; and to decline afterwards, might be deemed as bad and uncandid."

"I would fain carry my request to you further," adds he. "As the recess [of Congress] may afford you leisure, and, I flatter myself, you have dispositions to oblige me, I will, without apology, desire, if the measure in itself should strike you as proper, or likely to produce public good, or private honor, that you would turn your thoughts to a valedictory address from me to the public."

He then went on to suggest a number of the topics and ideas which the address was to contain; all to be expressed in "plain and modest terms." But, in the main, he left it to Mr. Madison to determine whether, in the first place, such an address would be proper; if so, what matters it ought to contain and when it ought to appear; whether at the same time with his [Washington's] declaration of his intention to retire, or at the close of his career.

Madison, in reply, approved of the measure, and advised that the notification and address should appear together, and be promulgated through the press in time to pervade every part of the Union by the beginning of November. With the letter he sent a draft of the address. "You will readily observe," writes he, "that, in executing it, I have aimed at that plainness and modesty of language, which you had in view, and which, indeed, are so peculiarly becoming the character and the occasion; and that I had little more to do as to the matter, than to follow the just and comprehensive outline which you had sketched. I flatter myself, however, that, in every thing which has depended on me, much improvement will be made, before so interesting a paper shall have taken its last form."*

Before concluding his letter, Madison expressed a hope that Washington would reconsider his idea of retiring from office, and that the country might not, at so important a conjuncture, be deprived of the inestimable advantage of having him at the head of its councils.

On the 23d of May, Jefferson also addressed a long letter to Washington on the same subject. "When you first mentioned to me your purpose of retiring from the government, though I felt all the magnitude of the event, I was in a considerable degree silent. I knew that, to such a mind as yours, persuasion was idle and impertinent; that, before forming your decision, you had weighed all the reasons for and against the measure, had made up your mind in full view of them, and that there could be little hope of changing the result. Pursuing my reflections, too, I knew we were some day to try to walk alone, and, if the essay should be made while you should be alive and looking on, we should derive confidence from that circumstance, and resource if it failed. The public mind, too, was then calm and confident, and therefore in a favorable state for making the experiment. But the public mind is no longer so confident and serene; and that from causes in which you are no ways personally mixed."

* Washington's Writings. Sparks, xii. 382.

Jefferson now launched out against the public debt and all the evils which he apprehended from the funding system, the ultimate object of all which was, said he, "to prepare the way for a change from the present republican form of government to that of a monarchy, of which the English constitution is to be the model." He concluded by pronouncing the continuance of Washington at the head of affairs, to be of the last importance.

"The confidence of the whole Union," writes he, "is centred in you. Your being at the helm will be more than an answer to every argument which can be used to alarm and lead the people in any quarter into violence or secession. North and South will hang together, if they have you to hang on; and, if the first corrective of a numerous representation should fail in its effect, your presence will give time for trying others not inconsistent with the union and peace of the States.

"I am perfectly aware of the oppression under which your present office lays your mind, and of the ardor with which you pant for retirement to domestic life. But there is sometimes an eminence of character on which society have such peculiar claims, as to control the predilections of the individual for a particular walk of happiness, and restrain him to that alone, arising from the present and future benedictions of mankind. This seems to be your condition, and the law imposed on you by Providence, in forming your character, and fashioning the events on which it was to operate; and it is to motives like these, and not to personal anxieties of mine or others, who have no right to call on you for sacrifices, that I appeal from your former determination and urge a revisal of it, on the ground of change in the aspect of things. Should an honest majority result from the new and enlarged representation, should those acquiesce, whose principles or interests they may control, your wishes for retirement would be gratified with less danger, as soon as that shall be manifest, without awaiting the completion of the second period of four years. One or two sessions will determine the crisis; and I cannot but hope, that you can resolve to add one or two more to the many years you have already sacrificed to the good of mankind."*

* Writings, x. 508.

CHAPTER XVI.

JEFFERSON'S SUSPICIONS—CONTEMNED BY HAMILTON—WASHINGTON'S EXPOSITULATION—COMPLAINS OF THE CONDUCT OF FRENEAU'S PAPER—HAMILTON AND RANDOLPH URGE HIM TO A RE-ELECTION—A WARRING CABINET—HAMILTON'S ATTACK ON JEFFERSON—WASHINGTON'S HEALING ADMONITIONS—REPLIES OF THE TWO SECRETARIES—CONTINUED HOSTILITY TO THE EXCISE LAW—WASHINGTON'S PROCLAMATION—RENEWED EFFORT TO ALLAY THE DISCORD IN HIS CABINET.

The letter of Jefferson was not received by Washington until after his return to Philadelphia, and the purport of it was so painful to him, that he deferred from day to day having any conversation with that statesman on the subject. A letter written in the mean time, by Jefferson to Lafayette, shows the predominant suspicion, or rather belief, which had fixed itself in the mind of the former, and was shaping his course of action.

"A sect," writes he, "has shown itself among us, who declare they espoused our constitution not as a good and sufficient thing in itself, but only as a step to an English constitution, the only thing good and sufficient in itself, in their eyes. It is happy for us that these are preachers without followers, and that our people are firm and constant in their republican purity. You will wonder to be told that it is from the Eastward chiefly, that these champions for a king, lords, and commons, come. They get some important associates from New York, and are puffed up by a tribe of Agioteurs which have been hatched in a bed of corruption, made up after the model of their beloved England. Too many of these stock-jobbers and king-jobbers have come into our legislature, or rather, too many of our legislature have become stock-jobbers and king-jobbers. However, the voice of the people is beginning to make itself heard, and will probably cleanse their seats at the next election."*

In regard to the suspicions and apprehensions avowed in the above letter, and which apparently were haunting Jefferson's mind, Hamilton expressed himself roundly in one of his cabinet papers:

"The idea of introducing a monarchy or aristocracy into this country, by employing the influence and force of a government continually changing hands, towards it, is one of those visionary things that none but madmen could meditate, and that no wise man will believe. If it could be done at all, which is utterly incredible, it would require a long series of time, certainly beyond the life of any individual, to effect it—who, then, would enter into such a plot? for what purpose of interest or ambition?"

And as to the charge of stock-gambling in the legislature, Hamilton indignantly writes: "As far as I know, there is not a member of the legislature who can properly be called a stock-jobber or a paper-dealer. There are several of them who were proprietors of public debt, in various ways; some for money lent and property furnished for the use of the public during the war, others for sums received in payment of debts, and it is supposable enough that some of them had been purchasers of the public debt, with intention to hold it as a valuable and convenient property, considering an honorable provision for it as a matter of course.

* Jefferson's Works, iii. 450.

"It is a strange perversion of ideas, and as novel as it is ex traordinary, that men should be deemed corrupt and criminal for becoming proprietors in the funds of their country. Yet, I believe the number of members of Congress is very small, who have ever been considerable proprietors in the funds. As to improper speculations on measures depending before Congress, I believe never was any body of men freer from them."*

On the 10th of July, Washington had a conversation with Jefferson on the subject of the letter he had recently received from him; and endeavored with his usual supervising and moderating assiduity to allay the jealousies and suspicions which were disturbing the mind of that ardent politician. These, he intimated, had been earried a great deal too far. There might be desires, he said, among a few in the higher walks of life, particularly in the great cities, to change the form of government into a monarchy, but he did not believe there were any designs; and he believed the main body of the people in the Eastern States were as steadily for republicanism as in the Southern.

He now spoke with earnestness about articles in the public papers, especially in the Gazette edited by Freneau, the object of which seemed to be to excite opposition to the government, and which had actually excited it in Pennsylvania, in regard to the excise law. "These articles," said he, feelingly, "tend to produce a separation of the Union, the most dreadful of calamities, and whatever tends to produce anarchy, tends, of course, to produce a resort to monarchical government."

* Hamilton's Works, iv. 268.

The articles in question had, it is true, been chiefly levelled at the Treasury department, but Washington accepted no immunity from attacks pointed at any department of his government; assuming that they were aimed directly at himself. "In condemning the administration of the government, they condemned me," said he, "for, if they thought these were measures pursued contrary to my sentiments, they must conceive me too careless to attend to them or too stupid to understand them."

He acknowledged, indeed, that he had signed many acts of which he did not approve in all their parts; but never had he put his hand to one which he did not think eligible, on the whole.

As to the bank which had been so much complained of, he observed that, until there was some infallible criterion of reason, a difference of opinion must be tolerated. He did not believe the discontents extended far from the seat of government. He had seen and spoken with many people in Maryland and Virginia in his late journey, and had found them contented and happy.

Jefferson's observations in reply tended, principally, to iterate and enforce what he had already urged in his letter. The two great popular complaints were, he said, that the national debt was unnecessarily increased by the Assumption, and that it had furnished the means of corrupting both branches of the legislature. In both Houses there was a considerable squadron whose votes were devoted to the paper and stock-jobbing interest. On examining the votes of these men they would be found uniformly for every treasury measure, and as most of these measures had been carried by small majorities, they had been carried by these very votes. It was a cause of just uneasiness therefore, when we saw a legislature legislating for their own interests in opposition to those of the people.

"Washington," observes Jefferson, "said not a word on the corruption of the legislature." He probably did not feel disposed to contend against what he may have considered jealous suspicions and deductions. But he took up the other point and defended the Assumption, agreeing, says Jefferson, that it had not increased the debt, for that all of it was honest debt.

He justified the excise law, too, as one of the best laws that could be passed, as nobody would pay the tax who did not choose to do it.

We give this conversation as noted down by Jefferson in his "Anas." It is one of the very few instances we have of Washington's informal discussions with the members of his cabinet, and it bears the stamp of that judgment, considerateness, delicacy, and good faith which enabled him to moderate and manage the wayward passions and impulses of able men.

Hamilton was equally strenuous with Jefferson in urging upon Washington the policy of a re-election, as it regarded the public good, and wrote to him fully on the subject. It was the opinion of every one, he alleged, with whom he had conversed, that the affairs of the national government were not yet firmly established; that its enemies, generally speaking, were as inveterate as ever; that their enmity had been sharpened by its success and all the resentments which flow from disappointed predictions and mortified vanity; that a general and strenuous effort was making in every State to place the administration of it in the hands of its enemies, as if they were its safest guardians; that the period of the next House of Representatives was likely to prove the crisis of its national character; that if Washington continued in office, nothing materially mischievous was to be apprehended; but, if he should quit, much was to be dreaded; that the same motives which had induced him to accept originally, ought to decide him to continue till matters had assumed a more determinate aspect; that, indeed, it would have been better as it regarded his own character, that he had never consented to come forward, than now to leave the business unfinished and in danger of being undone; that in the event of storms arising, there would be an imputation either of want of foresight or want of firmness; and, in fine, that on public and personal accounts, on patriotic and prudential considerations, the clear path to be pursued by him would be again to obey the voice of his country; which, it was not doubted, would be as carnest and as unanimous as ever.

In concluding his letter, Hamilton observes, "The sentiments I have delivered upon this occasion, I can truly say, proceed exclusively from an anxious concern for the public welfare and an affectionate personal attachment."

Mr. Edmund Randolph also, after a long letter on the "jeopardy of the Union," which seemed to him "at the eve of a crisis," adds: "The fuel which has been already gathered for combustion wants no addition. But how awfully might it be increased, were the violence, which is now suspended by a universal submission to your pretensions, let loose by your resignation. Permit me, then, in the fervor of a dutiful and affectionate attachment to you, to beseech you to penetrate the consequences of a dereliction of the reins. The constitution would never have been adopted but from a knowledge that you had once sanctioned it, and an expectation that you would execute it. It is in a state of probation. The most inauspicious struggles are past, but the public deliberations need stability. You alone can give them stability. You suffered yourself to yield when the voice of your country summoned you to the administration. Should a civil war arise, you cannot stay at home. And how much easier will it be to disperse the factions, which are rushing to this catastrophe, than to subdue them after they shall appear in arms? It is the fixed opinion of the world, that you surrender nothing incomplete."*

Not the cabinet, merely, divided as it was in its political opinions, but all parties, however discordant in other points, concurred in a desire that Washington should continue in office—so truly was he regarded as the choice of the nation.

But though the cabinet was united in feeling on this one subject, in other respects its dissensions were increasing in virulence. Hamilton, aggrieved by the attacks made in Freneau's paper upon his funding and banking system, his duty on home-made spirits, and other points of his financial policy, and upon himself, by holding him up as a monarchist at heart, and considering these attacks as originating in the hostility of Freneau's patron, Mr. Jefferson, addressed a note signed T. L., to the editor of the Gazette of the United States, in which he observed that the editor of the National Gazette received a salary from government, adding the significant quere-whether this salary was paid him for translations or for publications, the design of which was to vilify those to whom the voice of the people had committed the administration of our public affairs, to oppose the measures of government, and, by false insinuations, to disturb the public peace? "In common life it is thought ungrateful for a man to bite the hand that puts bread in his mouth; but, if the man is hired to do it, the case is altered."

* Washington's Writings, x. 514.

In another article, dated August 4th, Mr. Hamilton, under the signature of "An American," gave some particulars of the negotiations which ended in the establishment of the National Gazette, devoted to the interests of a certain party, of which Mr Jefferson was the head. "An experiment," said he, "somewhat new in the history of political manœuvres in this country; a newspaper instituted by a public officer, and the editor of it regularly pensioned with the public money in the disposal of that officer. But, it may be asked—is it possible that Mr. Jefferson, the head of a principal department of the government, can be the patron of a paper, the evident object of which is to decry the government and its measures? If he disapproves of the government itself, and thinks it deserving of his opposition, can he reconcile it to his own personal dignity and the principles of probity, to hold an office under it, and employ the means of official influence in that opposition? If he disapproves of the leading measures which have been adopted in the course of his administration, can he reconcile it with the principles of delicacy and propriety, to hold a place in that administration, and at the same time to be instrumental in vilifying measures which have been adopted by majorities of both branches of the legislature, and sanctioned by the chief magistrate of the Union?"

This attack brought out an affidavit from Mr. Freneau, in which he declared that his coming to Philadelphia was his own voluntary act; that, as an editor of a newspaper, he had never been urged, advised, or influenced by Mr. Jefferson, and that not a single line of his Gazette was ever directly or indirectly written, dictated, or composed for it, by the Secretary of State.

Washington had noticed this growing feud with excessive pain, and at length found it necessary to interfere and attempt a reconciliation between the warring parties. In the course of a letter to Jefferson (Aug. 23d), on the subject of Indian hostilities, and the possibility of their being furnished by foreign agents o check, as far as possible, the rapid increase, extension, and consequence of the United States, "How unfortunate then," observes he, "and how much to be regretted that, while we are encompassed on all sides with armed enemics and insidious friends, internal dissensions should be harrowing and tearing our vitals. The latter, to me, is the most serious, the most alarming and the most afflicting of the two; and without more charity for the opinions and acts of one another in governmental matters, or some more infallible criterion by which the truth of speculative opinions, before they have undergone the test of experience, are to be prejudged, than has yet fallen to the lot of fallibility, I believe it will be difficult, if not impracticable, to manage the reins of government, or to keep the parts of it together; for if, instead of laying our shoulders to the machine after measures are decided on, one pulls this way and another that, before the utility of the thing is fairly tried, it must inevitably be torn asunder; and, in my opinion, the fairest prospect of happiness and prosperity that ever was presented to man, will be lost perhaps forever.

"My earnest wish and fondest hope, therefore, is, that instead of wounding suspicions and irritating charges, there may be liberal allowances, mutual forbearances, and temporizing yieldings on all sides. Under the exercise of these, matters will go on smoothly, and, if possible, more prosperously. Without them, every thing must rub; the wheels of government will clog; our enemies will triumph, and, by throwing their weight into the dis affected scale, may accomplish the ruin of the goodly fabric we have been erecting."

Admonitions to the same purport were addressed by him to Hamilton. "Having premised these things," adds he, "I would fain hope that liberal allowances will be made for the political opinions of each other; and, instead of those wounding suspicions and irritating charges, with which some of our gazettes are so strongly impregnated, and which cannot fail, if persevered in, of pushing matters to extremity, and thereby tearing the machine asunder, that there may be mutual forbearance and temporizing yielding on all sides. Without these I do not see how the reins of government are to be managed, or how the Union of the States can be much longer preserved."

"I do not mean to apply this advice to any measures which are passed, or to any particular character. I have given it in the same general terms to other officers of the government. My earnest wish is, that balsam may be poured into all the wounds which have been given, to prevent them from gangrening, and from those fatal consequences, which the community may sustain if it is withheld."*

Hamilton was prompt and affectionate in his reply, expressing sincere regret at the circumstances which had given rise to the uneasy sensations experienced by Washington. "It is my most anxious wish," writes he, "as far as may depend upon me, to smooth the path of your administration, and to render it prosperous and happy. And, if any prospect shall open of healing or terminating the differences which exist, I shall most cheerfully embrace it; though I consider myself as the deeply injured party.

* Writings, x. p. 284.

The recommendation of such a spirit is worthy of the moderation and wisdom which dictated it."

He then frankly acknowledged that he had had "some instrumentality" in the retaliations which of late had fallen upon certain public characters.

"I considered myself compelled to this conduct," adds he, "by reasons public as well as personal, of the most cogent na-I know I have been an object of uniform opposition from Mr. Jefferson, from the moment of his coming to the city of New York to enter upon his present office. I know, from the most authentic sources, that I have been the frequent subject of the most unkind whispers and insinuations from the same quarter. I have long seen a formed party in the legislature under his auspices, bent upon my subversion. I cannot doubt, from the evidence I possess, that the National Gazette was instituted by him for political purposes, and that one leading object of it has been to render me and all the measures connected with my department as odious as possible." "Nevertheless," proceeds he, "I can truly say, that, excepting explanations to confidential friends, I never, directly or indirectly, retaliated or countenanced retaliation till very lately. * But when I no longer doubted that there was a formed party deliberately bent upon the subversion of measures which, in its consequences, would subvert the government; when I saw that the undoing of the funding system in particular, (which, whatever may be the original measures of that system, would prostrate the credit and honor of the nation, and bring the government into contempt with that description of men who are in every society the only firm supporters of government,) was an avowed object of the party; and that all possible pains were taken to produce that effect, by rendering it odious to the body of the people, I considered it a duty to endeavor to resist the torrent, and, as an effectual means to this end, to draw aside the veil from the principal actors. To this strong impulse, to this decided conviction, I have yielded; and I think events will prove that I have judged rightly."

"Nevertheless, I pledge my hand to you, sir, that, if you shall hereafter form a plan to re-unite the members of your administration upon some steady principle of co-operation, I will faithfully concur in executing it during my continuance in office. And I will not, directly or indirectly, say or do a thing that shall endanger a feud."

Jefferson, too, in a letter of the same date, assured Washington that to no one had the dissensions of the Cabinet given deeper concern than to himself-to no one equal mortification at being himself a part of them. His own grievances, which led to those dissensions, he traced back to the time when Hamilton, in the spring of 1790, procured his influence to effect a change in the vote on Assumption. "When I embarked in the government," writes he, "it was with a determination to intermeddle not at all with the legislature, and as little as possible with my co-departments. The first and only instance of variance from the former part of my resolution, I was duped into by the Secretary of the Treasury, and made a tool for forwarding his schemes, not then sufficiently understood by me; and of all the errors of my political life, this has occasioned me the deepest regret." "If it has been supposed that I have ever intrigued among the members of the legislature to defeat the plans of the Secretary of That I have the Treasury, it is contrary to all truth. * utterly, in my private conversations, disapproved of the system of the Secretary of the Treasury, I acknowledge and avow; and this was not merely a speculative difference. His system flowed from principles adverse to liberty, and was calculated to undermine and demolish the republic by creating an influence of his department over the members of the legislature."

In regard to Freneau's Gazette, Mr. Jefferson absolutely denied that he had set it up, but admitted that, on its first establishment, and subsequently from time to time, he had furnished the editor with the Leyden Gazette, requesting that he would always translate and publish the material intelligence contained in them. "But as to any other direction or indication," adds he, "of my wish how his press should be conducted, what sort of intelligence he should give, what essays encourage, I can protest, in the presence of Heaven, that I never did, by myself or any other, directly or indirectly, say a syllable, nor attempt any kind of influence. I can further protest, in the same awful presence, that I never did, by myself or any other, directly or indirectly, write, dictate, or procure any one sentence or sentiment to be inserted in his or any other Gazette, to which my name was not affixed, or that of my office.

"Freneau's proposition to publish a paper having been about the time that the writings of Publicola and the Discourses on Davila had a good deal excited the public attention, I took it for granted, from Freneau's character, which had been marked as that of a good Whig, that he would give free place to pieces written against the aristocratical and monarchical principles these papers had inculcated.

"As to the merits or demerits of his paper, they certainly concern me not. He and Fenno [editor of the United States Gazette] are rivals for the public favor; the one courts them by flattery, the other by censure; and I believe it will be admitted that the one has been as servile as the other severe. But is not the dignity and even decency of government committed, when one of its principal ministers enlists himself as an anonymous writer or paragraphist for either the one or the other of them?"

Mr. Jefferson considered himself particularly aggrieved by charges against him in Fenno's Gazette, which he ascribed to the pen of Mr. Hamilton, and intimated the possibility, that after his retirement from office, he might make an appeal to the country, should his own justification or the interests of the Republic require it, subscribing his name to whatever he might write, and using with freedom and truth the facts and names necessary to place the cause in its just form before that tribunal. thorough disregard of the honors and emoluments of office, I join as great a value for the esteem of my countrymen; and conscious of having merited it by an integrity which cannot be reproached, and by an enthusiastic devotion to their rights and liberty, I will not suffer my retirement to be clouded by the slanders of a man, whose history, from the moment at which history can stoop to notice him, is a tissue of machinations against the liberty of the country which has not only received and given him bread, but heaped its honors on his head."

Washington's solicitude for harmony in his cabinet had been rendered more anxious by public disturbances in some parts of the country. The excise law on ardent spirits distilled within the United States, had, from the time of its enactment by Congress in 1791, met with opposition from the inhabitants of the Western counties of Pennsylvania. It had been modified and rendered less offensive within the present year; but the hostility to it had continued. Combinations were formed to defeat the execution of it, and the revenue officers were riotously opposed in the execution of their duties.

Determined to exert all the legal powers with which he was invested to check so daring and unwarrantable a spirit, Washington, on the 15th of September, issued a proclamation, warning all persons to desist from such unlawful combinations and proceedings, and requiring all courts, magistrates, and officers to bring the infractors of the law to justice; copies of which proclamation were sent to the governors of Pennsylvania and of North and South Carolina.

On the 18th of October, Washington made one more effort to allay the discord in his cabinet. Finding it impossible for the rival secretaries to concur in any system of politics, he urged them to accommodate their differences by mutual yieldings. "A measure of this sort," observed he, "would produce harmony and consequent good in our public councils, and the contrary will inevitably produce confusion and serious mischiefs; and all for what? Because mankind cannot think alike, but would adopt different means to attain the same end. For I will frankly and solemnly declare, that I believe the views of both to be pure and well meant, and that experience only will decide with respect to the salutariness of the measures which are the subjects of this dispute."

"Why, then, when some of the best citizens of the United States—men of discernment—uniform and tried patriots—who have no sinister views to promote, but are chaste in their ways of thinking and acting, are to be found, some on one side and some on the other of the questions which have caused these agitations—why should either of you be so tenacious of your opinions as to make no allowance for those of the other? * * * *

"I have a great, a sincere esteem and regard for you both; and ardently wish that some line could be marked out by which both of you could walk."

CHAPTER XVII.

WASHINGTON UNANIMOUSLY RE-ELECTED—OPENING OF SESSION OF CONGRESS

—TOPICS OF THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH—ABORTIVE ATTACK UPON THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY—WASHINGTON INSTALLED FOR HIS SECOND TERM.

It was after a long and painful conflict of feelings that Washington consented to be a candidate for a re-election. There was no opposition on the part of the public, and the vote for him in the Electoral College was unanimous. In a letter to a friend, he declared himself gratefully impressed by so distinguished and honorable a testimony of public approbation and confidence. In truth he had been apprehensive of being elected by but a meagre majority, which he acknowledged would have been a matter of chagrin.

George Clinton, of New York, was held up for the Vicepresidency, in opposition to John Adams; but the latter was reelected by a majority of twenty-seven electoral votes.

But though gratified to find that the hearts of his countrymen were still with him, it was with no emotion of pleasure that Washington looked forward to another term of public duty, and a prolonged absence from the quiet retirement of Mount Vernon. The session of Congress, which was to close his present term, opened on the fifth of November. The continuance of the Indian war formed a painful topic in the President's address. Efforts at pacification had as yet been unsuccessful: two brave officers, Colonel Hardin and Major Trueman, who had been sent to negotiate with the savages, had been severally murdered. Vigorous preparations were therefore making for an active prosecution of hostilities, in which Wayne was to take the field. Washington, with benevolent earnestness, dwelt upon the humane system of civilizing the tribes, by inculcating agricultural tastes and habits.

The factious and turbulent opposition which had been made in some parts of the country to the collection of duties on spirituous liquors distilled in the United States, was likewise adverted to by the President, and a determination expressed to assert and maintain the just authority of the laws; trusting in the "full cooperation of the other departments of government, and the zealous support of all good citizens."

In a part of the speech addressed to the House of Representatives, he expressed a strong hope that the state of the national finances was now sufficiently matured to admit of an arrangement for the redemption and discharge of the public debt. "No measure," said he, "can be more desirable, whether viewed with an eye to its intrinsic importance, or to the general sentiment and wish of the nation."

The address was well received by both houses, and a disposition expressed to concur with the President's views and wishes. The discussion of the subjects to which he had called their attention, soon produced vehement conflicts of opinion in the house, marking the growing virulence of parties. The Secretary of the Treasury, in reporting, at the request of the House, a plan for the annual reduction of so much of the national debt as the United States had a right to redeem, spoke of the expenses of the Indian war, and the necessity of additional internal taxes. The consideration of the report was parried or evaded, and a motion made to reduce the military establishment. This gave an opportunity for sternly criticizing the mode in which the Indian war had been conducted; for discussing the comparative merits and cost of regular and militia forces, and for inveighing against standing armies, as dangerous to liberty. These discussions, while they elicited much heat, led to no present result, and gave way to an inquiry into the conduct of the Secretary of the Treasury in regard to certain loans, which the President, in conformity to acts of Congress, had authorized him to make; but concerning the management of which he had not furnished detailed reports to the legislature.

The subject was opened by Mr. Giles, of Virginia, who moved in the House of Representatives a series of resolutions seeking information in the matter, and who followed his resolutions by a speech, charging the Secretary of the Treasury with official misconduct, and intimating that a large balance of public money had not been accounted for.

A report of the Secretary gave all the information desired; but the charges against him continued to be urged with great acrimony to the close of the session, when they were signally rejected, not more than sixteen members voting for any one of them.

The veneration inspired by the character of Washington, and the persuasion that he would never permit himself to be considered the head of a party, had hitherto shielded him from attack; a little circumstance, however, showed that the rancor of party was beginning to glance at him.

On his birth-day (Feb. 22) many of the members of Congress were desirous of waiting on him in testimony of respect as chief magistrate of the Union, and a motion was made to adjourn for half an hour for the purpose. It met with serious opposition as a species of homage—it was setting up an idol dangerous to liberty—it had a bias towards monarchy!

Washington, though he never courted popularity, was attentive to the signs of public opinion, and disposed to be guided by them when right. The time for entering upon his second term of Presidency was at hand. There had been much cavilling at the parade attending his first installation. Jefferson especially had pronounced it "not at all in character with the simplicity of republican government, and looking, as if wishfully, to those of European Courts."

To guide him on the coming occasion, Washington called the heads of departments together, and desired they would consult with one another, and agree on any changes they might consider for the better, assuring them he would willingly conform to whatever they should advise.

They held such consultation, and ultimately gave their individual opinions in writing, with regard to the time, manner, and place of the President's taking the oath of office. As they were divided in opinion, and gave no positive advice as to any change, no change was made. On the 4th of March, the oath was publicly administered to Washington by Mr. Justice Cushing, in the Senate Chamber, in presence of the heads of departments, foreign ministers, such members of the House of Representatives as were in town, and as many other spectators as could be accommodated

CHAPTER XVIII.

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS MINISTER AT THE FRENCH COURT—HIS REPRESENTATIONS OF THE STATE OF AFFAIRS—WASHINGTON'S CONCERN FOR LAFAYETTE—JEFFERSON ANNOYED AT HIS FOREBODINGS—OVERTHROW OF THE FRENCH MONARCHY—IMPRISONMENT OF LAFAYETTE—JEFFERSON CONCERNED, BUT NOT DISCOURAGED AT THE REPUBLICAN MASSACRES—WASHINGTON SHOCKED —HIS LETTER TO THE MARCHIONESS LAFAYETTE.

EARLY in 1792, Gouverneur Morris had received the appointment of minister plenipotentiary to the French court. His diplomatic correspondence from Paris gave shocking accounts of the excesses attending the revolution. France, he represented as governed by Jacobin clubs. Lafayette, by endeavoring to check their excesses, had completely lost his authority. "Were he to appear just now in Paris, unattended by his army," writes Morris, "he would be torn to pieces." Washington received these accounts with deep oncern. What was to be the fate of that distracted country—what was to be the fate of his friend!

Jefferson was impatient of these gloomy picturings; especially when he saw their effect upon Washington's mind. "The fact is," writes he, "that Gouverneur Morris, a high-flying monarchy man, shutting his eyes and his faith to every fact against his wishes, and believing every thing he desires to be true, has kept the President's mind constantly poisoned with his forebodings."

His forebodings, however, were soon verified. Lafayette addressed from his camp, a letter to the Legislative Assembly formally denouncing the conduct of the Jacobin club as violating the declaration of rights and the constitution.

His letter was of no avail. On the 20th of June bands from the Faubourg St. Antoine, armed with pikes, and headed by Santerre, marched to the Tuileries, insulted the king in the presence of his family, obliging him to put on the bonnet rouge, the baleful cap of liberty of the revolution. Lafayette, still loyal to his sovereign, hastened to Paris, appeared at the bar of the Assembly, and demanded, in the name of the army, the punishment of those who had thus violated the constitution, by insulting in his palace, the chief of the executive power. His intervention proved of no avail, and he returned with a sad and foreboding heart to his army.

On the 9th of August, Paris was startled by the sound of the fatal toesin at midnight. On the 10th the chateau of the Tuileries was attacked, and the Swiss guard who defended it, were massacred. The king and queen took refuge in the National Assembly, which body decreed the suspension of the king's authority.

It was at once the overthrow of the monarchy, the annihilation of the constitutional party, and the commencement of the reign of terror. Lafayette, who was the head of the constitutionalists, was involved in their downfall. The Jacobins denounced him in the National Assembly; his arrest was decreed, and emissaries were sent to carry the decree into effect. At first he thought of repairing at once to Paris and facing his accusers, but, on second thoughts, determined to bend before the storm and await the return of more propitious days.

Leaving every thing in order in his army, which remained encamped at Sedan, he set off with a few trusty friends for the Netherlands, to seek an asylum in Holland or the United States, but, with his companions, was detained a prisoner at Rochefort, the first Austrian post.

"Thus his circle is completed," writes Morris. "He has spent his fortune on a revolution, and is now crushed by the wheel which he put in motion. He lasted longer than I expected."

Washington looked with a sadder eye on this catastrophe of Lafayette's high-hearted and gallant aspirations, and mourned over the adverse fortunes of his friend.

The reign of terror continued. "We have had one week of unchecked murders, in which some thousands have perished in this city," writes Morris to Jefferson, on the 10th of September. "It began with between two and three hundred of the clergy, who had been shot because they would not take the oaths prescribed by the law, and which they said, were contrary to their conscience." Thence these executors of speedy justice went to the abbaye where persons were confined who were at court on the 10th of August. These were despatched also, and afterwards they visited the other prisons. "All those who were confined either on the accusation or suspicion of crimes, were destroyed."

The accounts of these massacres grieved Mr. Jefferson. They were shocking in themselves, and he feared they might bring great discredit upon the Jacobins of France, whom he considered republican patriots, bent on the establishment of a free constitution. They had acquiesced for a time, said he, in the ex periment of retaining an hereditary executive, but finding, if pursued, it would ensure the re-establishment of a despotism, they considered it absolutely indispensable to expunge that office. "In the struggle which was necessary, many guilty persons fell without the forms of trial, and with them, some innocent. These I deplore as much as anybody, and shall deplore some of them to the day of my death. But I deplore them as I should have done had they fallen in battle. It was necessary to use the arm of the people, a machine not quite so blind as balls and bombs, but blind to a certain degree. A few of their cordial friends met at their hands the fate of enemies. But time and truth will rescue and embalm their memories, while their posterity will be enjoying that very liberty for which they would never have hesitated to offer up their lives. The liberty of the whole earth was depending on the issue of the contest, and was ever such a prize won with so little innocent blood? My own affections have been deeply wounded by some of the martyrs to this cause, but rather than it should have failed, I would have seen half the earth desolated; were there but an Adam and Eve left in every country, and left free, it would be better than as it now is."*

Washington, who contemplated the French revolution with a less sanguine eye than Jefferson, was simply shocked at the atrocities which disgraced it, and at the dangers to be apprehended from an unrestrained populace. A letter which he received from Gouverneur Morris (dated October 23d), placed the condition of the unfortunate Louis XVI., the ancient friend and ally of America, in a light to awaken his benevolent sympathy.

* Letter to Mr. Short. Jefferson's Works, iii. 501.

"You will have seen," writes Morris, "that the king is accused of high crimes and misdemeanors; but I verily believe that he wished sincerely for this nation, the enjoyment of the utmost degree of liberty, which their situation and circumstances will permit. He wished for a good constitution, but, unfortunately, he had not the means to obtain it, or, if he had, he was thwarted by those about him. What may be his fate God only knows, but history informs us that the passage of dethroned monarchs is short from the prison to the grave."

Nothing, however, in all the eventful tidings from France, gave Washington greater concern than the catastrophe of his friend Lafayette. His first thoughts prompted the consolation and assistance of the marchioness. In a letter to her, he writes: "If I had words that could convey to you an adequate idea of my feelings on the present situation of the Marquis Lafayette, this letter would appear to you in a different garb. The sole object in writing to you now, is to inform you that I have deposited in the hands of Mr. Nicholas Van Staphorst of Amsterdam, two thousand three hundred and ten guilders, Holland currency, equal to two hundred guineas, subject to your orders.

"This sum is, I am certain, the least I am indebted for services rendered me by the Marquis de Lafayette, of which I never yet have received the account. I could add much, but it is best, perhaps, that I should say little on this subject. Your goodness will supply my deficiency.

"The uncertainty of your situation, after all the inquiries I have made, has occasioned a delay in this address and remittance; and even now the measure adopted is more the effect of a desire to find where you are, than from any knowledge I have obtained of your residence."

Madame de Lafayette, in fact, was at that time a prisoner in France, in painful ignorance of her husband's fate. She had been commanded by the Jacobin committee to repair to Paris about the time of the massacres, but was subsequently permitted to reside at Chavaniac, under the surveillance of the municipality.

We will anticipate events by adding here, that some time afterwards, finding her husband was a prisoner in Austria, she obtained permission to leave France, and ultimately, with her two daughters, joined him in his prison at Olmutz. George Washington Lafayette, the son of the General, determined to seek an asylum in America.

In the mean time, the arms of revolutionary France were crowned with great success. "Towns fall before them without a blow," writes Gouverneur Morris, "and the declaration of rights produces an effect equal at least to the trumpets of Joshua." But Morris was far from drawing a favorable augury from this success. "We must observe the civil, moral, religious, and political institutions," said he. "These have a steady and lasting effect, and these only. * Since I have been in this country, I have seen the worship of many idols, and but little of the true God. I have seen many of those idols broken, and some of them beaten to dust. I have seen the late constitution, in one short year, admired as a stupendous monument of human wisdom, and ridiculed as an egregious production of folly and vice. I wish much, very much, the happiness of this inconstant people. I love them. I feel grateful for their efforts in our cause, and I consider the establishment of a good constitution here as the principal means, under Divine Providence, of extending the blessings of freedom to the many millions of my fellow-men, who groan in bondage on the continent of Europe. But I do not greatly indulge the flattering illusions of hope, because I do not yet perceive that reformation of morals, without which, liberty is but an empty sound."*

* Life of Morris, ii. 248.

CHAPTER XIX.

WASHINGTON'S ENTRANCE UPON HIS SECOND TERM—GLOOMY AUSPICES—EXECUTION OF LOUIS XVI.—FRANCE DECLARES WAR AGAINST ENGLAND—BELLIGERENT EXCITEMENT IN AMERICA—PROCLAMATION OF NEUTRALITY—FRENCH MISSION TO THE UNITED STATES—GENET ARRIVES IN CHARLESTON —HIS RECEPTION IN PHILADELPHIA—VIEWS OF JEFFERSON AND HAMILTON—WASHINGTON'S DISPASSIONATE OPINION.

It was under gloomy auspices, a divided cabinet, an increasing exasperation of parties, a suspicion of monarchical tendencies, and a threatened abatement of popularity, that Washington entered upon his second term of presidency. It was a portentous period in the history of the world, for in a little while came news of that tragical event, the beheading of Louis XVI. It was an event deplored by many of the truest advocates of liberty in America, who, like Washington, remembered that unfortunate monarch as the friend of their country in her revolutionary struggle; but others, zealots in the cause of political reform, considered it with complacency, as sealing the downfall of the French monarchy and the establishment of a republic.

An event followed hard upon it to shake the quiet of the world. Early in April intelligence was received that France had declared war against England. Popular excitement was now wound up to the highest pitch. What, it was asked, were Amer icans to do in such a juncture? Could they remain unconcerned spectators of a conflict between their ancient enemy and republican France? Should they fold their arms and look coldly on a war, begun, it is true, by France, but threatening the subversion of the republic, and the re-establishment of a monarchical government?

Many, in the wild enthusiasm of the moment, would at once have precipitated the country into a war. Fortunately this belligerent impulse was not general, and was checked by the calm, controlling wisdom of Washington. He was at Mount Vernon when he received news of the war, and understood that American vessels were already designated, and some even fitting out to serve in it as privateers. He forthwith despatched a letter to Jefferson on the subject. "War having actually commenced between France and Great Britain," writes he, "it behooves the government of this country to use every means in its power to prevent the citizens thereof from embroiling us with either of those powers, by endeavoring to maintain a strict neutrality."

Hastening back to Philadelphia, he held a cabinet council on the 19th of April, to deliberate on the measures proper to be observed by the United States in the present crisis; and to determine upon a general plan of conduct for the Executive.

In this council it was unanimously determined that a proclamation should be issued by the President, "forbidding the citizens of the United States to take part in any hostilities on the seas, and warning them against carrying to the belligerents any articles deemed contraband according to the modern usages of nations, and forbidding all acts and proceedings inconsistent with the duties of a friendly nation towards those at war." It was unanimously agreed also, that should the republic of France send a minister to the United States, he should be received.

No one at the present day questions the wisdom of Washington's proclamation of neutrality. It was our true policy to keep aloof from European war, in which our power would be inefficient, our loss certain. The measure, however, was at variance with the enthusiastic feelings and excited passions of a large portion of the citizens. They treated it for a time with some forbearance, out of long-cherished reverence for Washington's name; but his popularity, hitherto unlimited, was no proof against the inflamed state of public feeling. The proclamation was stigmatized as a royal edict; a daring assumption of power; an open manifestation of partiality for England and hostility to France.

Washington saw that a deadly blow was aimed at his influence and his administration, and that both were at hazard; but he was convinced that neutrality was the true national policy, and he resolved to maintain it, whatever might be his immediate loss of popular favor. His resolution was soon put to the test.

The French republic had recently appointed Edmond Charles Genet, or 'Citizen Genet,' as he was styled, minister to the United States. He was represented as a young man of good parts, very well educated, and of an ardent temper. He had served in the bureau of Foreign Affairs under the ministry of Vergennes, and been employed in various diplomatic situations until the overthrow of the monarchy, when he joined the popular party, became a political zealot, and member of the Jacobin club, and was rewarded with the mission to America.

A letter from Gouverneur Morris apprised Mr. Jefferson that the Executive Council had furnished Genet with three hundred blank commissions for privateers, to be given clandestinely to such persons as he might find in America inclined to take them. "They suppose," writes Morris, "that the avidity of some adventurers may lead them into measures which would involve altercations with Great Britain, and terminate finally in a war."

Genet's conduct proved the correctness of this information He had landed at Charleston, South Carolina, from the French frigate the Ambuscade, on the 8th of April, a short time before the proclamation of neutrality, and was received with great rejoicing and extravagant demonstrations of respect. His landing at a port several hundred miles from the seat of government, was a singular move for a diplomat; but his object in so doing was soon evident. It is usual for a foreign minister to present his credentials to the government to which he comes, and be received by it in form before he presumes to enter upon the exercise of his functions. Citizen Genet, however, did not stop for these formalities. Confident in his nature, heated in his zeal, and flushed with the popular warmth of his reception, he could not pause to consider the proprieties of his mission and the delicate responsibilities involved in diplomacy. The contiguity of Charleston to the West Indies made it a favorable port for fitting out privateers against the trade of these islands; and during Genet's short sojourn there he issued commissions for arming and equipping vessels of war for that purpose, and manning them with Americans.

In the latter part of April, Genet set out for the north by land. As he proceeded on his journey, the newspapers teemed with accounts of the processions and addresses with which he was greeted, and the festivities which celebrated his arrival at each place. Jefferson, in a letter to Madison written from Philadelphia on the 5th of May, observes with exultation: "The war between France and England seems to be producing an effect not contemplated. All the old spirit of 1776, rekindling the newspapers from Boston to Charleston, proves this; and even the monocrat papers are obliged to publish the most furious philippics against England. A French frigate * took a British prize [the Grange] off the Capes of Delaware the other day, and sent her up here. Upon her coming into sight, thousands and thousands of the yeomanry of the city crowded and covered the wharves. Never was there such a crowd seen there; and when the British colors were seen reversed, and the French flying above them, they burst into peals of exultation. I wish we may be able to repress the spirit of the people within the limits of a fair neutrality.

* * We expect Genet daily."

A friend of Hamilton writes in a different vein. Speaking of Genet, he observes: "He has a good person, a fine ruddy complexion, quite active, and seems always in a bustle, more like a busy man than a man of business. A Frenchman in his manners, he announces himself in all companies as the minister of the republic, etc., talks freely of his commission, and, like most Europeans, seems to have adopted mistaken notions of the penetration and knowledge of the people of the United States. His system, I think, is to laugh us into the war if he can."

On the 16th of May, Genet arrived at Philadelphia. His belligerent operations at Charleston had already been made a subject of complaint to the government by Mr. Hammond, the British minister; but they produced no abatement in the public enthusiasm. "It was suspected," writes Jefferson, "that there was not a clear mind in the President's counsellors to receive Genet. The citizens, however, determined to receive him. Arrangements were taken for meeting him at Gray's Ferry, in a great body. He escaped that, by arriving in town with the letters which brought information that he was on the road." *

* The Ambuscade.

On the following day, various societies and a large body of citizens waited upon him with addresses, recalling with gratitude the aid given by France in the achievement of American independence, and extolling and rejoicing in the success of the arms of the French republic. On the same day, before Genet had presented his credentials and been acknowledged by the President, he was invited to a grand republican dinner, "at which," we are told, "the company united in singing the Marseilles Hymn. A deputation of French sailors presented themselves, and were received by the guests with the 'fraternal embrace.' The table was decorated with the 'tree of liberty,' and a red cap, called the cap of liberty, was placed on the head of the minister, and from his travelled in succession from head to head round the table." †

This enthusiasm of the multitude was regarded with indulgence, if not favor, by Jefferson, as being the effervescence of the true spirit of liberty; but was deprecated by Hamilton as an infatuation that might "do us much harm, and could do France no good." A letter, written by him at the time, is worthy of full citation, as embodying the sentiments of that party of which be was the leader. "It cannot be without danger and inconvenience to our interests, to impress on the nations of Europe an idea that we are actuated by the same spirit which has for some time past fatally misguided the measures of those who conduct the affairs of France, and sullied a cause once glorious, and that might have been triumphant. The cause of France is compared with that of America during its late revolution. Would to Heaven that the comparison were just! Would to Heaven we could discern, in the mirror of French affairs, the same decorum, the same gravity, the same order, the same dignity, the same solemnity, which distinguished the cause of the American Revolution! Clouds and darkness would not then rest upon the issue as they now do. I own I do not like the comparison. When I contemplate the horrid and systematic massacres of the 2d and 3d of September; when I observe that a Marat and a Robespierre, the notorious prompters of those bloody scenes, sit triumphantly in the convention, and take a conspicuous part in its measures-that an attempt to bring the assassins to justice has been obliged to be abandoned-when I see an unfortunate prince, whose reign was a continued demonstration of the goodness and benevolence of his heart, of his attachment to the people of whom he was the monarch, who, though educated in the lap of despotism, had given repeated proofs that he was not the enemy of liberty, brought precipitately and ignominiously to the block without any substantial proof of guilt, as yet disclosed-without even an authentic exhibition of motives, in decent regard to the opinions of mankind; when I find the doctrines of atheism openly advanced in the convention, and heard with loud applauses; when I see the sword of fanaticism extended to force a political creed upon citizens who were invited to submit to the arms of France as the harbingers of liberty; when I behold the hand of rapacity outstretched to prostrate and ravish the monuments of religious worship, erected by those citizens and their ancestors; when I perceive passion, tumult and violence usurping those seats, where reason and cool deliberation ought to preside, I acknowledge that I am glad to believe there is no real resemblance between what was the cause of America and what is the cause of France; that the difference is no less great than that between liberty and licentiousness. I regret whatever has a tendency to confound them, and I feel anxious, as an American, that the ebullitions of inconsiderate men among us may not tend to involve our reputation in the issue."*

* Letter to Madison, Works iii. 562. † Jay's Life, vol. i., p. 301.

Washington, from his elevated and responsible situation, endeavored to look beyond the popular excitement, and regard the affairs of France with a dispassionate and impartial eye, but he confessed that he saw in the turn they had lately taken the probability of a terrible confusion, to which he could predict no certain issue: a boundless ocean whence no land was to be seen. He feared less, he said, for the cause of liberty in France from the pressure of foreign enemies, than from the strifes and quarrels of those in whose hands the government was intrusted, who were ready to tear each other to pieces, and would more probably prove the worst foes the country had.

* Hamilton's Works, v. 566.

CHAPTER XX.

GENET PRESENTS HIS LETTER OF CREDENCE—HIS DIPLOMATIC SPEECH—WASHINGTON'S CONVERSATION WITH JEFFERSON—CAPTURE OF THE SHIP GRANGE AND OTHER BRITISH VESSELS—QUESTION OF RESTITUTION—DISSATISFACTION OF GENET—DEMANDS RELEASE OF TWO AMERICAN CITIZENS—WASHINGTON'S SENSITIVENESS TO THE ATTACKS OF THE PRESS—HIS UNSHAKEN DETERMINATION.

On the 18th of May, Genet presented his letter of credence to the President; by whom, notwithstanding his late unwarrantable proceedings at Charleston, he was well received; Washington taking the occasion to express his sincere regard for the French nation.

Jefferson, who, as Secretary of State, was present, had all his warm sympathies in favor of France, roused by Genet's diplomatic speech. "It was impossible," writes he to Madison, "for any thing to be more affectionate, more magnanimous, than the purport of Genet's mission. 'We wish you to do nothing,' said he, 'but what is for your own good, and we will do all in our power to promote it. Cherish your own peace and prosperity. You have expressed a willingness to enter into a more liberal commerce with us; I bring full powers to form such a treaty, and a preliminary decree of the National Convention to lay open our country and its colonies to you, for every purpose of utility, without your participating the burthens of maintaining and defending them. We see in you, the only person on earth who can love us sincerely, and merit to be so loved.' In short, he offers every thing and asks nothing."

"Yet I know the offers will be opposed," adds Jefferson, "and suspect they will not be accepted. In short, my dear sir, it is impossible for you to conceive what is passing in our conclave; and it is evident that one or two, at least, under pretence of avoiding war on the one side, have no great antipathy to run foul of it on the other, and to make a part in the confederacy of princes against human liberty."

The 'one or two,' in the paragraph above cited, no doubt, imply Hamilton and Knox.

Washington again, in conversation, endeavored to counteract these suspicions which were swaying Jefferson's mind against his contemporaries. We give Jefferson's own account of the conversation. "He (Washington) observed that, if anybody wanted to change the form of our government into a monarchy, he was sure it was only a few individuals, and that no man in the United States would set his face against it, more than himself; but, that this was not what he was afraid of; his fears were from another quarter; that there was more danger of anarchy being introduced."

He then adverted to Freneau's paper and its partisan hostilities. He despised, he said, all personal attacks upon himself, but observed that there never had been an act of the government which that paper had not abused. "He was evidently sore and warm," adds Jefferson, "and I took his intention to be, that I should interpose in some way with Freneau; perhaps, withdraw his appointment of translating clerk in my office. But I will not do it."

It appears to us rather an ungracious determination on the part of Jefferson, to keep this barking cur in his employ, when he found him so annoying to the chief, whom he professed, and we believe with sincerity, to revere. Neither are his reasons for so doing satisfactory, savoring, as they do, of those strong political suspicions already noticed. "His (Freneau's) paper," observed he, "has saved our constitution, which was galloping fast into monarchy, and has been checked by no means so powerfully as by that paper. It is well and universally known, that it has been that paper which checked the career of the monocrats; the President, not sensible of the designs of the party, has not, with his usual good sense and sang froid, looked on the efforts and effects of this free press, and seen that, though some bad things have passed through it to the public, yet the good have preponderated immensely."*

Jefferson was mistaken. Washington had regarded the efforts and effects of this free press with his usual good sense; and the injurious influence it exercised in public affairs, was presently manifested in the transactions of the government with Genet. The acts of this diplomatic personage at Charleston, had not been the sole ground of the complaint preferred by the British minister. The capture of the British vessel, the Grange, by the frigate Ambuscade, formed a graver one. Occurring within our waters, it was a clear usurpation of national sovereignty, and a violation of neutral rights. The British minister demanded a restitution of the prize, and the cabinet were unanimously of opinion that restitution should be made; nor was there any difficulty with the French minister on this head; but restitution was likewise claimed of other vessels captured on the high seas, and brought into port by the privateers authorized by Genet. In regard to these there was a difference of sentiment in the cabinet. Hamilton and Knox were of opinion that the government should interpose to restore the prizes; it being the duty of a neutral nation to remedy any injury sustained by armaments fitted out in its ports. Jefferson and Randolph contended that the case should be left to the decision of the courts of justice. courts adjudged the commissions issued by Genet to be invalid, they would, of course, decide the captures made under them to be void, and the property to remain in the original owners; if, on the other hand, the legal right to the property had been transferred to the captors, they would so decide.

* Works, ix. 143.

Seeing this difference of opinion in the cabinet, Washington reserved the point for further deliberation; but directed the Secretary of State to communicate to the ministers of France and Britain, the principles in which they concurred; these being considered as settled. Circular letters, also, were addressed to the Governors of several States, requiring their co-operation, with force, if necessary, to carry out the rules agreed upon.

Genet took umbrage at these decisions of the government, and expressed his dissatisfaction in a letter, complaining of them as violations of natural right, and subversive of the existing treaties between the two nations. His letter, though somewhat wanting in strict decorum of language, induced a review of the subject in the cabinet; and he was informed that no reason appeared for changing the system adopted. He was further informed that in the opinion of the executive, the vessels which had been illegally equipped, should depart from the ports of the United States.

Genet was not disposed to acquiesce in these decisions. He was aware of the grateful feelings of the nation to France: of the popular disposition to go all lengths short of war, in her favor; of the popular idea, that republican interests were identical on both sides of the Atlantic; that a royal triumph over republicanism in Europe, would be followed by a combination to destroy it in this country. He had heard the clamor among the populace, and uttered in Freneau's Gazette and other newspapers, against the policy of neutrality; the people, he thought, were with him, if Washington was not, and he believed the latter would not dare to risk his popularity in thwarting their enthusiasm. He persisted, therefore, in disregarding the decisions of the government, and spoke of them as a departure from the obligations it owed to France; a cowardly abandonment of friends when danger menaced.

Another event added to the irritation of Genet. Two American citizens, whom he had engaged at Charleston, to cruise in the service of France, were arrested on board of the privateer, conducted to prison, and prosecutions commenced against them. The indignant feelings of Genet were vented in an extraordinary letter to the Secretary of State. When speaking of their arrest, "The crime laid to their charge," writes he—"the crime which my mind cannot conceive, and which my pen almost refuses to state—is the serving of France, and defending with her children the common glorious cause of liberty.

"Being ignorant of any positive law or treaty, which deprives Americans of this privilege, and authorizes officers of police arbitrarily to take mariners in the service of France from on board of their vessels, I call upon your intervention, sir, and that of the President of the United States, in order to obtain the im mediate releasement of the above-mentioned officers, who have acquired, by the sentiments animating them, and by the act of their engagement, anterior to any act to the contrary, the right of French citizens, if they have lost that of American citizens."

The lofty and indignant tone of this letter had no effect in shaking the determination of government, or obtaining the release of the prisoners. Washington confesses, however, that he was very much harried and perplexed by the "disputes, memorials, and what not," with which he was pestered, by one or other of the powers at war. It was a sore trial of his equanimity, his impartiality, and his discrimination, and wore upon his spirits and his health. "The President is not well," writes Jefferson to Madison (June 9th); "little lingering fevers have been hanging about him for a week or ten days, and affected his looks most remarkably. He is also extremely affected by the attacks made and kept up on him, in the public papers. I think he feels these things more than any other person I ever yet met with. I am sincerely sorry to see them."

Jefferson's sorrow was hardly in accordance with the resolution expressed by him, to retain Freneau in his office, notwithstanding his incessant attacks upon the President and the measures of his government. Washington might well feel sensitive to these attacks, which Jefferson acknowledges were the more mischievous, from being planted on popular ground, on the universal love of he people to France and its cause. But he was not to be deterred by personal considerations, from the strict line of his duty. He was aware that, in withstanding the public infatuation in regard to France, he was putting an unparalleled popularity at hazard; but he put it at hazard without hesitation; and, in so doing, set a magnanimous example for his successors in office to endeavor to follow.

CHAPTER XXI.

WASHINGTON CALLED TO MOUNT VERNON—THE CASE OF THE LITTLE SARAH COMES UP IN HIS ABSENCE—GOVERNOR MIFFLIN DETERMINED TO PREVENT HER DEPARTURE—RAGE OF GENET—JEFFERSON URGES DETERTION OF THE PRIVATEER UNTIL THE PRESIDENT'S RETURN—EVASIVE ASSURANCE OF GENET —DISTRUST OF HAMILTON AND KNOX—WASHINGTON RETURNS TO PHILADELPHIA—A CABINET COUNCIL—ITS DETERMINATION COMMUNICATED TO GENET—THE VESSEL SAILS IN DEFIANCE OF IT—FORMATION OF THE DEMOCRATIC SOCIETY—THE RECALL OF GENET DETERMINED ON—THE RIBALD LAMPOON—WASHINGTON'S OUTBURST.

In the latter part of July, Washington was suddenly called to Mount Vernon by the death of Mr. Whiting, the manager of his estates. During his brief absence from the seat of government, occurred the case of the Little Sarah. This was a British merchant vessel which had been captured by a French privateer, and brought into Philadelphia, where she had been armed and equipped for privateering; manned with one hundred and twenty men, many of them Americans, and her name changed into that of Le Petit Democrat. This, of course, was in violation of Washington's decision, which had been communicated to Genet.

General Mifflin, now Governor of Pennsylvania, being inform ed, on the 6th of July, that the vessel was to sail the next day, sent his secretary, Mr. Dallas, at midnight to Genet, to persuade him to detain her until the President should arrive, intimating that otherwise force would be used to prevent her departure.

Genet flew into one of the transports of passion to which he was prone; contrasted the treatment experienced by him from the officers of government, with the attachment to his nation professed by the people at large; declared that the President was not the sovereign of the country, and had no right, without consulting Congress, to give such instructions as he had issued to the State Governors; threatened to appeal from his decision to the people, and to repel force by force, should an attempt be made to seize the privateer.

Apprised of this menace, Governor Mifflin forthwith ordered out one hundred and twenty of the militia to take possession of the privateer, and communicated the circumstances of the case to the cabinet.

Mr. Jefferson now took the matter in hand, and, on the 7th of July, in an interview with Genet, repeated the request that the privateer be detained until the arrival of the President. Genet, he writes, instantly took up the subject in a very high tone, and went into an immense field of declamation and complaint. Jefferron made a few efforts to be heard, but, finding them ineffectual, suffered the torrent of vituperation to pour on. He sat in silence, therefore, while Genet charged the government with having violated the treaties between the two nations; with having suffered its flag to be insulted and disregarded by the English; who stopped its vessels on the high seas, and took out of them whatever they suspected to be French property. He declared that e had been thwarted and opposed in every thing he had to do with the government; so that he sometimes thought of packing up and going away, as he found he could not be useful to his nation in anything. He censured the executive for the measures it had taken without consulting Congress, and declared, that, on the President's return, he would certainly press him to convene that body.

He had by this time exhausted his passion and moderated his tone, and Jefferson took occasion to say a word. "I stopped him," writes he, "at the subject of calling Congress; explained our constitution to him as having divided the functions of government among three different authorities, the executive, legislative, and judiciary, each of which were supreme on all questions belonging to their department, and independent of the others; that all the questions which had arisen between him and us, belonged to the executive department, and, if Congress were sitting, could not be carried to them, nor would they take notice of them."

Genet asked with surprise, if Congress were not the sovereign.

"No," replied Jefferson. "They are sovereign only in making laws; the executive is the sovereign in executing them, and the judiciary in construing them, where they relate to that department."

"But at least," cried Genet, "Congress are bound to see that the treaties are observed." "No," rejoined Jefferson. "There are very few cases, indeed, arising out of treaties, which they can take notice of. The President is to see that treaties are observed."

"If he decides against the treaty," demanded Genet, "to whom is a nation to appeal?" "The constitution," replied Jefferson "has made the President the last appeal."

Genet, perfectly taken aback at finding his own ignorance in the matter, shrugged his shoulders, made a bow, and said, "he would not compliment Mr. Jefferson on such a constitution!"

He had now subsided into coolness and good humor, and the subject of the Little Sarah being resumed, Jefferson pressed her detention until the President's return; intimating that her previous departure would be considered a very serious offence.

Genet made no promise, but expressed himself very happy to be able to inform Mr. Jefferson that the vessel was not in a state of readiness; she had to change her position that day, he said, and fall down the river, somewhere about the lower end of the town, for the convenience of taking some things on board, and would not depart yet.

When Jefferson endeavored to extort an assurance that she would await the President's return, he evaded a direct committal, intimating however, by look and gesture, that she would not be gone before that time. "But let me beseech you," said he, "not to permit any attempt to put men on board of her. She is filled with high-spirited patriots, and they will unquestionably resist. And there is no occasion, for I tell you she will not be ready to depart for some time."

Jefferson was accordingly impressed with the belief that the privateer would remain in the river until the President should decide on her case, and, on communicating this conviction to the Governor, the latter ordered the militia to be dismissed.

Hamilton and Knox, on the other hand, were distrustful, and proposed the immediate erection of a battery on Mud Island, with guns mounted to fire at the vessel, and even to sink her, if she attempted to pass. Jefferson, however, refusing to concur in the measure, it was not adopted. The vessel, at that time, was at Gloucester Point, but soon fell down to Chester.

Washington arrived at Philadelphia on the 11th of July; when papers requiring "instant attention" were put into his hands. They related to the case of the Little Sarah, and were from Jefferson, who, being ill with fever, had retired to his seat in the country. Nothing could exceed the displeasure of Washington when he examined these papers.

In a letter written to Jefferson, on the spur of the moment, he puts these indignant queries: "What is to be done in the case of the Little Sarah, now at Chester? Is the minister of the French republic to set the acts of this government at defiance with impunity? And then threaten the executive with an appeal to the people! What must the world think of such conduct, and of the government of the United States in submitting to it?

"These are serious questions. Circumstances press for decision, and, as you have had time to consider them (upon me they come unexpectedly), I wish to know your opinion upon them, even before to-morrow, for the vessel may then be gone."

Mr. Jefferson, in a reply of the same date, informed the President of his having received assurance, that day, from Mr. Genet, that the vessel would not be gone before his (the President's) decision.

In consequence of this assurance of the French minister, no immediate measures of a coercive nature were taken with regard to the vessel; but, in a cabinet council held the next day, it was determined to detain in port all privateers which had been equipped within the United States by any of the belligerent powers.

No time was lost in communicating this determination to Genet; but, in defiance of it, the vessel sailed on her cruise.

It must have been a severe trial of Washington's spirit to see his authority thus braved and insulted, and to find that the people, notwithstanding the indignity thus offered to their chief magistrate, sided with the aggressors, and exulted in their open defiance of his neutral policy.

About this time a society was formed under the auspices of the French minister, and in imitation of the Jacobin clubs of Paris. It was ealled the Democratic Society, and soon gave rise to others throughout the Union; all taking the French side in the present questions. The term democrat, thenceforward, began to designate an ultra-republican.

Fresh mortifications awaited Washington, from the distempered state of public sentiment. The trial came on of Gideon Henfield, an American citizen, prosecuted under the advice of the Attorney General, for having enlisted, at Charleston, on board of a French privateer which had brought prizes into the port of Philadelphia. The populace took part with Henfield. He had enlisted before the proclamation of neutrality had been published, and even if he had enlisted at a later date, was he to be punished for engaging with their ancient ally, France, in the cause of liberty against the royal despots of Europe? His acquittal exposed Washington to the obloquy of having attempted a measure which the laws would not justify. It showed him, moreover, the futility of attempts at punishment for infractions of the rules proclaimed for the preservation of neutrality; while the clamorous rejeicing by which the acquittal of Henfield had been celebrated, evinced the popular disposition to thwart that line of policy which he considered most calculated to promote the public good. Nothing, however, could induce him to swerve from that policy. "I have consolation within," said he, "that no earthly effort can deprive me of, and that is, that neither ambitious nor interested motives have influenced my conduct. The arrows of malevolence, therefore, however barbed and well pointed, can never reach the most vulnerable part of me; though, whilst I am set up as a mark they will be continually aimed."*

Hitherto Washington had exercised great forbearance toward the French minister, notwithstanding the little respect shown by the latter to the rights of the United States; but the official communications of Genet were becoming too offensive and insulting to be longer tolerated. Meetings of the heads of departments and the Attorney General were held at the President's on he 1st and 2d of August, in which the whole of the official correspondence and conduct of Genet was passed in review; and it was agreed that his recall should be desired. Jefferson recommended that the desire should be expressed with great delicacy; the others were for peremptory terms. Knox was for sending him off at once, but this proposition was generally scouted. In the end it was agreed that a letter should be written to Gouverneur Morris, giving a statement of the case, with accompanying documents, that he might lay the whole before the executive council of France, and explain the reason for desiring the recall of Mr. Genet.

It was proposed that a publication of the whole correspondence, and a statement of the proceedings, should be made by way of appeal to the people. This produced animated debates. Hamilton spoke with great warmth in favor of an appeal. Jefferson opposed it. "Genet," said he, "will appeal also; it will become a contest betwen the President and Genet. Anonymous writers will take it up. There will be the same difference of opinion in public as in our cabinet—there will be the same difference in Congress, for it must be laid before them. It would work, therefore, very unpleasantly at home. How would it work abroad?"

* Letter to Gov. Lee. Sparks, x. 359.

Washington, already weary and impatient, under the incessant dissensions of his cabinet, was stung by the suggestion that he might be held up as in conflict with Genet, and subjected, as he had been, to the ribaldry of the press. At this unlucky moment Knox blundered forth with a specimen of the scandalous libels already in circulation; a pasquinade lately printed, called the Funeral of George Washington, wherein the President was represented as placed upon a guillotine, a horrible parody on the late decapitation of the French King. "The President," writes Jefferson, "now burst forth into one of those transports of passion beyond his control; inveighed against the personal abuse which had been bestowed upon him, and defied any man on earth to produce a single act of his since he had been in the government that had not been done on the purest motives.

"He had never repented but once the having slipped the moment of resigning his office, and that was every moment since. In the agony of his heart he declared that he had rather be in his grave than in his present situation; that he had rather be on his farm than to be made emperor of the world—and yet, said he, indignantly, they are charging me with wanting to be a king!

"All were silent during this burst of feeling—a pause ensued—it was difficult to resume the question. Washington, however, who had recovered his equanimity, put an end to the difficulty.

There was no necessity, he said, for deciding the matter at present; the propositions agreed to, respecting the letter to Mr. Morris, might be put into a train of execution, and, perhaps, events would show whether the appeal would be necessary or not."*

* Jefferson's Works, ix. 164.

CHAPTER XXII.

THREATENED DISSOLUTION OF THE CABINET—ACTION BETWEEN THE AMBUSCADE AND BOSTON—TRIUMPHANT RETURN OF THE FORMER TO NEW YORK

—A FRENCH FLEET ARRIVES SAME DAY—EXCITEMENT OF THE PEOPLE—GENET ARRIVES IN THE MIDST OF IT—HIS ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION—IS INFORMED BY JEFFERSON OF THE MEASURES FOR HIS RECALL—HIS RAGE AND REPLY—DECLINE OF HIS POPULARITY.

Washington had hitherto been annoyed and perplexed by having to manage a divided cabinet; he was now threatened with that cabinet's dissolution. Mr. Hamilton had informed him by letter, that private as well as public reasons had determined him to retire from office towards the close of the next session; probably with a view to give Congress an opportunity to examine into his conduct. Now came a letter from Mr. Jefferson, dated July 31st, in which he recalled the circumstances which had induced him to postpone for a while his original intention of retiring from office at the close of the first four years of the republic. These circumstances, he observed, had now ceased to such a degree as to leave him free to think again of a day on which to withdraw; "at the close, therefore, of the ensuing month of September, I shall beg leave to retire to scenes of greater tranquillity, from those for which I am every day more and more convinced that neither my talents, tone of mind, nor time of life fit me."

Washington was both grieved and embarrassed by this notification. Full of concern, he called upon Jefferson at his country residence near Philadelphia; pictured his deep distress at finding himself, in the present perplexing juncture of affairs, about to be deserted by those of his cabinet on whose counsel he had counted, and whose places he knew not where to find persons competent to supply; and, in his chagrin, again expressed his repentance that he himself had not resigned as he had once meditated.

The public mind, he went on to observe, was in an alarming state of ferment; political combinations of various kinds were forming; where all this would end he knew not. A new Congress was to assemble, more numerous than the last, perhaps of a different spirit; the first expressions of its sentiments would be important, and it would relieve him considerably if Jefferson would remain in office, if it were only until the end of the session.

Jefferson, in reply, pleaded an excessive repugnance to public life; and, what seems to have influenced him more sensibly, the actual uneasiness of his position. He was obliged, he said, to move in exactly the circle which he knew to bear him peculiar hatred; "the wealthy aristocrats, the merchants connected closely with England; the newly-created paper fortunes." Thus surrounded, his words were caught, multiplied, misconstrued, and even fabricated, and spread abroad to his injury.

Mr. Jefferson pleaded, moreover, that the opposition of views between Mr. Hamilton and himself was peculiarly unpleasant, and destructive of the necessary harmony. With regard to the republican party he was sure it had not a view which went to the frame of the government; he believed the next Congress would attempt nothing material but to render their own body independ ent; the manœuvres of Mr. Genet might produce some little embarrassment, but the republicans would abandon that functionary the moment they knew the nature of his conduct.

Washington replied, that he believed the views of the republican party to be perfectly pure: "but when men put a machine into motion," said he, "it is impossible for them to stop it exactly where they would choose, or to say where it will stop. The constitution we have is an excellent one, if we can keep it where it is."

He again adverted to Jefferson's constant suspicion that there was a party disposed to change the constitution into a monarchical form, declaring that there was not a man in the United States who would set his face more decidedly against such a change than himself.

"No rational man in the United States suspects you of any other disposition," cried Jefferson; "but there does not pass a week in which we cannot prove declarations dropping from the monarchical party, that our government is good for nothing; is a milk-and-water thing which cannot support itself; that we must knock it down and set up something with more energy."

"If that is the case," rejoined Washington, "it is a proof of their insanity, for the republican spirit of the Union is so manifest and so solid that it is astonishing how any one can expect to move it."

We have only Jefferson's account of this and other interesting interviews of a confidential nature which he had with the President, and we give them generally almost in his own words, through which, partial as they may have been, we discern Washington's constant efforts to moderate the growing antipathies between the eminent men whom he had sought to assist him in conducting the government. He continued to have the highest opinion of Jefferson's abilities, his knowledge of foreign affairs, his thorough patriotism; and it was his earnest desire to retain him in his cabinet through the whole of the ensuing session of Congress; before the close of which he trusted the affairs of the country relating to foreign powers, Indian disturbances, and internal policy, would have taken a more decisive, and it was to be hoped agreeable form than they then had. A compromise was eventually made, according to which Jefferson was to be allowed a temporary absence in the autumn, and on his return was to continue in office until January.

In the mean time Genet had proceeded to New York, which very excitable city was just then in a great agitation. The frigate Ambuscade, while anchored in the harbor, had been challenged to single combat by the British frigate Boston, Captain Courtney, which was cruising off the Hook. The challenge was accepted; a severe action ensued; Courtney was killed; and the Boston, much damaged, was obliged to stand for Halifax. The Ambuscade returned triumphant to New York, and entered the port amid the enthusiastic cheers of the populace. On the same day, a French fleet of fifteen sail arrived from the Chesapeake and anchored in the Hudson river. The officers and crews were objects of unbounded favor with all who inclined to the French cause. Bompard, the commander of the Ambuscade, was the hero of the day. Tri-colored cockades, and tri-colored ribbons were to be seen on every side, and rude attempts to chant the Marseilles Hymn and the Carmagnole resounded through the streets.

In the midst of this excitement, the ringing of bells and the firing of cannon announced that Citizen Genet was arrived at Powles Hook Ferry, directly opposite the city. There was an immediate assemblage of the republican party in the fields now called the Park. A committee was appointed to escort Genet into the city. He entered it amid the almost frantic cheerings of the populace. Addresses were made to him, expressing devoted attachment to the French republic, and abjuring all neutrality in regard to its heroic struggle. "The cause of France is the cause of America," cried the enthusiasts, "it is time to distinguish its friends from its foes." Genet looked round him. The tri-colored cockade figured in the hats of the shouting multitude; tri-colored ribbons fluttered from the dresses of females in the windows; the French flag was hoisted on the top of the Tontine Coffee House (the City Exchange), surmounted by the cap Can we wonder that what little discretion Genet of liberty. possessed, was completely overborne by this tide of seeming popularity?

In the midst of his self-gratulation and complacency, however, he received a letter from Mr. Jefferson (Sept. 15th), acquainting him with the measures taken to procure his recall, and inclosing a copy of the letter written for that purpose to the American minister at Paris. It was added that, out of anxious regard lest the interests of France might suffer, the Executive would, in the mean time, receive his (M. Genet's) communications in writing, and admit the continuance of his functions so loug as they should be restrained within the law as theretofore announced to him, and should be of the tenor usually observed towards independent nations, by the representative of a friendly power residing with them.

The letter of the Secretary of State threw Genet into a violent passion, and produced a reply (Sept. 18th), written while he was still in a great heat. In this he attributed his disfavor with the American government to the machinations of "those gentlemen who had so often been represented to him as aristocrats, partisans of monarchy, partisans of England and her constitution, and consequently enemies of the principles which all good Frenchmen had embraced with religious enthusiasm." "These persons," he said, "alarmed by the popularity which the zeal of the American people for the cause of France had shed upon her minister; alarmed also by his inflexible and incorruptible attachment to the severe maxims of democracy, were striving to ruin him in his own country, after having united all their efforts to calumniate him in the minds of their fellow-citizens."

"These people," observes he, "instead of a democratic ambassador, would prefer a minister of the ancient regime, very complaisant, very gentle, very disposed to pay court to people in office, to conform blindly to every thing which flattered their views and projects; above all, to prefer to the sure and modest society of good farmers, simple citizens, and honest artisans, that of distinguished personages who speculate so patriotically in the public funds, in the lands, and the paper of government."

In his heat, Genet resented the part Mr. Jefferson had taken, notwithstanding their cordial intimacy, in the present matter, although this part had merely been the discharge of an official duty. "Whatever, Sir," writes Genet, "may be the result of the exploit of which you have rendered yourself the generous instrument, after having made me believe that you were my friend, after having initiated me in the mysterics which have influenced my hatred against all those who aspire to absolute power, there is an act of justice which the American people, which the French people, which all free people are interested in demanding; it is, that a particular inquiry should be made, in the approaching Congress, into the motives which have induced the chief of the executive power of the United States to take upon himself to demand the recall of a public minister, whom the sovereign people of the United States had received fraternally and recognized, before the diplomatic forms had been fulfilled in respect to him at Philadelphia."

The wrongs of which Genet considered himself entitled to complain against the executive, commenced before his introduction to that functionary. It was the proclamation of neutrality which first grieved his spirit. "I was extremely wounded," writes he, "that the President of the United States should haste, before knowing what I had to transmit on the part of the French republic, to proclaim sentiments over which decency and friendship should at least have thrown a veil."

He was grieved, moreover, that on his first audience, the President had spoken only of the friendship of the United States for France, without uttering a word or expressing a single sentiment in regard to its revolution, although all the towns, all the villages from Charleston to Philadelphia, had made the air resound with their ardent voices for the French republic. And what further grieved his spirit was, to observe "that this first magistrate of a free people had decorated his saloon with certain medallions of Capet [meaning Louis XVI.] and his family, which served in Paris for rallying signs."

We forbear to cite further this angry and ill-judged letter. Unfortunately for Genet's ephemeral popularity, a rumor got abroad that he had expressed a determination to appeal from the President to the people. This at first was contradicted, but was ultimately established by a certificate of Chief Justice Jay and Mr. Rufus King, of the United States Senate, which was published in the papers.

The spirit of audacity thus manifested by a foreign minister shocked the national pride. Meetings were held in every part of the Union to express the public feeling in the matter. In these meetings the proclamation of neutrality and the system of measures flowing from it, were sustained, partly from a conviction of their wisdom and justice, but more from an undiminished affection for the person and character of Washington; for many who did not espouse his views, were ready to support him in the exercise of his constitutional functions. The warm partisans of Genet, however, were the more vehement in his support from the temporary ascendency of the other party. They advocated his right to appeal from the President to the people. The President, they argued, was invested with no sanctity to make such an act criminal. In a republican country the people were the real sovereigns.

CHAPTER XXIII.

NEUTRALITY ENDANGERED BY GREAT BRITAIN—HER ILL-ADVISED MEASURES—DETENTION OF VESSELS BOUND FOR FRANCE—IMPRESSMENT OF AMERICAN SEAMEN—PERSISTENCE IN HOLDING THE WESTERN POSTS—CONGRESS ASSEMBLES IN DECEMBER—THE PRESIDENT'S OPENING SPEECH—HIS CENSURE OF GENET—THE VICE-PRESIDENT'S ALLUSION TO IT—THE ADMINISTRATION IN A MINORITY IN THE HOUSE—PROCLAMATION OF NEUTRALITY SUSTAINED—JEFFERSON'S REPORT—RETIRES FROM THE CABINET—HIS PARTING REBUKE TO GENET—HIS CHARACTER OF WASHINGTON.

While the neutrality of the United States, so jealously guarded by Washington, was endangered by the intrigues of the French minister, it was put to imminent hazard by ill-advised measures of the British cabinet.

There was such a scarcity in France, in consequence of the failure of the crops, that a famine was apprehended. England, availing herself of her naval ascendency, determined to increase the distress of her rival by cutting off all her supplies from abroad. In June, 1793, therefore, her cruisers were instructed to detain all vessels bound to France with cargoes of corn, flour, or meal, take them into port, unload them, purchase the cargoes, make a proper allowance for the freight, and then release the vessels; or to allow the masters of them, on a stipulated security, to dispose of their cargoes in a port in amity with England. This measure gave umbrage to all parties in the United States, and brought out an earnest remonstrance from the government, as being a violation of the law of neutrals, and indefensible on any proper construction of the law of nations.

Another grievance which helped to swell the tide of resentment against Great Britain, was the frequent impressment of American seamen, a wrong to which they were particularly exposed from national similarity.

To these may be added the persistence of Great Britain in holding the posts to the south of the lakes, which, according to treaty stipulations, ought to have been given up. Washington did not feel himself in a position to press our rights under the treaty, with the vigorous hand that some would urge; questions having risen in some of the State courts, to obstruct the fulfilment of our part of it, which regarded the payment of British debts contracted before the war.

The violent partisans of France thought nothing of these snortcomings on our own part; and would have had the forts seized at once; but Washington considered a scrupulous discharge of our own obligations the necessary preliminary, should so violent a measure be deemed advisable. His prudent and conscientious conduct in this particular, so in unison with the impartial justice which governed all his actions, was cited by partisan writers, as indicative of his preference of England to "our ancient ally."

The hostilities of the Indians north of the Ohio, by many at tributed to British wiles, still continued. The attempts at an amicable negotiation had proved as fruitless as Washington had anticipated. The troops under Wayne had, therefore, taken the field to act offensively; but from the lateness of the season, had formed a winter camp near the site of the present city of Cincinnati, whence Wayne was to open his campaign in the ensuing spring.

Congress assembled on the 2d of December (1793), with various causes of exasperation at work; the intrigues of Genet and the aggressions of England, uniting to aggravate to a degree of infatuation the partiality for France, and render imminent the chance of a foreign war.

Washington, in his opening speech, after expressing his deep and respectful sense of the renewed testimony of public approbation manifested in his re-election, proceeded to state the measures he had taken, in consequence of the war in Europe, to protect the rights and interests of the United States, and maintain peaceful relations with the belligerent parties. Still he pressed upon Congress the necessity of placing the country in a condition of com-"The United States," said he, "ought not to plete defence. indulge a persuasion that, contrary to the order of human events, they will forever keep at a distance those painful appeals to arms with which the history of every nation abounds. There is a rank due to the United States among nations, which will be withheld, if not absolutely lost, by the reputation of weakness. If we desire to avoid insult, we must be able to repel it; if we desire to secure peace—one of the most powerful instruments of our prosperity-it must be known that we are, at all times, ready for In the spirit of these remarks, he urged measures to increase the amount of arms and ammunition in the arsenals, and to improve the militia establishment.

One part of his speech conveyed an impressive admonition to the House of Representatives: "No pecuniary consideration is more urgent than the regular redemption and discharge of the public debt; in none can delay be more injurious, or an economy of time more valuable."

The necessity of augmenting the public revenue in a degree commensurate with the objects suggested, was likewise touched upon.

In concluding his speech, he endeavored to impress upon his hearers the magnitude of their task, the important interests confided to them, and the conscientiousness that should reign over their deliberations. "Without an unprejudiced coolness, the welfare of the government may be hazarded; without harmony, as far as consists with freedom of sentiment, its dignity may be lost. But, as the legislative proceedings of the United States will never, I trust, be reproached for the want of temper or of candor, so shall not the public happiness languish from the want of my strenuous and warmest co-operation."

In a message to both Houses, on the 5th of December, concerning foreign relations, Washington spoke feelingly with regard to those with the representative and executive bodies of France: "It is with extreme concern I have to inform you that the proceedings of the person whom they have unfortunately appointed their minister plenipotentiary here, have breathed nothing of the friendly spirit of the nation which sent him; their tendency, on the contrary, has been to involve us in war abroad, and discord and anarchy at home. So far as his acts, or those of his agents, have threatened our immediate commitment in the war, or flagrant insult to the authority of the laws, their effect has been counteracted by the ordinary cognizance of the laws, and by an exertion of the powers confided to me. Where their danger was not im minent, they have been borne with, from sentiments of regard for his nation; from a sense of their friendship towards us; from a conviction, that they would not suffer us to remain long exposed to the action of a person, who has so little respected our mutual dispositions; and, I will add, from a reliance on the firmness of my fellow-citizens in their principles of peace and order."

John Adams, speaking of this passage of the message, says: "The President has given Genet a bolt of thunder." He questioned, however, whether Washington would be supported in it by the two Houses—"although he stands at present, as high in the admiration and confidence of the people as ever he did, I expect he will find many bitter and desperate enemies arise in consequence of his just judgment against Genet.*

In fact, the choice of speaker showed that there was a majority of ten against the administration, in the House of Representatives; yet it was manifest, from the affectionate answer on the 6th, of the two Houses, to Washington's speech, and the satisfaction expressed at his re-election, that he was not included in the opposition which, from this act, appeared to await his political system. The House did justice to the purity and patriotism of the motives which had prompted him again to obey the voice of his country, when called by it to the Presidential chair. "It is to virtues which have commanded long and universal reverence, and services from which have flowed great and lasting benefits, that the tribute of praise may be paid, without the reproach of flattery; and it is from the same sources that the fairest anticipations may be derived in favor of the public happiness."

Notwithstanding the popular ferment in favor of France, both Houses seem to have approved the course pursued by Washington in regard to that country; and as to his proclamation of neutrality, while the House approved of it in guarded terms, the Senate pronounced it a "measure well-timed and wise; manifesting a watchful solicitude for the welfare of the nation, and calculated to promote it."

* Letter to Mrs. Adams. Life, vol. i., p. 460.

Early in the session, Mr. Jefferson, in compliance with a requisition which the House of Representatives had made, Feb. 23d, 1791, furnished an able and comprehensive report of the state of trade of the United States with different countries; the nature and extent of exports and imports, and the amount of tonnage of the American shipping: specifying, also, the various restrictions and prohibitions by which our commerce was embarrassed, and, in some instances, almost ruined. "Two methods," he said, "presented themselves, by which these impediments might be removed, modified, or counteracted; friendly arrangement or countervailing legislation. Friendly arrangements were preferable with all who would come into them, and we should carry into such arrangements all the liberality and spirit of accommodation which the nature of the case would admit. But," he adds, "should any nation continue its system of prohibitive duties and regulations, it behooves us to protect our citizens, their commerce, and navigation, by counter prohibitions, duties, and regulations." To effect this, he suggested a series of legislative msasures of a retaliatory kind.*

With this able and elaborate report, Jefferson closed his labors as Secretary of State. His last act was a kind of parting gun to Mr. Genet. This restless functionary had, on the 20th of December, sent to him translations of the instructions given him by the executive council of France; desiring that the President would lay them officially before both Houses of Congress, and proposing to transmit successively, other papers to be laid before them in like manner.

* See Jefferson's Works, vol. vii.

Jefferson, on the 31st of December, informed Genet that he had laid his letter and its accompaniments before the President. "I have it in charge to observe," adds he, "that your functions as the missionary of a foreign nation here, are confined to the transactions of the affairs of your nation, with the Executive of the United States; that the communications which are to pass between the executive and legislative branches, cannot be a subject for your interference, and that the President must be left to judge for himself what matters his duty or the public good may require him to propose to the deliberations of Congress. I have, therefore, the honor of returning you the copies sent for distribution, and of being, with great respect, sir, your most obedient and most humble servant."

Such was Jefferson's dignified rebuke of the presumptuous meddling of Genet, and indeed his whole course of official proceedings with that minister, notwithstanding his personal intimacy with him and his strong French partialities, is worthy of the highest approbation. Genet, in fact, who had calculated on Jefferson's friendship, charged him openly with having a language official and a language confidential, but it certainly was creditable to him, as a public functionary in a place of high trust, that, in his official transactions, he could rise superior to individual prejudices and partialities, and consult only the dignity and interests of his country.

Washington had been especially sensible of the talents and integrity displayed by Jefferson during the closing year of his secretaryship, and particularly throughout this French perplexity, and had recently made a last attempt, but an unsuccessful one, to persuade him to remain in the cabinet. On the same day with his letter to Genet, Jefferson addressed one to Washington, reminding him of his having postponed his retirement from office until the end of the annual year. "That term being now arrived," writes he, "and my propensities to retirement becoming daily more and more irresistible, I now take the liberty of resigning the office into your hands. Be pleased to accept with it my sincere thanks for all the indulgences which you have been so good as to exercise towards me in the discharge of its duties. Conscious that my need of them has been great, I have still ever found them greater, without any other claim on my part than a firm pursuit of what has appeared to me to be right, and a thorough disdain of all means which were not as open and honorable as their object was pure. I carry into my retirement a lively sense of your goodness, and shall continue gratefully to remember it."

The following was Washington's reply: "Since it has been impossible to prevent you to forego any longer the indulgence of your desire for private life, the event, however anxious I am to avert it, must be submitted to.

"But I cannot suffer you to leave your station without assuring you, that the opinion which I had formed of your integrity and talents, and which dictated your original nomination, has been confirmed by the fullest experience, and that both have been eminently displayed in the discharge of your duty."

The place thus made vacant in the cabinet was filled by Mr-Edmund Randolph, whose office of Attorney General was conferred on Mr. William Bradford, of Pennsylvania.

No one seemed to throw of the toils of office with more delight than Jefferson; or to betake himself with more devotion to the simple occupations of rural life. It was his boast, in a letter to a friend written some time after his return to Monticello, that he had seen no newspaper since he had left Philadelphia, and he believed he should never take another newspaper of any sort. "I think it is Montaigne," writes he, "who has said, that ignorance is the softest pillow on which a man can rest his head. I am sure it is true as to everything political, and shall endeavor to estrange myself to everything of that character." Yet the very next sentence shows the lurking of the old party feud. "I in dulge myself in one political topic only—that is, in declaring to my countrymen the shameless corruption of a portion of the representatives of the first and second Congresses, and their implicit devotion to the treasury." *

We subjoin his comprehensive character of Washington, the result of long observation and cabinet experience, and written in after years, when there was no temptation to insincere eulogy:

"His integrity was most pure; his justice the most inflexible I have ever known; no motives of interest or consanguinity, of friendship or hatred, being able to bias his decision. He was, indeed, in every sense of the word, a wise, a good, and a great man."

* Letter to E. Randolph. Works, iv. 103.

CHAPTER XXIV.

DEBATE ON JEFFERSON'S REPORT ON COMMERCIAL INTERCOURSE—A NAVAL FORCE PROPOSED FOR THE PROTECTION OF COMMERCE AGAINST PIRATICAL CRUISERS—FURTHER INSTANCES OF THE AUDACITY OF GENET—HIS RECALL—ARRIVAL OF HIS SUCCESSOR—IRRITATION EXCITED BY BRITISH CAPTURES OF AMERICAN VESSELS—PREPARATIONS FOR DEFENCE—EMBARGO—INTENSE EXCITEMENT AT "BRITISH SPOLIATIONS"—PARTISANS OF FRANCE IN THE ASCENDANT—A CHANCE FOR ACCOMMODATING DIFFICULTIES—JEFFERSON'S HOPES OF RECONCILIATION—THE WAR CRY UPPERMOST—WASHINGTON DETERMINES TO SEND A SPECIAL ENVOY TO THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT—JEFFERSON'S LETTER TO TENCH COXE.

Public affairs were becoming more and more complicated, and events in Europe were full of gloomy portent. "The news of this evening," writes John Adams to his wife, on the 9th of January, "is, that the queen of France is no more. When will savages be satisfied with blood? No prospect of peace in Europe, therefore none of internal harmony in America. We cannot well be in a more disagreeable situation than we are with all Europe, with all Indians, and with all Barbary rovers. Nearly one-half of the Continent is in constant opposition to the other, and the President's situation, which is highly responsible, is very distressing."

Adams speaks of having had two hours' conversation with

Washington alone in his cabinet, but intimates that he could not reveal the purport of it, even by a hint; it had satisfied him, however, of Washington's earnest desire to do right; his close application to discover it, and his deliberate and comprehensive view of our affairs with all the world. "The anti-federalists and the Frenchified zealots," adds Adams, "have nothing now to do that I can conceive of, but to ruin his character, destroy his peace, and injure his health. He supports all their attacks with firmness, and his health appears to be very good."*

The report of Mr. Jefferson on commercial intercourse, was soon taken up in the House in a committee of the whole. A series of resolutions based on it, and relating to the privileges and restrictions of the commerce of the United States, were introduced by Mr. Madison, and became the subject of a warm and acrimonious debate. The report upheld the policy of turning the course of trade from England to France, by discriminations in favor of the latter; and the resolutions were to the same purport. The idea was to oppose commercial resistance to commercial injury; to enforce a perfect commercial equality by retaliating impositions, assuming that the commercial system of Great Britain was hostile to the United States—a position strongly denied by some of the debaters.

Though the subject was, or might seem to be, of a purely commercial nature, it was inevitably mixed up with political considerations, according as a favorable inclination to England or France was apprehended. The debate waxed warm as it proceeded, with a strong infusion of bitterness. Fisher Ames stigmatized the resolutions as having French stamped upon the very face of them. Whereupon, Colonel Parker of Virginia, wished that there were a stamp on the forehead of every one to designate whether he were for France or England. For himself, he would not be silent and hear that nation abused, to whom America was indebted for her rank as a nation. There was a burst of applause in the gallery; but the indecorum was rebuked by the galleries being cleared.

* Life of John Adams, vol. i., p. 461.

The debate, which had commenced on the 13th of January, (1794,) was protracted to the 3d of February, when the question being taken on the first resolution, it was carried by a majority of only five, so nearly were parties divided. The further consideration of the remaining resolutions was postponed to March, when it was resumed, but, in consequence of the new complexion of affairs, was suspended without a decision.

The next legislative movement was also productive of a warm debate, though connected with a subject which appealed to the sympathies of the whole nation. Algerine corsairs had captured eleven American merchant vessels, and upwards of one hundred prisoners, and the regency manifested a disposition for further outrages. A bill was introduced into Congress proposing a force of six frigates, to protect the commerce of the United States against the cruisers of this piratical power. The bill met with strenuous opposition. The force would require time to prepare it; and would then be insufficient. It might be laying the foundation of a large permanent navy and a great public debt. It would be cheaper to purchase the friendship of Algiers with money, as was done by other nations of superior maritime force, or to purchase the protection of those nations. It seems hardly credible at the present day, that such policy could have been urged before an American Congress, without provoking a burst of scorn and indignation; yet it was heard without any emotion of the kind; and, though the bill was eventually passed by both Houses, it was but by a small majority. It received the hearty assent of the President.

In the course of this session, fresh instances had come before the government of the mischievous activity and audacity of Genet; showing that, not content with compromising the neutrality of the United States at sea, he was attempting to endanger it by land. From documents received, it appeared that in November he had sent emissaries to Kentucky, to enroll American citizens in an expedition against New Orleans, and the Spanish possessions; furnishing them with blank commissions for the purpose.* It was an enterprise in which the adventurous people of that State were ready enough to embark, through enthusiasm for the French nation and impatience at the delay of Spain to open the navigation of the Mississippi. Another expedition was to proceed against the Floridas; men for the purpose to be enlisted at the South, to rendezvous in Georgia, and to be aided by a body of Indians and by a French fleet, should one arrive on the coast.

A proclamation from Governor Moultrie checked all such enlistments in South Carolina, but brought forth a letter from Genet to Mr. Jefferson, denying that he had endeavored to raise an armed force in that State for the service of the republic: "At the same time," adds he, "I am too frank to conceal from you that, authorized by the French nation to deliver brevets to such of your fellow-citizens who feel animated by a desire to serve the fairest of causes, I have accorded them to several brave republicans of South Carolina, whose intention appeared to me to be, in expatriating themselves, to go among the tribes of independent Indians, ancient friends and allies of France, to inflict, if they could, in concert with them, the harm to Spaniards and Englishmen, which the governments of those two nations had the baseness to do for a long time to your fellow-citizens, under the name of these savages, the same as they have done recently under that of the Algerines."

* American State Papers, ii. 36.

Documents relating to these transactions were communicated to Congress by Washington, early in January. But, though the expedition set on foot in South Carolina had been checked, it was subsequently reported that the one in Kentucky against Louisiana, was still in progress and about to descend the Ohio.

These schemes showed such determined purpose, on the part of Genet, to undermine the peace of the United States, that Washington, without waiting a reply to the demand for his recall, resolved to keep no further terms with that headlong diplomat. The dignity, possibly the safety of the United States, depended upon immediate measures.

In a cabinet council it was determined to supersede Genet's diplomatic functions, deprive him of the consequent privileges, and arrest his person; a message to Congress, avowing such determination, was prepared, but at this critical juncture came despatches from Gouverneur Morris, announcing Genet's recall.

The French minister of foreign affairs had, in fact, reprobated the conduct of Genet as unauthorized by his instructions and deserving of punishment, and Mr. Fauchet, secretary of the executive council, was appointed to succeed him. Mr. Fauchet arrived in the United States in February.

About this time vigilance was required to guard against wrongs from an opposite quarter. We have noticed the orders issued by Great Britain to her cruisers in June, 1793, and the resentment thereby excited in the United States. On the 6th of the following month of November, she had given them additional instructions to detain all vessels laden with the produce of any colony belonging to France, or carrying supplies to any such colony, and to bring them, with their cargoes, to British ports, for adjudication in the British courts of admiralty.

Captures of American vessels were taking place in consequence of these orders, and heightening public irritation. They were considered indicative of determined hostility on the part of Great Britain, and they produced measures in Congress preparatory to an apprehended state of war. An embargo was laid, prohibiting all trade from the United States to any foreign place for the space of thirty days, and vigorous preparations for defence were adopted with but little opposition.

On the 27th of March, resolutions were moved that all debts due to British subjects be sequestered and paid into the treasury, as a fund to indemnify citizens of the United States for depredations sustained from British cruisers, and that all intercourse with Great Britain be interdicted until she had made compensation for these injuries, and until she should make surrender of the Western posts.

The popular excitement was intense. Meetings were held on the subject of British spoliations. 'Peace or war' was the absorbing question. The partisans of France were now in the ascendant. It was sconted as pusillanimous any longer to hold terms with England. "No doubt," said they, "she despises the proclamation of neutrality, as an evidence of timidity; every motive of self-respect calls on the people of the United States to show a proper spirit." It was suggested that those who were in favor of resisting British aggressions should mount the tri-colored cockade; and forthwith it was mounted by many; while a democratic society was formed to correspond with the one at Philadelphia, and aid in giving effect to these popular sentiments.

While the public mind was in this inflammable state, Washington received advices from Mr. Pinckney, the American minister in London, informing him that the British ministry had issued instructions to the commanders of armed vessels, revoking those of the 6th of November, 1793. Lord Grenville also, in conversation with Mr. Pinckney, had explained the real motives for that order, showing that, however oppressive in its execution, it had not been intended for the special vexation of American commerce.

Washington laid Pinckney's letter before Congress on the 4th of April. It had its effect on both parties; federalists saw in it a chance of accommodating difficulties, and, therefore, opposed all measures calculated to irritate; the other party did not press their belligerent propositions to any immediate decision, but showed no solicitude to avoid a rupture.

Jefferson, though reputed to be the head of the French party, avowed in a letter to Madison his hope that war would not result, but that justice would be obtained in a peaceable way; * and he repeats the hope in a subsequent letter. "My countrymen," writes he, "are groaning under the insults of Great Britain. I hope some means will turn up of reconciling our faith and honor with peace. I confess to you, I have seen enough of one war never to wish to see another." †

* Jefferson's Works, vol. iv. p. 102.

† Ib. vol. iv., p. 104. Letter to John Adams.

"Tis as great an error," writes Hamilton, at the same time, "for a nation to overrate as to underrate itself. Presumption is as great a fault as timidity. 'Tis our error to overrate ourselves and underrate Great Britain; we forget how little we can annoy, how much we may be annoyed."*

The war cry, however, is too obvious a means of popular excitement to be readily given up. Busy partisans saw that the feeling of the populace was belligerent, and every means were taken by the press and the democratic societies to exasperate this feeling; according to them the crisis called, not for moderation, but for decision, for energy. Still, to adhere to a neutral position, would argue tameness—cowardice! Washington, however, was too morally brave to be clamored out of his wise moderation by such taunts. He resolved to prevent a war if possible, by an appeal to British justice, to be made through a special envoy, who should represent to the British government the injuries we had sustained from it in various ways, and should urge indemnification.

The measure was decried by the party favorable to France, as an undue advance to the British government; but they were still more hostile to it when it was rumored that Hamilton was to be chosen for the mission. A member of the House of Representatives addressed a strong letter to the President, deprecating the mission, but especially the reputed choice of the envoy. James Monroe, also, at that time a member of the Senate, remonstrated against the nomination of Hamilton, as injurious to the public interest, and to the interest of Washington himself, and offered to explain his reasons to the latter in a private interview.

* Hamilton's Works, iv. 528.

Washington declined the interview, but requested Mr. Monroe, if possessed of any facts which would disqualify Mr. Hamilton for the mission, to communicate them to him in writing.

"Colonel Hamilton and others have been mentioned," adds he, "but no one is yet absolutely decided upon in my mind But as much will depend, among other things, upon the abilities of the person sent, and his knowledge of the affairs of this country, and as I alone am responsible for a proper nomination, it certainly behooves me to name such a one as, in my judgment, combines the requisites for a mission so peculiarly interesting to the peace and happiness of this country."

Hamilton, however, aware of the "collateral obstacles" which existed with respect to himself, had resolved to advise Washington to drop him from the consideration and to fix upon another character; and recommended John Jay, the Chief Justice of the United States, as the man whom it would be advisable to send. "I think," writes he, "the business would have the best chance possible in his hands, and I flatter myself, that his mission would issue in a manner that would produce the most important good to the nation."*

Mr. Jay was the person ultimately chosen. Washington, in his message, thus nominating an additional envoy to Great Britain, expressed undiminished confidence in the minister actually in London. "But a mission like this," observes he, "while it corresponds with the solemnity of the occasion, will announce to the world a solicitude for a friendly adjustment of our complaints and a reluctance to hostility. Going immediately from the United States, such an envoy will carry with him a full knowledge of the existing temper and sensibility of our country, and will thus be taught to vindicate our rights with firmness, and to cultivate peace with sincerity."

* Hamilton's Works, vol. iv. p. 531.

The nomination was approved by a majority of ten Senators.

By this sudden and decisive measure Washington sought to stay the precipitate impulses of public passion; to give time to put the country into a complete state of defence, and to provide such other measures as might be necessary if negotiation, in a reasonable time, should prove unsuccessful.*

Notwithstanding the nomination of the envoy, the resolution to cut off all intercourse with Great Britain passed the House of Representatives, and was only lost in the Senate by the casting vote of the Vice President, which was given, according to general belief, "not from a disinclination to the ulterior expedience of the measure, but from a desire," previously, "to try the effect of negotiation." †

While Washington was thus endeavoring to steer the vessel of State, amid the surges and blasts which were threatening on every side, Jefferson, who had hauled out of the storm, writes serenely from his retirement at Monticello, to his friend Tench Coxe at Paris:

"Your letters give a comfortable view of French affairs, and later events seem to confirm it. Over the foreign powers, I am convinced they will triumph completely, and I cannot but hope that that triumph, and the consequent disgrace of the invading tyrants, is destined, in order of events, to kindle the wrath of Europe against those who have dared to embroil them in such wickedness, and to bring, at length, kings, nobles, and priests, to the scaffolds which they have been so long deluging with human blood. I am still warm whenever I think of these scoundrels, though I do it as seldom as I can, preferring infinitely to contemplate the tranquil growth of my lucerne and potatoes. I have so completely withdrawn myself from these spectacles of usurpation and misrule, that I do not take a single newspaper, nor read one a month; and I feel myself infinitely the happier for it."*

* Letter to Edmund Randolph. Writings, x. 403.

† Washington to Tobias Lear, Writings, x. 401.

* Works, iv. 104.

CHAPTER XXV.

JAMES MONROE APPOINTED MINISTER TO FRANCE IN PLACE OF GOUVERNEUR MORRIS RECALLED—HIS RECEPTION—PENNSYLVANIA INSURRECTION—PROCLAMATION OF WASHINGTON—PERSEVERANCE OF THE INSURGENTS—SECOND PROCLAMATION—THE PRESIDENT PROCEEDS AGAINST THEM—GENERAL MORGAN—LAWRENCE LEWIS—WASHINGTON ARRANGES A PLAN OF MILITARY OPERATIONS—RETURNS TO PHILADELPHIA, LEAVING LEE IN COMMAND—SUBMISSION OF THE INSURGENTS—THE PRESIDENT'S LETTER ON THE SUBJECT TO JAY, MINISTER AT LONDON.

The French government having so promptly complied with the wishes of the American government in recalling citizen Genet, requested, as an act of reciprocity, the recall of Gouverneur Morris, whose political sympathies were considered highly aristocratical. The request was granted accordingly, but Washington, in a letter to Morris, notifying him of his being superseded, assured him of his own undiminished confidence and friendship.

James Monroe, who was appointed in his place, arrived at Paris in a moment of great reaction. Robespierre had terminated his bloody eareer on the scaffold, and the reign of terror was at an end. The new minister from the United States was received in public by the Convention. The sentiments expressed by Monroe on delivering his credentials, were so completely in unison with the feelings of the moment, that the President of the Convention embraced him with emotion, and it was decreed that the American and French flags should be entwined and hung up in the hall of the Convention, in sign of the union and friendship of the two republics.

Chiming in with the popular impulse, Monroe presented the American flag to the Convention, on the part of his country. It was received with enthusiasm, and a decree was passed, that the national flag of France should be transmitted in return, to the government of the United States.

Washington, in the mean time, was becoming painfully aware that censorious eyes at home were keeping a watch upon his administration, and censorious tongues and pens were ready to cavil at every measure. "The affairs of this country cannot go wrong," writes he ironically to Gouverneur Morris; "there are so many watchful guardians of them, and such infallible guides, that no one is at a loss for a director at every turn."

This is almost the only instance of irony to be found in his usually plain, direct correspondence, and to us is mournfully suggestive of that soreness and weariness of heart with which he saw his conscientious policy misunderstood or misrepresented, and himself becoming an object of party hostility.

Within three weeks after the date of this letter, an insurrection broke out in the western part of Pennsylvania on account of the excise law. We have already mentioned the riotous opposition this law had experienced. Bills of indictment had been found against some of the rioters. The marshal, when on the way to serve the processes issued by the court, was fired upon by armed men, and narrowly escaped with his life. He was subsequently seized and compelled to renounce the exercise of his official duties.

The house of General Nevil, inspector of the revenue, was assail ed, but the assailants were repulsed. They assembled in greater numbers; the magistrates and militia officers shrank from interfering, lest it should provoke a general insurrection; a few regular soldiers were obtained from the garrison at Fort Pitt. There was a parley. The insurgents demanded that the inspector and his papers should be given up; and the soldiers march out of the house and ground their arms. The demand being refused, the house was attacked, the outhouses set on fire, and the garrison was compelled to surrender. The marshal and inspector finally escaped out of the country; descended the Ohio, and, by a circuitous route, found their way to the seat of government; bringing a lamentable tale of their misadventures.

Washington deprecated the result of these outrageous proceedings. "If the laws are to be so trampled upon with impunity," said he, "and a minority, a small one too, is to dictate to the majority, there is an end put, at one stroke, to republican government."

It was intimated that the insurgent district could bring seven thousand men into the field. Delay would only swell the growing disaffection. On the 7th of August Washington issued a proclamation, warning the insurgents to disperse, and declaring that if tranquillity were not restored before the 1st of September, force would be employed to compel submission to the laws. To show that this was not an empty threat, he, on the same day, made a requisition on the governors of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia, for militia to compose an army of twelve thousand men; afterwards augmented to fifteen thousand.

In a letter to the Governor of Virginia (Light-Horse Harry Lee), he says: "I consider this insurrection as the first formidable fruit of the Democratic Societies, brought forth, I believe, too prematurely for their own views, which may contribute to the annihilation of them.

"That these societies were instituted by the artful and designing members (many of their body, I have no doubt, mean well, but know little of the real plan), primarily to sow among the people the seeds of jealousy and distrust of the government, by destroying all confidence in the administration of it, and that these doctrines have been budding and blowing ever since, is not new to any one who is acquainted with the character of their leaders, and has been attentive to their manœuvres. I early gave it as my opinion to the confidential characters around me, that if these societies were not counteracted (not by prosecutions, the ready way to make them grow stronger), or did not fall into disesteem from the knowledge of their origin, and the views with which they had been instituted by their father, Genet, for purposes well known to the government, they would shake the government to its foundation."

The insurgents manifesting a disposition to persevere in their rebellious conduct, the President issued a second proclamation on the 25th of September, describing in forcible terms, the perverse and obstinate spirit with which the lenient propositions of government had been met, and declaring his fixed purpose to reduce the refractory to obedience. Shortly after this he left Philadelphia for Carlisle, to join the army, then on its march to suppress the insurrection in the western part of Pennsylvania.

Just as Washington was leaving Philadelphia, a letter was put into his hands from Major-General Morgan. The proclamation had roused the spirit of that revolutionary veteran. He was on his way, he wrote, to join the expedition against the insurgents, having command of a division of the Virginia militia, of which General Lee was commander-in-chief.

Washington replied from Carlisle to his old companion in arms: "Although I regret the occasion which has called you into the field, I rejoice to hear you are there; and it is probable I may meet you at Fort Cumberland, whither I shall proceed as soon as I see the troops at this rendezvous in condition to advance. At that place, or at Bedford, my ulterior resolution must be taken, either to advance with the troops into the insurgent counties of this State, or to return to Philadelphia for the purpose of meeting Congress the 3d of next month.

"Imperious circumstances alone can justify my absence from the seat of government, whilst Congress are in session; but if these, from the disposition of the people in the refractory counties, and the state of the information I expect to receive at the advanced posts, should appear to exist, the less must yield to the greater duties of my office, and I shall cross the mountains with the troops; if not, I shall place the command of the combined force under the orders of Governor Lee of Virginia, and repair to the seat of government."

We will here note that Lawrence Lewis, a son of Washington's sister, Mrs. Fielding Lewis, having eaught the spirit of arms, accompanied Morgan as aide-de-camp, on this expedition. The prompt zeal with which he volunteered into the service of his country was, doubtless, highly satisfactory to his uncle, with whom, it will be seen, he was a great favorite.

On the 9th of October Washington writes from Carlisle to the Secretary of State: "The insurgents are alarmed, but not yet brought to their proper senses. Every means is devised by them and their friends and associates, to induce a belief that there is no necessity for troops crossing the mountains; although we have information, at the same time, that part of the people there are obliged to embody themselves, to repel the insults of another part."

On the 10th, the Pennsylvania troops set out from Carlisle for their rendezvous at Bedford, and Washington proceeded to Williamsport, thence to go on to Fort Cumberland, the rendezvous of the Virginia and Maryland troops. He arrived at the latter place on the 16th of October, and found a respectable force assembled from those States, and learnt that fifteen hundred more from Virginia were at hand. All accounts agreed that the insurgents were greatly alarmed at the serious appearance of things. "I believe," writes Washington, "the eyes of all the well-disposed people of this country will soon be opened, and that they will clearly see the tendency, if not the design, of the leader of these self-created societies. As far as I have heard them spoken of, it is with strong reprobation."

At Bedford he arranged matters and settled a plan of military operations. The Governors of Virginia, Maryland, and Pennsylvania, were at the head of the troops of their respective States, but Governor Lee was to have the general command. This done, Washington prepared to shape his course for Philadelphia—"but not," says he indignantly, "because the impertinence of Mr. Bache, or his correspondent, has undertaken to pronounce that I cannot, constitutionally, command the army, whilst Congress is in session."

In a letter to Governor Lee, on leaving him in command, he conveyed to the army the very high sense he entertained "of the enlightened and patriotic zeal for the constitution and the laws which had led them cheerfully to quit their families, homes, and the comforts of private life, to undertake, and thus far to per form, a long and fatiguing march, and to encounter and endure the hardships and privations of a military life."

"No citizen of the United States," observes he, "can ever be engaged in a service more important to their country. It is nothing less than to consolidate and to preserve the blessings of that revolution which, at much expense of blood and treasure, constituted us a free and independent nation."

His parting admonition is—"that every officer and soldier will constantly bear in mind, that he comes to support the laws, and that it would be peculiarly unbecoming in him to be, in any way, the infractor of them; that the essential principles of a free government confine the province of the military when called forth on such occasions, to these two objects: first, to combat and subdue all who may be found in arms in opposition to the national will and authority; secondly, to aid and support the civil magistrates in bringing offenders to justice. The dispensation of this justice belongs to the civil magistrates; and let it ever be our pride and our glory to leave the sacred deposit there inviolate."

Washington pushed on for Philadelphia, through deep roads and a three days' rain, and arrived there about the last of October. Governor Lee marched with the troops in two divisions, amounting to fifteen thousand men, into the western counties of Pennsylvania. This great military array extinguished at once the kindling elements of a civil war, "by making resistance desperate." At the approach of so overwhelming a force the insurgents laid down their arms, and gave assurance of submission, and craved the elemency of government. It was extended to them.

A few were tried for treason, but were not convicted; but as some spirit of discontent was still manifest, Major-General Morgan was stationed with a detachment for the winter, in the disaffected region.

The paternal care with which Washington watched, at all times, over the welfare of the country, was manifested in a letter to General Hamilton, who had remained with the army. "Press the Governors to be pointed in ordering the officers under their respective commands to march back with their respective corps; and to see that the inhabitants meet with no disgraceful insults or injuries from them."

It must have been a proud satisfaction to Washington to have put down, without an effusion of blood, an insurrection which, at one time, threatened such serious consequences. In a letter to Mr. Jay, who had recently gone minister to England, he writes: "The insurrection in the western counties of this State will be represented differently, according to the wishes of some and the prejudices of others, who may exhibit it as an evidence of what has been predicted, 'that we are unable to govern ourselves.' Under this view of the subject, I am happy in giving it to you as the general opinion, that this event, having happened at the time it did, was fortunate, although it will be attended with considerable expense."

After expressing his opinion that the 'self-created societies' who were laboring to effect some revolution in the government, were the fomenters of these western disturbances, he adds: "It has afforded an occasion for the people of this country to show their abhorrence of the result and their attachment to the constitution and the laws; for I believe that five times the number of militia that was required, would have come forward, if it had been necessary, in support of them.

"The spirit which blazed out on this occasion, as soon as the object was fully understood and the lenient measures of the government were made known to the people, deserves to be communicated. There are instances of general officers going at the head of a single troop, and of light companies; of field officers, when they came to the place of rendezvous, and found no com mand for them in that grade, turning into the ranks and proceeding as private soldiers, under their own captains; and of numbers, possessing the first fortunes in the country, standing in the ranks as private men, and marching day by day, with their knapsacks and haversacks at their backs, sleeping on straw with a single blanket in a soldier's tent, during the frosty nights which we have had, by way of example to others. Nay, more, many young Quakers, of the first families, character, and property, not discouraged by the elders, have turned into the ranks and marched with the troops.

"These things have terrified the insurgents, who had no conception that such a spirit prevailed; but while the thunder only rumbled at a distance, were boasting of their strength and wish ing for and threatening the militia by turns; intimating that the arms they should take from them would scon become a magazine in their heads."

CHAPTER XXVI.

WASHINGTON'S DENUNCIATION OF SELF-CREATED SOCIETIES—NOT RELISHED BY CONGRESS—CAMPAIGN OF GENERAL WAYNE—HAMILTON REPORTS A PLAN FOR THE REDEMPTION OF THE PUBLIC DEBT—AND RETIRES FROM HIS POST AS SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY—IS SUCCEEDED BY OLIVER WOLCOTT—RESIGNATION OF KNOX—SUCCEEDED BY TIMOTHY PICKERING—CLOSE OF THE SESSION.

In his speech on the opening of Congress (November 19th), Washington, in adverting to the insurrection in Western Pennsylvania, did not hesitate to denounce "certain self-created societies" as "fomenters of it." After detailing its commencement and progress, he observes: "While there is cause to lament that occurrences of this nature should have disgraced the name or interrupted the tranquillity of any part of our community, or should have diverted to a new application any portion of the public resources, there are not wanting real and substantial consolations for the misfortune. It has demonstrated, that our prosperity rests on solid foundations; by furnishing an additional proof that my fellow-citizens understand the true principles of government and liberty; that they feel their inseparable union; that, notwithstanding all the devices which have been used to sway them from their interest and duty, they are now as ready to maintain the authority of the laws against licentious invasions, as they were to defend their rights against usurpation. It has been a spectacle, displaying to the highest advantage the value of republican government, to behold the most and least wealthy of our citizens standing in the same ranks as private soldiers; preëminently distinguished by being the army of the constitution; undeterred by a march of three hundred miles over rugged mountains, by the approach of an inclement season, or by any other discouragement. Nor ought I to omit to acknowledge the efficacious and patriotic coëperation which I have experienced from the chief magistrates of the States to which my requisitions have been addressed.

"To every description, indeed, of citizens, let praise be given; but let them persevere in their affectionate vigilance over that precious depository of American happiness, the constitution of the United States. Let them cherish it, too, for the sake of those who, from every clime, are daily seeking a dwelling in our land. And when, in the calm moments of reflection, they shall have retraced the origin and progress of the insurrection, let them determine whether it has not been fomented by combinations of men, who, careless of consequences, and disregarding the unerring truth, that those who arouse cannot always appease, a civil convulsion, have disseminated from ignorance or perversion of facts, suspicions, jealousies, and accusations of the whole government."

This denunciation of the "self-created societies" was a bold step, by which he was sure to incur their resentment. It was not relished by some members of the Senate, but the majority gave it their approval. In the House, where the opposition party was most powerful, this passage of the President's speech gave riso to much altereation, and finally, the majority showed their disapprobation by passing it over in silence in the address voted in reply.

The "self-created societies," however, which had sprung up in various parts of the Union, had received their death-blow; they soon became odious in the public eye, and gradually disappeared; following the fate of the Jacobin clubs in France.

It was with great satisfaction that Washington had been able to announce favorable intelligence of the campaign of General Wayne against the hostile Indians west of the Ohio. That brave commander had conducted it with a judgment and prudence little compatible with the hare-brained appellation he had acquired by his rash exploits during the Revolution. Leaving his winter encampment on the Ohio, in the spring (of 1794), he had advanced cautiously into the wild country west of it; skirmishing with bands of lurking savages, as he advanced, and establishing posts to keep up communication and secure the transmission of supplies. It was not until the 8th of August that he arrived at the junction of the rivers Au Glaize and Miami, in a fertile and populous region, where the Western Indians had their most important vil-Here he threw up some works, which he named Fort Defiance. Being strengthened by eleven hundred mounted volunteers from Kentucky, his force exceeded that of the savage warriors who had collected to oppose him, which scarcely amounted to two thousand men. These, however, were strongly encamped in the vicinity of Fort Miami, a British post, about thirty miles distant, and far within the limits of the United States, and seemed prepared to give battle, expecting, possibly to be aided by the British garrison. Wayne's men were eager for a fight, but he, remembering the instructions of government, restrained his fighting propensities. In a letter to his old comrade Knox, secretary of war, he writes, "Though now prepared to strike, I have thought proper to make the enemy a last overture of peace, nor am I without hopes that they will listen to it."

His overture was ineffectual; or rather the reply he received was such as to leave him in doubt of the intentions of the enemy. He advanced, therefore, with the precautions he had hitherto observed, hoping to be met in the course of his march by deputies on peaceful missions.

On the 20th, being arrived near to the enemy's position, his advanced guard was fired upon by an ambush of the enemy concealed in a thicket, and was compelled to retreat. The general now ordered an attack of horse and foot upon the enemy's position; the Indians were roused from their lair with the point of the bayonet; driven, fighting for more than two miles, through thick woods, and pursued with great slaughter, until within gunshot of the British fort. "We remained," writes the general, "three days and nights on the banks of the Miami, in front of the field of battle, during which time all the houses and corn were consumed, or otherwise destroyed, for a considerable distance both above and below Fort Miami; and we were within pistolshot of the garrison of that place, who were compelled to remain quiet spectators of this general devastation and conflagration."

It was trusted that this decisive battle, and the wide ravages of villages and fields of corn with which it was succeeded, would bring the Indians to their senses, and compel them to solicit the peace which they had so repeatedly rejected.

In his official address to Congress, Washington had urged the adoption of some definite plan for the redemption of the public debt. A plan was reported by Mr. Hamilton, 20th January, 1795, which he had digested and prepared on the basis of the actual revenues, for the further support of public credit. The report embraced a comprehensive view of the system which he had pursued, and made some recommendations, which after much debate were adopted

So closed Mr. Hamilton's labors as Secretary of the Treasury. He had long meditated a retirement from his post, the pay of which was inadequate to the support of his family, but had postponed it, first, on account of the accusations brought against him in the second Congress, and of which he awaited the investigation; secondly, in consequence of events which rendered the prospect of a continuance of peace precarious. But these reasons no longer operating, he gave notice, on his return from the Western country, that on the last day of the ensuing month of January he should give in his resignation. He did so, and received the following note from Washington on the subject: "After so long an experience of your public services, I am naturally led, at this moment of your departure from office (which it has always been my wish to prevent), to review them. In every relation which you have borne to me, I have found that my confidence in your talents, exertions, and integrity has been well placed. I the more freely render this testimony of my approbation, because I speak from opportunities of information which cannot deceive me, and which furnish satisfactory proof of your title to public regard.

"My most earnest wishes for your happiness will attend you in your retirement, and you may assure yourself of the sincere esteem, regard, and friendship, of, dear sir, your affectionate," &c.*

Hamilton's reply manifests his sense of the kindness of this letter. "As often as I may recall the vexations I have endured," writes he, "your approbation will be a great and precious consolation. It was not without a struggle that I yielded to the very urgent motives which impelled me to relinquish a station in which I could hope to be in any degree instrumental in promoting the success of an administration under your direction. *

Whatever may be my destination hereafter, I entreat you to be persuaded (not the less from my having been sparing in professions) that I shall never cease to render a just tribute to those eminent and excellent qualities, which have been already productive of so many blessings to your country; that you will always have my fervent wishes for your public and personal felicity, and that it will be my pride to cultivate a continuance of that esteem, regard, and friendship, of which you do me the honor to assure me. With true respect and affectionate attachment, I have the honor to be," &c. *

Hamilton was succeeded in office by Oliver Wolcott, of Connecticut, a man of judgment and ability, who had served as comptroller, and was familiar with the duties of the office.

Knox likewise had given in his resignation at the close of the month of December. "After having served my country nearly twenty years," writes he to Washington, "the greatest portion of which under your immediate auspices, it is with extreme reluctance that I find myself constrained to withdraw from so honorable a station. But the natural and powerful claims of a numerous family will no longer permit me to neglect their essential interests. In whatever situation I shall be, I shall recollect your confidence and kindness, with all the fervor and purity of affection of which a grateful heart is susceptible."

"I cannot suffer you," replies Washington, "to close your public service, without uniting with the satisfaction which must arise in your own mind from a conscious rectitude, my most perfect persuasion that you have deserved well of your country.

"My personal knowledge of your exertions, whilst it authorizes me to hold this language, justifies the sincere friendship which I have ever borne for you, and which will accompany you in every situation of life; being, with affectionate regard, always yours," &c.

There was always a kindly warmth in Washington's expressions towards the buoyant General Knox. Knox was succeeded in the war department by Colonel Timothy Pickering, at that time Postmaster-General.

The session of Congress closed on the 3d of March, 1795.

CHAPTER XXVII.

WASHINGTON'S ANXIETY ADOUT THE PROGRESS OF THE NEGOTIATION WITH ENGLAND—JAY'S TREATY ARRIVES FOR RATIFICATION—PREDISPOSITION TO CONDEMN—RETURN OF JAY—ADET SUCCEEDS FAUCHET AS MINISTER FROM FRANCE—THE TREATY LAID BEFORE THE SENATE—RATIFIED WITH A QUALIFICATION—A NOVEL QUESTION—POPULAR DISCONTENT—ABSTRACT OF THE TREATY PUBLISHED—VICLENT OPPOSITION TO IT—WASHINGTON RESOLVED TO RATIFY—HIS RESOLUTION SUSPENDED—GOES TO MOUNT VERNON—REPLY TO AN ADDRESS FROM BOSTON—INCREASING CLAMOR.

Washington had watched the progress of the mission of Mr. Jay to England, with an anxious eye. He was aware that he had exposed his popularity to imminent hazard, by making an advance toward a negotiation with that power; but what was of still greater moment with him, he was aware that the peace and happiness of his country were at stake on the result of that mission. It was, moreover, a mission of great delicacy, from the many intricate and difficult points to be discussed, and the various and mutual grounds of complaint to be adjusted.

Mr. Jay, in a letter dated August 5th, 1794, had informed him confidentially, that the ministry were prepared to settle the matters in dispute upon just and liberal terms; still, what those terms, which they conceived to be just and liberal, might prove when they came to be closely discussed, no one could prognosti cate.

Washington hardly permitted himself to hope for the complete success of the mission. To 'give and take,' he presumed would be the result. In the mean time there were so many hot heads and impetuous spirits at home to be managed and restrained, that he was anxious the negotiation might assume a decisive form and be brought to a speedy close. He was perplexed too, by what, under existing circumstances, appeared piratical conduct, on the part of Bermudian privateers persisting in capturing American vessels.

At length, on the 7th of March, 1795, four days after the close of the session of Congress, a treaty arrived which had been negotiated by Mr. Jay, and signed by the ministers of the two nations on the 19th of November, and was sent out for ratification.

In a letter to Washington, which accompanied the treaty, Mr. Jay wrote: "To do more was impossible. I ought not to con ceal from you that the confidence reposed in your personal character was visible and useful throughout the negotiation.'

Washington immediately made the treaty a close study; some of the provisions were perfectly satisfactory; of others, he did not approve; on the whole, he considered it a matter, to use his own expression, of 'give and take,' and believing the advantages to outweigh the objections, and that, as Mr. Jay alleged, it was the best treaty attainable, he made up his mind to ratify it, should it be approved by the Senate.

As a system of predetermined hostility to the treaty, how ever, was already manifested, and efforts were made to awaken popular jealousy concerning it, Washington kept its provisions secret, that the public mind might not be preoccupied on the subject. In the course of a few days, however, enough leaked out to be seized upon by the opposition press to excite public distrust, though not enough to convey a distinct idea of the merits of the instrument. In fact, the people were predisposed to condemn, because vexed that any overtures had been made toward a negotiation, such overtures having been stigmatized as cowardly and degrading. If it had been necessary to send a minister to England, said they, it should have been to make a downright demand of reparation for wrongs inflicted on our commerce, and the immediate surrender of the Western posts.

In the mean time Jay arrived on the 28th of May, and found that during his absence in Europe he had been elected governor of the State of New York; an honorable election, there sult of no effort nor intrigue, but of the public sense entertained by his native State, of his pure and exalted merit. He, in consequence, resigned the office of Chief Justice of the United States.

In the course of this month arrived Mr. Adet, who had been appointed by the French government to succeed Mr. Fauchet as minister to the United States. He brought with him the colors of France which the Convention had instructed him to present as a testimonial of friendship, in return for the American flag which had been presented by Mr. Monroe. The presentation of the colors was postponed by him for the present.

The Senate was convened by Washington on the 8th of June, and the treaty of Mr. Jay was laid before it, with its accompanying documents. The session was with closed doors, discussions were long and arduous, and the treaty underwent a scrutinizing examination. The twelfth article met with especial objections.

This article provided for a direct trade between the United States and the British West India Islands, in American vessels not exceeding seventy tons burden, conveying the produce of the States or of the Islands; but it prohibited the exportation of molasses, sugar, coffee, cocoa, or cotton, in American vessels, either from the United States or the Islands, to any part of the world. Under this article it was a restricted intercourse, but Mr. Jay considered the admission even of small vessels, to the trade of these islands, an important advantage to the commerce of the United States. He had not sufficiently adverted to the fact that, among the prohibited articles, cotton was also a product of the Southern States. Its cultivation had been but recently introduced there; so that when he sailed for Europe hardly sufficient had been raised for domestic consumption, and at the time of signing the treaty very little, if any, had been exported. Still it was now becoming an important staple of the South, and hence the objection of the Senate to this article of the treaty. On the 24th of June two-thirds of the Senate, the constitutional majority, voted for the ratification of the treaty, stipulating, however, that an article be added suspending so much of the twelfth article as respected the West India trade, and that the President be requested to open, without delay, further negotiation on this head.

Here was a novel case to be determined. Could the Senate be considered to have ratified the treaty before the insertion of this new article? Was the act complete and final, so as to render it unnecessary to refer it back to that body? Could the President put his final seal upon an act before it was complete? After much reflection, Washington was satisfied of the propriety of ratifying the treaty with the qualification im posed by the Senate.

In the mean time the popular discontent which had been ex cited concerning the treaty was daily increasing. The secrecy which had been maintained with regard to its provisions was wrested into a cause of offence. Republics should have no secrets. The Senate should not have deliberated on the treaty with closed doors.

Such was the irritable condition of the public mind when, on the 29th of June, a senator of the United States (Mr. Mason of Virginia) sent an abstract of the treaty to be published in a leading opposition paper in Philadelphia.

The whole country was immediately in a blaze. Beside the opposition party, a portion of the Cabinet was against the ratification. Of course it received but a faltering support, while the attack upon it was vehement and sustained. The assailants seemed determined to carry their point by storm. Meetings to oppose the ratification were held in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Charleston. The smaller towns throughout the Union followed their example. In New York, a copy of the treaty was burnt before the governor's house. In Philadelphia, it was suspended on a pole, carried about the streets, and finally burnt in front of the British minister's house, amid the shoutings of the populace. The whole country seemed determined, by prompt and clamorous manifestations of dissatisfaction, to make Washington give way.

He saw their purpose; he was aware of the odious points of view on which the treaty might justly be placed; his own opinion was not particularly favorable to it; but he was eonvinced tha it was better to ratify it, in the manner the Senate had advised, and with the reservation already mentioned, than to suffer matters to remain in their present unsettled and precarious state.

Before he could act upon this conviction a new difficulty arose to suspend his resolution. News came that the order of the British government of the 8th of June, 1793, for the seizure of provisions in vessels going to French ports, was renewed. Washington instantly directed that a strong memorial should be drawn up against this order; as it seemed to favor a construction of the treaty which he was determined to resist. While this memorial was in course of preparation, he was called off to Mount Vernon. On his way thither, though little was said to him on the subject of the treaty, he found, he says, from indirect discourses, that endeavors were making to place it in all the odious points of view of which it was susceptible, and in some which it would not admit.

The proceedings and resolves of town meetings, also, savoring as he thought of party prejudice, were forwarded to him by express, and added to his disquiet. "Party disputes are now carried to such a length," writes he, "and truth is so enveloped in mist and false representation, that it is extremely difficult to know through what channel to seek it. This difficulty, to one who is of no party, and whose sole wish is to pursue with undeviating steps a path, which would lead this country to respectability, wealth, and happiness, is exceedingly to be lamented. But such, for wise purposes it is presumed, is the turbulence of human passions in party disputes, when victory more than truth is the palm contended for, that 'the post of honor is a private station." "*

The opposition made to the treaty from meetings in different parts of the Union, gave him the most serious uneasiness, from the effect it might have on the relations with France and England. His reply (July 28th) to an address from the selectmen of Boston, contains the spirit of his replies to other addresses of the kind, and shows the principles which influenced him in regard to the treaty:

* Writings, xi. 40.

In every act of my administration," said he, "I have sought the happiness of my fellow-citizens. My system for the attainment of this object has uniformly been to overlook all personal, local, and partial considerations; to contemplate the United States as one great whole; to confide that sudden impressions, when erroneous, would yield to candid reflection; and to consult only the substantial and permanent interests of our country.

"Nor nave I departed from this line of conduct, on the occasion which has produced the resolutions contained in your letter.

"Without a predilection for my own judgment I have weighed with attention, every argument which has at any time been brought into view. But the constitution is the guide which I never can abandon. It has assigned to the President the power of making treaties with the advice and consent of the Senate. It was, doubtless, supposed that these two branches of government would combine, without passion, and with the best means of information, those facts and principles upon which the success of our foreign relations will always depend; that they ought not to substitute for their own conviction, the opinions of others, or to seek truth through any channel but that of a temperate and well-informed investigation.

"Under this persuasion, I have resolved on the manner of executing the duty before me. To the high responsibility of it, I freely submit, and you, gentlemen, are at liberty to make these sentiments known as the grounds of my procedure. While I feel the most lively gratitude for the many instances of approbation from my country, I can no otherwise deserve it, than by obeying the dictates of my conscience." *

The violence of the opposition increased. Washington perceived that the prejudices against the treaty were more extensive than was generally imagined. "How should it be otherwise," said he, "when no stone has been left unturned that could impress on the minds of the people the most arrant misrepresentation of facts; that their rights have not only been neglected, but absolutely sold; that there are no reciprocal advantages in the treaty; that the benefits are all on the side of Great Britain; and what seems to have had more weight with them than all the rest, and to have been most pressed, that the treaty is made with the design to oppress the French, in open violation of our treaty with that nation; and contrary, too, to every principle of gratitude and sound policy."

Never, during his administration, had he seen a crisis, in his judgment, so pregnant with interesting events, nor one from which, whether viewed on one side or the other, more was to be apprehended.

If the treaty were ratified, the partisans of the French, "or rather," said he, "of war and confusion" would excite them to hostility; if not ratified, there was no foreseeing the consequences as it respected Great Britain. It was a crisis, he said, that most eminently called upon the administration to be wise and temperate, as well as firm. The public clamor continued, and induced a reiterated examination of the subject; but did not shake his purpose. "There is but one straight course," said he, "and that is to seek truth and pursue it steadily." \dagger*

* Writings. Sparks, xi. 42.

† See Letters to Edmund Randolph. Writings, xi. pp. 45-51.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

WASHINGTON RECALLED TO THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT—CONDUCT OF RANDOLPH BROUGHT IN QUESTION—TREATY SIGNED—RESIGNATION OF RANDOLPH—HIS CORRESPONDENCE WITH WASHINGTON—UNLIMITED DISCLOSURE PERMITTED—APPEARANCE OF HIS VINDICATION—PICKERING TRANSFERRED TO THE DEPARTMENT OF STATE—M'HENRY APPOINTED SECRETARY OF WAR —ARRIVAL OF GEORGE WASHINGTON LAFAYETTE.

The difficult and intricate questions pressing upon the attention of government left Washington little mood to enjoy the retirement of Mount Vernon, being constantly in doubt whether his presence in Philadelphia were not necessary. In his letters to Randolph, he requested to be kept continually advised on this head. "While I am in office I shall never suffer private convenience to interfere with what I conceive to be my official duty." "I do not require more than a day's notice to repair to the seat of government."

His promptness was soon put to the test. Early in August came a mysterious letter, dated July 31, from Mr. Pickering, the secretary of war.

"On the subject of the treaty," writes Pickering, "I confess I feel extreme solicitude, and for a special reason, which can be communicated to you only in person. I entreat, therefore, that you will return with all convenient speed to the seat of government. In the meanwhile, for the reason above referred to, I pray you to decide on no important political measure, in whatever form it may be presented to you. Mr. Wolcott and I (Mr. Bradford concurring) waited on Mr. Randolph, and urged his writing to request your return. He wrote in our presence, but we concluded a letter from one of us also expedient. With the utmost sincerity I subscribe myself yours and my country's friend. This letter is for your own eye alone."

The receipt of this enigmatical letter induced Washington to cut short his sojourn at Mount Vernon, and hasten to Philadelphia. He arrived there on the 11th of August; and on the same day received a solution of the mystery. A despatch written by Fauchet, the French minister, to his government in the preceding month of November, was placed in Washington's hands with a translation of it made by Mr. Pickering. The despatch had been found on board of a French privateer, captured by a British frigate, and had been transmitted to the ministry. Lord Grenville, finding it contained passages relating to the intercourse of Mr. Randolph, the American secretary of state, with Mr. Fauchet, had sent it to Mr. Hammond, the British minister in Philadel phia. He had put it into the hands of Mr. Wolcott, the secre tary of the treasury, who had shown it to the secretary of war and the attorney-general; and the contents had been considered so extraordinary as to call forth the mysterious letter entreating the prompt return of Washington.

The following passages in Fauchet's intercepted despatch related to the Western insurrection and the proclamation of Wash ington

"Two or three days before the proclamation was published, and of course before the cabinet had resolved on its measures, the secretary of state came to my house. All his countenance was grief. He requested of me a private conversation. It was all over, he said to me; a civil war is about to ravage our unhappy country. Four men, by their talents, their influence, and their energy, may save it. But, debtors of English merchants, they will be deprived of their liberty if they take the smallest step. Could you lend them instantaneously funds to shelter them from English prosecution? This inquiry astonished me much. It was impossible for me to make a satisfactory answer. You know my want of power and deficiency in pecuniary means." * "Thus, with some thousands of dollars, the Republic could have decided on civil war or peace. Thus the consciences of the pretended patriots of America have already their price."-" What will be the old age of this government, if it is thus already decrepit?"

The perusal of the letter gave Washington deep perplexity and concern. He revolved the matter in his mind in silence. The predominant object of his thoughts recently had been to put a stop to the public agitation on the subject of the treaty; and he postponed any new question of difficulty until decided measures had laid the other at rest. On the next day, therefore, (12th,) he brought before the cabinet the question of immediate ratification. All the members were in favor of it excepting Mr. Randolph; he had favored it before the news of the British provision order, but now pronounced it unadvisable, until that order were revoked, and there should be an end of the war between France and England. This led to further discussion, and it was finally agreed to ratify the treaty immediately; but to accompany the ratification with a strong memorial against the provision order. The ratification was signed by Washington on the 18th of August.

His conduct towards Randolph, in the interim, had been as usual, but now that the despatch of public business no longer demanded the entire attention of the cabinet, he proceeded to clear up the doubts occasioned by the intercepted despatch. Accordingly, on the following day, as Randolph entered the cabinet, Washington, who was conversing with Pickering and Wolcott, rose and handed to him the letter of Fauchet, asking an explanation of the questionable parts.

Randolph appears to have been less agitated by the production of the letter, than hurt that the inquiry concerning it had not first been made of him in private. He postponed making any specific reply, until he should have time to examine the letter at his leisure; and observed on retiring, that, after the treatment he had experienced, he could not think of remaining in office a moment longer.

In a letter to the President the same day he writes: "Your confidence in me, sir, has been unlimited, and I can truly affirm unabused. My sensations, then, cannot be concealed, when I find that confidence so suddenly withdrawn, without a word or distant hint being previously dropped to me. This, sir, as I mentioned in your room, is a situation in which I cannot hold my present office, and therefore I hereby resign it.

"It will not, however, be concluded from hence that I mean to relinquish the inquiry. No, sir; very far from it. I will also meet any inquiry; and to prepare for it, if I learn there is a chance of overtaking Mr. Fauchet before he sails, I will go to him immediately.

"I have to beg the favor of you to permit me to be furnished with a copy of the letter, and I will prepare an answer to it; which I perceive that I cannot do as I wish, merely upon the few hasty memoranda which I took with my pencil.

"I am satisfied, sir, that you will acknowledge one piece of justice to be due on the occasion: which is, that, until an inquiry can be made, the affair shall continue in secrecy under your injunction. For, after pledging myself for a more specific investigation of all the suggestions, I here most solemnly deny that any overture came from me, which was to produce money to me or any others for me; and that in any manner, directly or indirectly, was a shilling ever received by me; nor was it ever contemplated by me, that one shilling should be applied by Mr. Fauchet to any purpose relative to the insurrection."

Washington, in a reply on the following day, in which he accepted his resignation, observes: "Whilst you are in pursuit of means to remove the strong suspicions arising from this letter, no disclosure of its contents will be made by me; and I will enjoin the same on the public officers who are acquainted with the purport of it, unless something will appear to render an explanation necessary on the part of the government, and of which I will be the judge."

And on a subsequent occasion he writes: "No man would rejoice more than I to find that the suspicions which have resulted from the intercepted letter were unequivocally and honorably removed."

Mr. Fauchet, in the mean time, having learnt previous to embarkation, that his despatch had been intercepted, wrote a declaration, denying that Mr. Randolph had ever indicated a willingness to receive money for personal objects, and affirming that he had had no intention to say any thing in his letter to his government, to the disadvantage of Mr. Randolph's character.**

Mr. Randolph now set to work to prepare a pamphlet in explanation of his conduct, intimating to his friends, that in the course of his vindication, he would bring things to view which would affect Washington more than any thing which had yet appeared.†

While thus occupied he addressed several notes to Washington, requiring information on various points, and received concise answers to all his queries.

On one occasion, where he had required a particular paper, he published in the Gazette an extract from his note to Washington; as if fearing the request might be denied, lest the paper in question should lay open many confidential and delicate matters.

In reply, Washington writes: "That you may have no cause to complain of the withholding of any paper, however private and confidential, which you shall think necessary in a case of so serious a nature, I have directed that you should have the inspection of my letter of the 22d of July, agreeably to your request, and you are at full liberty to publish, without reserve, any and every private and confidential letter I ever wrote to you; nay, more, every word I ever uttered to you or in your hearing, from whence you can derive any advantage in your vindication. I grant this permission, inasmuch as the extract alluded to manifestly tends to impress on the public an opinion, that something was passed between us, which you should disclose with reluctance, from motives of delicacy with respect to me. * * That public will judge, when it comes to see your vindication, how far and how proper it has been for you to publish private and confidential communications which oftentimes have been written in a hurry, and sometimes without even copies being taken; and it will, I hope, appreciate my motives, even if it should condemn my prudence, in allowing you the unlimited license herein contained."

* Sparks' Writings of Washington, xi. 90. † Writings, xi. 89. vol. v.—10*

The merit of this unlimited license will be properly understood when it is known that, at this time, Washington was becoming more and more the object of the malignant attacks of the press. The ratification of the treaty had opened the vials of party wrath against him. "His military and political character," we are told, "was attacked with equal violence, and it was averred that he was totally destitute of merit, either as a soldier or a statesman. He was charged with having violated the constitution, in negotiating a treaty without the previous advice of the Senate, and that he had embraced within that treaty subjects belonging exclusively to the legislature, for which an impeachment was publicly suggested. Nay more, it was asserted that he had drawn from the treasury, for his private use, more than the salary annexed to his office." *

This last charge, so incompatible with the whole character and conduct of Washington, was fully refuted by the late Secretary of the Treasury, who explained that the President never himself touched any part of the compensation attached to his office, but that the whole was received and disbursed by the gentleman who superintended the expenses of his household. That the expenses at some times exceeded, and at other times fell short of the quarter's allowance; but that the aggregate fell within the allowance for the year.

* See Marshall's Washington, vol. ii. p. 370.

At this time the General Assembly of Maryland made a unanimous resolution to the following effect: that "observing with deep concern, a series of efforts, by indirect insinuation or open invective, to detach from the first magistrate of the Union, the well-carned confidence of his fellow-citizens; they think it their duty to declare, and they do hereby declare their unabated reliance on the integrity, judgment, and patriotism of the President of the United States."

In a reply to the Governor of Maryland, Washington observed: "At any time the expression of such a sentiment would have been considered as highly honorable and flattering. At the present, when the voice of malignancy is so high-toned, and no attempts are left unessayed to destroy all confidence in the constituted authorities of this country, it is peculiarly grateful to my sensibility." * * *

"I have long since resolved, for the present time at least, to let my calumniators proceed without any notice being taken of their invectives by myself, or by any others, with my participation or knowledge. Their views, I dare say, are readily perceived by all the enlightened and well-disposed part of the community; and by the records of my administration, and not by the voice of faction, I expect to be acquitted or condemned hereafter."

The vindication which Mr. Randolph had been preparing, appeared in December. In this, he gave a narrative of the principal events relating to the case, his correspondence with the President, and the whole of the French minister's letter. He en deavord to explain those parts of the letter which had brought the purity of his conduct in question; but, as has been observed, "he had a difficult task to perform, as he was obliged to preve a negative, and to explain vague expressions and insinuations connected with his name in Fauchet's letter."*

Fauchet himself furnished the best vindication in his certificate above mentioned; but it is difficult to reconcile his certificate with the language of his official letter to his government. We are rather inclined to attribute to misconceptions and hasty inferences of the French minister, the construction put by him in his letter, on the conversation he had held with Mr. Randolph.

The latter injured his cause by the embittered feelings manifested in his vindication, and the asperity with which he spoke of Washington there and elsewhere. He deeply regretted it in after life, and in a letter to the Hon. Bushrod Washington, written in 1810, he says: "I do not retain the smallest degree of that feeling which roused me fifteen years ago, against some If I could now present myself before 1 your venerated uncle, it would be my pride to confess my contrition, that I suffered my irritation, let the cause be what it might, to use some of those expressions respecting him, which, at this moment of indifference to the ideas of the world, I wish to recall, as being inconsistent with my subsequent conviction. My life will, I hope, be sufficiently extended for the recording of my sincere opinion of his virtues and merit, in a style which is not the result of a mind merely debilitated by misfortune, but of that Christian philosophy on which alone I depend for inward tranquillity."†

* Note of Mr. Sparks. Washington's Writings, xi. 90.

+ Marshall's Life of Washington, 2d edition, vol. ii. note xx.

After a considerable interval from the resignation of Randolph, Colonel Pickering was transferred to the Department of State, and Mr. James McHenry was appointed Secretary of War. The office of Attorney-General becoming vacant by the death of Mr. Bradford, was offered to Mr. Charles Lee of Virginia, and accepted by him on the last day of November.

During the late agitations, George Washington Lafayette, the son of the General, had arrived at Boston under the name of Motier, accompanied by his tutor, M. Frestel, and had written to Washington apprising him of his arrival. It was an embarrassing moment to Washington. The letter excited his deepest sensipility, bringing with it recollections of Lafayette's merits, services, and sufferings, and of their past friendship, and he resolved to become "father, friend, protector, and supporter" to his son. But he must proceed with caution; on account of his own official character as Executive of the United States, and of the position of Lafayette in regard to the French government. Caution, also, was necessary, not to endanger the situation of the young man himself, and of his mother and friends whom he had left behind. Philadelphia would not be an advisable residence for him at present, until it was seen what opinions would be excited by his arrival; as Washington would for some time be absent from the seat of government, while all the foreign functionaries were residing there, particularly those of his own nation. suggested, therefore, that he should enter for the present as a student at the University in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and engaged to pay all the expenses for the residence there of himself and his tutor. These and other suggestions were made in a private and confidential letter to Mr. Gerge Cabot of Boston, Senator of the United States, whose kind services he enlisted in the matter.

It was subsequently thought best that young Lafayette should proceed to New York, and remain in retirement, at the country house of a friend in its vicinity, pursuing his studies with his tutor, until Washington should direct otherwise.

CHAPTER XXIX.

MEETING OF CONGRESS—WASHINGTON'S OFFICIAL SUMMARY OF THE EVENTS OF THE YEAR—CORDIAL RESPONSE OF THE SENATE—PARTIAL DEMUR OF THE HOUSE—WASHINGTON'S POSITION AND FEELINGS WITH REGARD TO ENGLAND, AS SHOWN BY HIMSELF—MR. ADET PRESENTS THE COLORS OF FRANCE—THE TREATY RETURNED—PROCEEDINGS THEREUPON—THOMAS PINCKNEY RESIGNS AS MINISTER AT LONDON—RUFUS KING APPOINTED IN HIS PLACE—WASHINGTON'S VIEW OF THE POLITICAL CAMPAIGN—JEFFERSON'S FEARS OF AN ATTEMPT TO SOW DISSENSION BETWEEN 11M AND WASHINGTON—MR. MONROE RECALLED AND C. C. PINCKNEY APPOINTED IN HIS STEAD—RESENTFUL POLICY OF FRANCE.

In his speech at the opening of the session of Congress in December, Washington presented a cheerful summary of the events of the year. "I trust I do not deceive myself," said he, "while I indulge the persuasion, that I have never met you at any period when, more than at present, the situation of our public affairs has afforded just cause for mutual congratulation, and for inviting you to join with me in profound gratitude to the Author of all good, for the numerous and extraordinary blessings we enjoy."

And first he announced that a treaty had been concluded provisionally, by General Wayne, with the Indians northwest of the Ohio, by which the termination of the long, expensive, and distressing war with those tribes was placed at the option of the United States. "In the adjustment of the terms," said he, "the satisfaction of the Indians was deemed an object worthy no less of the policy than of the liberality of the United States, as the necessary basis of durable tranquillity. This object, it is believed, has been fully attained. The articles agreed upon will immediately be laid before the Senate, for their consideration." *

A letter from the Emperor of Morocco, recognizing a treaty which had been made with his deceased father, insured the continuance of peace with that power.

The terms of a treaty with the Dey and regency of Algiers had been adjusted in a manner to authorize the expectation of a speedy peace in that quarter, and the liberation of a number of American citizens from a long and grievous captivity.

A speedy and satisfactory conclusion was anticipated of a negotiation with the court of Madrid, "which would lay the foundation of lasting harmony with a power whose friendship," said Washington, "we have uniformly and sincerely desired to cherish."

Adverting to the treaty with Great Britain and its conditional ratification, the result on the part of his Britannic Majesty was yet unknown, but when ascertained, would immediately be placed before Congress.

"In regard to internal affairs, every part of the Union gave indications of rapid and various improvement. With burthens so light as scarcely to be perceived; with resources fully adequate to present exigencies; with governments founded on the genuine principles of rational liberty; and with mild and wholesome laws, was it too much to say that our country exhibited a spectacle of national happiness never surpassed, if ever before equalled?"

* These preliminary articles were confirmed by a definitive treaty concluded on the 7th of August. Wayne received high testimonials of approbation both from Congress and the President, and made a kind of triumphal entry into Philadelphia amid the cuthusiastic acclamations of the people.

In regard to the late insurrection: "The misled," observes he, "have abandoned their errors, and pay the respect to our constitution and laws which is due from good citizens to the public authorities. These circumstances have induced me to pardon generally the offenders here referred to, and to extend forgiveness to those who had been adjudged to capital punishment."

After recommending several objects to the attention of both Houses, he concludes by advising temperate discussion and mutual forbearance wherever there was a difference of opinion; advice sage and salutary on all occasions, but particularly called for by the excited temper of the times.

There was, as usual, a cordial answer from the Senate; but, in the present House of Representatives, as in the last one, the opposition were in the majority. In the response reported by a committee, one clause expressing undiminished confidence in the chief magistrate was demurred to; some members affirmed, that, with them, it had been considerably diminished by a late transaction. After a warm altercation, to avoid a direct vote, the response was recommitted, and the clause objected to modified. The following is the form adopted: "In contemplating that spectacle of national happiness which our country exhibits, and of which you, sir, have been pleased to make an interesting summary, permit us to acknowledge and declare the very great share which your zealous and faithful services have contributed to it, and to express the affectionate attachment which we feel for your character."

The feelings and position of Washington with regard to England at this juncture, may be judged from a letter dated December 22d, to Gouverneur Morris, then in London, and who was in occasional communication with Lord Grenville. Washington gives a detail of the various causes of complaint against the British government which were rankling in the minds of the American people, and which Morris was to mention, unofficially, should be converse with Lord Grenville on the subject. you these details," writes he, "as evidences of the impolitic conduct of the British government towards these United States; that it may be seen how difficult it has been for the Executive, under such an accumulation of irritating circumstances, to maintain the ground of neutrality which had been taken; and at a time when the remembrance of the aid we had received from France in the Revolution was fresh in every mind, and while the partisans of that country were continually contrasting the affections of that people with the unfriendly disposition of the British government. And that, too, while their own sufferings, during the war with the latter, had not been forgotten.

"It is well known that peace has been (to borrow a modern phrase) the order of the day with me, since the disturbances in Europe first commenced. My policy has been, and will continue to be, while I have the honor to remain in the administration, to maintain friendly terms with, but be independent of, all the nations of the earth; to share in the broils of none; to fulfil our own engagements; to supply the wants and be carriers for them all. * * Nothing short of self-respect, and that justice which is essential to a national character, ought to involve us in war.

"By a firm adherence to these principles, and to the neutral policy which has been adopted, I have brought on myself a torrent of abuse in the factious papers of this country, and from the enmity of the discontented of all descriptions. But having no sinister objects in view, I shall not be diverted from my course by these, nor any attempts which are, or shall be, made to withdraw the confidence of my constituents from me. I have nothing to ask; and, discharging my duty, I have nothing to fear from invective. The acts of my administration will appear when I am no more, and the intelligent and candid part of mankind will not condemn my conduct without recurring to them."

The first day of January, being "a day of general joy and congratulation," had been appointed by Washington to receive the colors of France, sent out by the Committee of Safety. On that day they were presented by Mr. Adet with an address, representing, in glowing language, the position of France, "struggling not only for her own liberty, but for that of the human race. Assimilated to or rather identified with free people by the form of her government, she saw in them only friends and brothers. Long accustomed to regard the American people as her most faithful allies, she sought to draw closer the ties already formed in the fields of America, under the auspices of victory, over the ruins of tyranny."

Washington received the colors with lively sensibility and a brief reply, expressive of the deep solicitude and high admiration produced by the events of the French struggle, and his joy that the interesting revolutionary movements of so many years had issued in the formation of a constitution designed to give permanency to the great object contended for.

In February the treaty with Great Britain, as modified by the advice of the Senate, came back ratified by the king of Great Britain, and on the last of the month a proclamation was issued by the President, declaring it to be the supreme law of the land.

The opposition in the House of Representatives were offended that Washington should issue this proclamation before the sense of that body had been taken on the subject, and denied the power of the President and Senate to complete a treaty without its sanction. They were bent on defeating it by refusing to pass the laws necessary to carry it into effect; and, as a preliminary, passed a resolution requesting the President to lay before the House the instruction to Mr. Jay, and the correspondence and other documents relative to the treaty.

Washington, believing that these papers could not be constitutionally demanded, resolved, he said, from the first moment, and from the fullest conviction of his mind, to resist the principle, which was evidently intended to be established by the call of the House; he only deliberated on the manner in which this could be done with the least bad consequences.

After mature deliberation and with the assistance of the heads of departments and the Attorney-General, he prepared and sent in to the House an answer to their request. In this he dwelt upon the necessity of caution and secreey in foreign negotiations, as one cogent reason for vesting the power of making treaties in the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, the principle on which that body was formed, confining it to a small number of members.

To admit a right in the House of Representatives to demand and have all the papers respecting a foreign negotiation would, he observed, be to establish a dangerous precedent.

"It did not occur to him," he added, "that the inspection of the papers called for, could be relative to any purpose under the cognizance of the House of Representatives, except that of an impeachment, which the resolution had not expressed. He had no disposition to withhold any information which the duty of his station would permit, or the public good should require to be disclosed; and, in fact, all the papers affecting the negotiation with Great Britain had been laid before the Senate, when the treaty itself had been communicated for their consideration and advice."

After various further remarks, he concludes: "As, therefore, it is perfectly clear to my understanding that the assent of the House of Representatives is not necessary to the validity of a treaty; as the treaty with Great Britain exhibits itself in all the objects requiring legislative provision; and on these, the papers called for can throw no light; and as it is essential to the due administration of the government, that the boundaries fixed by the constitution between the different departments, should be observed, a just regard to the constitution and to the duty of my office, under all the circumstances of this case, forbid a compliance with your request."

A resolution to make provision for carrying the treaty into effect, gave rise to an animated and protracted debate. Meanwhile, the whole country became agitated on the subject; meetings were held throughout the United States, and it soon became apparent that the popular feeling was with the minority in the House of Representatives, who favored the making of the necessary appropriations. The public will prevailed, and, on the last day of April, the resolution was passed, though by a close vote of fifty-one to forty-eight.

For some months past, Mr. Thomas Piuckney had been solicitous to be relieved from his post of Minister Plenipotentiary at London, but the doubtful issue of the above dispute, and the difficulty of finding a fit substitute for him, had caused delay in the matter; for, as Mr. Hamilton observed: "The importance, to our security and commerce, of a good understanding with Great Britain, rendered it very important that a man able, and not disagreeable to that government, should be there." Such a man at length presented in Mr. Rufus King, of New York. He had vindicated the treaty with his pen in part of a series of papers signed Camillus; he had defended it by his manly and brilliant eloquence in the Senate; he was now about to guit his seat in that body. Hamilton, who knew him well, struck off his character admirably in a letter to the President. "Mr. King," writes he, "is a remarkably well-informed man, a very judicious one, a man of address, a man of fortune and economy, whose situation affords just ground of confidence; a man of unimpeachable probity where he is known, a firm friend of the government, a supporter of the measures of the President; a man who cannot but feel that he has strong pretensions to confidence and trust."

Mr. King was nominated to the Senate on the 19th of May, and his nomination was confirmed. On the 1st of June, this session of Congress terminated.

On the 12th of that month Washington, in a letter to Colonel Humphrey, then in Portugal, speaks of the recent political campaign: "The gazettes will give you a pretty good idea of the state of politics and parties in this country, and will show you, at the same time, if Bache's Aurora is among them, in what manner I am attacked for persevering steadily in measures which, to me, appear necessary to preserve us, during the conflicts of belligerent powers, in a state of tranquillity. But these attacks, unjust and unpleasant as they are, will occasion no change in my conduct, nor will they produce any other effect in my mind than to increase the solicitude which long since has taken fast hold of my heart, to enjoy, in the shades of retirement, the consolation of believing that I have rendered to my country every service to which my abilities were competent—not from pecuniary or ambitious motives, nor from a desire to provide for any men, further than their intrinsic merit entitled them, and surely not with a view of bringing my own relations into office. Malignity, therefore, may dart its shafts, but no earthly power can deprive me of the satisfaction of knowing that I have not, in the whole course of my administration, committed an intentional error."

On the same day (June 12th) Jefferson, writing from his retirement at Monticello, to Mr. Monroe in Paris, showed himself sensitive to the influence of Washington's great popularity in countervailing party schemes. "Congress*have risen," writes he. "You will have seen by their proceedings the truth of what I always observed to you, that one man outweighs them all in the influence over the people, who have supported his judgment against their own and that of their representatives. Republicanism must lie on its oars, resign the vessel to its pilot, and themselves to what course he thinks best for them."

In Bache's Aurora of June 9th, an anonymous article had appeared, disclosing queries propounded by Washington, in strict confidence, to the members of the cabinet in 1793, as to the conduct to be observed in reference to England and France. As soon as Jefferson saw this article he wrote to Washington (June 19th), disclaiming his having had any concern in that breach of official trust. "I have formerly mentioned to you," observes he, "that from a very early period of my life, I had laid it down as a rule of conduct never to write a word for the public papers. From this I have never departed in a single instance."

Jefferson further intimates a suspicion that a third party had been endeavoring to sow tares between him and Washington, by representing him (Jefferson) as still engaged in the bustle of politics, and in turbulence and intrigue against the government.

This drew-forth a noble reply from Washington. "If I had entertained any suspicions before," writes he 'that the queries, which have been published in Bache's paper, proceeded from you, the assurances you have given me of the contrary, would have removed them; but the truth is, I harbored none. * * *

"As you have mentioned the subject yourself, it would not be frank, candid, or friendly to conceal, that your conduct has been represented as derogating from that opinion I had conceived you entertained of me; that to your particular friends and connections you have described, and they have denounced me as a person under a dangerous influence; and that, if I would listen more to some other opinions, all would be well. My answer invariably has been, that I had never discovered any thing in the conduct of Mr. Jefferson to raise suspicions in my mind of his insincerity; that, if he would retrace my public conduct while he was in the administration, abundant proofs would occur to him, that truth and right decisions were the sole object of my pursuit; that there were as many instances within his own knowledge of my having decided against as in favor of the opinions of the person evidently alluded to; and, moreover, that I was no believer in the infallibility of the politics or measures of any man living. In short, that I was no party man myself, and the first wish of my heart was, if parties did exist, to reconcile them.

"To this I may add, and very truly, that, until within the last year or two, I had no conception that parties would or even could, go the length I have been witness to; nor did I believe until lately, that it was within the bounds of probability, hardly within those of possibility, that, while I was using my utmost exertions to establish a national character of our own, independ ent, as far as our obligations and justice would permit, of every nation of the earth, and wished, by steering a steady course, to preserve this country from the horrors of a desolating war, I should be accused of being the enemy of one nation, and subject to the influence of another; and, to prove it, that every act of my administration would be tortured, and the grossest and most insidious misrepresentations of them be made, by giving one side only of a subject, and that, too, in such exaggerated and indecent terms as could scarcely be applied to a Nero, a notorious defaulter, or even to a common pickpocket. But enough of this; I have already gone further in the expression of my feelings than I intended."

Shortly after the recess of Congress another change was made in the foreign diplomacy. Mr. Monroe, when sent envoy to France, had been especially instructed to explain the views and conduct of the United States in forming the treaty with England; and had been amply furnished with documents for the purpose. From his own letters, however, it appeared that he had omitted to use them. Whether this rose from undue attachment to France, from mistaken notions of American interests, or from real dislike to the treaty, the result was the very evil he had been instructed to prevent. The French government misconceived the views and conduct of the United States, suspected their policy in regard to Great Britain, and when aware that the House of Representatives would execute the treaty made by Jay, became bitter in their resentment. Symptoms of this appeared in the capture of an American merchantman by a French privateer. Under these circumstances it was deemed expedient by Washington and his cabinet, to recall Mr. Monroe, and appoint another American citizen in his stead.

The person chosen was Charles Cotesworth Pinckney of South Carolina, elder brother of the late minister to London. Immediately after this appointment, which took place in July, despatches were received from Mr. Monroe, communicating complaints which had been addressed to him, against the American government by M. De La Croix, French minister of exterior relations, and his reply to the same. His reply, though it failed to change the policy of the French Directory, was deemed able and satisfactory by the Executive. Somewhat later came a letter from Mr. Monroe, written on the 24th, by which it appeared that the long and confidential letter written by Washington on December 22d, and cited in a previous page of this chapter, had, by some chance, got into the hands of the French Directory, and "produced an ill effect."

In a reply to Monroe, dated August 25th, Washington acknowledged the authenticity of the letter, "but I deny," added he, "that there is any thing contained in it that the French government could take exception to, unless the expression of an ardent wish, that the United States might remain at peace with all the world, taking no part in the disputes of any part of it, should have produced this effect. I also gave it as my opinion, that the sentiments of the mass of the citizens of this country were in unison with mine."

And in conclusion, he observes: "My conduct in public and private life, as it relates to the important struggle in which the latter nation [France] is engaged, has been uniform from the commencement of it, and may be summed up in a few words. I have always wished well to the French revolution; that I have always given it as my decided opinion, that no nation had a right to intermeddle in the internal concerns of another; that every one had a right to form and adopt whatever government they liked best to live under themselves; and that, if this country could, consistently with its engagements, maintain a strict neutrality, and thereby preserve peace, it was bound to do so by motives of policy, interest, and every other consideration, that ought to actuate a people situated as we are, already deeply in debt, and in a convalescent state from the struggle we have been engaged in ourselves.

"On these principles I have steadily and uniformly proceeded, bidding defiance to calumnies calculated to sow the seeds of distrust in the French nation, and to excite their belief of an influence possessed by Great Britain in the councils of this country, than which nothing is more unfounded and injurious." *

Still the resentful policy of the French continued, and, in October, they issued an arret ordering the seizure of British property found on board of American vessels, and of provisions bound for England—a direct violation of their treaty with the United States.

* For the entire letter see Washington's Writings, xi. 164.

CHAPTER XXX.

WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS—MEETS THE TWO HOUSES OF CONGRESS FOR THE LAST TIME—HIIS SPEECH—REPLIES OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE
—MR. GILES—ANDREW JACKSON—OFFENSIVE PUBLICATION OF THE FRENCH MINISTER—JOHN ADAMS DECLARED PRESIDENT—WASHINGTON'S LETTER TO KNOX ON THE EVE OF HIS RETIREMENT—THE SPURIOUS LETTERS—HIS FAREWELL DINNER—JOHN ADAMS TAKES THE OATH OF OFFICE—GREETINGS OF WASHINGTON AT THE CLOSE OF THE CEREMONY.

The period for the presidential election was drawing near, and great anxiety began to be felt that Washington would consent to stand for a third term. No one, it was agreed, had greater claim to the enjoyment of retirement, in consideration of public services rendered; but it was thought the affairs of the country would be in a very precarious condition should he retire before the wars of Europe were brought to a close.

Washington, however, had made up his mind irrevocably on the subject, and resolved to announce, in a farewell address, his intention of retiring. Such an instrument, it will be recollected, had been prepared for him from his own notes, by Mr. Madison, when he had thought of retiring at the end of his first term. As he was no longer in confidential intimacy with Mr. Madison, he turned to Mr. Hamilton as his adviser and coadjutor, and appears to have consulted him on the subject early in the present year, for, in a letter dated New York, May 10th, Hamilton writes: "When last in Philadephia, you mentioned to me your wish that I should re-dress a certain paper which you had prepared. As it is important that a thing of this kind should be done with great care and much at leisure, touched and retouched, I submit a wish that, as soon as you have given it the body you mean it to have, it may be sent to me."

The paper was accordingly sent on the 15th of May, in its rough state, altered in one part since Hamilton had seen it. "If you should think it best to throw the whole into a different form," writes Washingon, "let me request, notwithstanding, that my draft may be returned to me (along with yours) with such amendments and corections as to render it as perfect as the formation is susceptible of; curtailed if too verbose, and relieved of all tautology not necessary to enforce the ideas in the original or quoted part. My wish is, that the whole may appear in a plain style; and be handed to the public in an honest, unaffected, simple garb."

We forbear to go into the vexed question concerning this address; how much of it is founded on Washington's original "notes and heads of topics;" how much was elaborated by Madison, and how much is due to Hamilton's recasting and revision. The whole came under the supervision of Washington; and the in strument, as submitted to the press, was in his handwriting, with many ultimate corrections and alterations. Washington had no pride of authorship; his object always was to effect the purpose in hand, and for that he occasionally invoked assistance, to ensure a plain and clear exposition of his thoughts and intentions. The address certainly breathes his spirit throughout, is in perfect accordance with his words and actions, and "in an honest, unaffected, simple garb," embodies the system of policy on which he had acted throughout his administration. It was published in September, in a Philadelphia paper called the Daily Advertiser.*

The publication of the address produced a great sensation. Several of the State legislatures ordered it to be put on their journals. "The President's declining to be again elected," writes the elder Wolcott, "constitutes a most important epoch in our national affairs. The country meet the event with reluctance, but they do not feel that they can make any claim for the further services of a man who has conducted their armies through a successful war; has so largely contributed to establish a national government; has so long presided over our councils and directed the public administration, and in the most advantageous manner settled all national differences, and who can leave the administration where nothing but our folly and internal discord can render the country otherwise than happy."

The address acted as a notice, to hush the acrimonious abuse of him which the opposition was pouring forth under the idea that he would be a candidate for a renomination. "It will serve as a signal, like the dropping of a hat, for the party racers to start," writes Fisher Ames, "and I expect a great deal of noise, whipping and spurring."

Congress formed a quorum on the 5th day of December, the first day of the session which succeeded the publication of the

* The reader will find the entire Address in the Appendix to his volume.

Farewell Address. On the 7th, Washington met the two Houses of Congress for the last time.

In his speech he recommended an institution for the improvement of agriculture, a military academy, a national university and a gradual increase of the navy. The disputes with France were made the subject of the following remarks: "While in our external relations some serious inconveniences and embarrassments have been overcome and others lessened, it is with much pain and deep regret I mention that circumstances of a very unwelcome nature have lately occurred. Our trade has suffered and is suffering extensive injuries in the West Indies from the cruisers and agents of the French Republic; and communications have been received from its minister here, which indicate the danger of a further disturbance of our commerce by its authority; and which are in other respects far from agreeable. It has been my constant, sincere, and earnest wish, in conformity with that of our nation, to maintain cordial harmony and a perfectly friendly understanding with that Republic. This wish remains unabated; . and I shall persevere in the endeavor to fulfil it to the utmost extent of what shall be consistent with a just and indispensable regard to the rights and honor of our country; nor will I easily cease to cherish the expectation, that a spirit of justice, candor and friendship, on the part of the Republic, will eventually ensure success.

"In pursuing this course, however, I cannot forget what is due to the character of our government and nation; or to a full and entire confidence in the good sense, patriotism, self-respect, and fortitude of my countrymen."

In concluding his address he observes, "The situation in which I now stand for the last time in the midst of the repre sentatives of the people of the United States, naturally recalls the period when the administration of the present form of government commenced, and I cannot omit the occasion to congratulate you and my country on the success of the experiment, nor to repeat my fervent supplications to the Supreme Ruler of the universe and Sovereign Arbiter of nations, that his providential care may be still extended to the United States; that the virtue and happiness of the people may be preserved, and that the government which they have instituted for the protection of their liberties may be perpetual."

The Senate, in their reply to the address, after concurring in its views of the national prosperity, as resulting from the excellence of the constitutional system and the wisdom of the legislative provisions, added, that they would be deficient in gratitude and justice did they not attribute a great portion of these advantages to the virtue, firmness and talents of his administration, conspicuously displayed in the most trying times, and on the most critical occasions.

Recalling his arduous services, civil and military, as well during the struggles of the revolution as in the convulsive period of a later date, their warmest affections and anxious regards would accompany him in his approaching retirement.

"The most effectual consolation that can offer for the loss we are about to sustain, arises from the animating reflection, that the influence of your example will extend to your successors, and the United States thus continue to enjoy an able, upright, and energetic administration."

The reply of the House, after premising attention to the various subjects recommended to their consideration in the address, concluded by a warm expression of gratitude and admiration, inspired by the virtues and services of the President, by his wisdom, firmness, moderation, and magnanimity; and testifying to the deep regret with which they contemplated his intended retirement from office.

"May you long enjoy that liberty which is so dear to you nd to which your name will ever be so dear," added they "May your own virtue and a nation's prayers obtain the happiest sunshine for the decline of your days, and the choicest of future blessings. For our country's sake, and for the sake of republican liberty, it is our earnest wish that your example may be the guide of your successors; and thus, after being the ornament and safeguard of the present age, become the patrimony of our descendants."

Objections, however, were made to some parts of the reply by Mr. Giles, of Virginia. He was for expunging such parts as eulogized the present administration, spoke of the wisdom and firmness of Washington, and regretted his retiring from office. disapproved, he said, of the measures of the administration with respect to foreign relations; he believed its want of wisdom and firmness had conducted the nation to a crisis threatening greater calamity than any that had before occurred. He did not regret the President's retiring from office. He believed the government of the United States was founded on the broad basis of the people, that they were competent to their own government, and the remaining of no man in office was necessary to the success of that government. The people would truly be in a calamitous situation, if one man were essential to the existence of the government. He was convinced that the United States produces a thousand citizens capable of filling the presidential chair, and he would trust to the discernment of the people for a proper choice. Though the voice of all America should declare the President's retiring as a calamity, he could not join in the declaration, because he did not conceive it a misfortune. He hoped the President would be happy in his retirement, and he hoped he would retire.*

Twelve members voted for expunging those parts of the reply to which Mr. Giles had objected. Among the names of these members we find that of Andrew Jackson, a young man, twentynine years of age, as yet unknown to fame, and who had recently taken his seat as delegate from the newly admitted State of Tennessee. The vote in favor of the whole reply, however, was overwhelming.

The reverence and affection expressed for him in both Houses of Congress, and their regret at his intended retirement, were in unison with testimonials from various State legislatures and other public bodies, which were continually arriving since the publication of his Farewell Address.

During the actual session of Congress, Washington endeavored to prevent the misunderstandings, which were in danger of being augmented between the United States and the French Government. In the preceding month of November, Mr. Adet, the French minister, had addressed a letter to the Secretary of State, recapitulating the complaints against the government of the United States made by his predecessors and himself, denouncing the insidious proclamation of neutrality and the wrongs growing out of it, and using language calculated to inflame the partisans of France: a copy of which letter had been sent to the press for publication. One of the immediate objects he had in view in timing the publication, was supposed by Washington to be to produce an effect on the presidential election; his ultimate object, to establish such an influence in the country as to sway the government and control its measures. Early in January, 1797, therefore, Washington requested Mr. Pickering, the Secretary of State, to address a letter to Mr. Pinckney, United States minister to France, stating all the complaints alleged by the French minister against the government, examining and reviewing the same, and accompanying the statement with a collection of letters and papers relating to the transactions therein adverted to.

* See Mr. Giles' speech, as reported in the Aurora newspaper.

"From a desire," writes he, "that the statements be full, fair, calm, and argumentative, without asperity or any thing more irritating in the comments that the narration of facts, which expose unfounded charges and assertions, does itself produce, I have wished that the letter to Mr. Pinckney may be revised over and over again. Much depends upon it, as it relates to ourselves and in the eyes of the world, whatever may be the effect, as it respects the governing powers of France."

The letter to Mr. Pinckney, with its accompanying documents, was laid before Congress on the 19th of January, (1797,) to be transmitted to that minister. "The immediate object of his mission," says Washington in a special message, "was to make that government such explanations of the principles and conduct of our own, as by manifesting our good faith, might remove all jealousy and discontent, and maintain that harmony and good understanding with the French Republic, which it has been my constant solicitude to preserve. A government which required only a knowledge of the truth to justify its measures, could but be anxious to have this fully and frankly displayed."

In the month of February the votes taken at the recent election were opened and counted in Congress; when Mr. Adams, having the highest number, was declared President, and Mr. Jefferson, having the next number, Vice President; their term of four years to commence on the 4th of March next ensuing.

Washington now began to count the days and hours that intervened between him and his retirement. On the day preceding it, he writes to his old fellow-soldier and political coadjutor, Henry Knox: "To the wearied traveller, who sees a resting-place, and is bending his body to lean thereon, I now compare myself; but to be suffered to do this in peace, is too much to be endured by some. To misrepresent my motives, to reprobate my politics, and to weaken the confidence which has been reposed in my administration, are objects which cannot be relinquished by those who will be satisfied with nothing short of a change in our political system. The consolation, however, which results from conscious rectitude, and the approving voice of my country, unequivocally expressed by its representatives, deprive their sting of its poison, and place in the same point of view, both the weak-ress and malignity of their efforts.

"Although the prospect of retirement is most grateful to my soul, and I have not a wish to mix again in the great world, or to partake in its politics, yet I am not without my regrets at parting with (perhaps never more to meet) the few intimates whom I love, and among these, be assured, you are one. * * * The remainder of my life, which in the course of nature cannot be long, will be occupied in rural amusements; and though I sha seclude myself as much as possible from the noisy and bustling world, none would, more than myself, be regaled by the company of those I esteem, at Mount Vernon; more than twenty miles from which, after I arrive there, it is not likely that I shall ever be."

On the morning of the 3d of March, the last day of his official career, Washington addressed a letter to the Secretary of State on the subject of the spurious letters, heretofore mentioned,* first published by the British in 1776, and subsequently republished during his administration, by some of his political enemies. He had suffered every attack on his executive conduct to pass unnoticed while he remained in public life, but conceived it a justice due to his character solemnly to pronounce those letters a base forgery, and he desired that the present letter might be "deposited in the office of the Department of State, as a testimony to the truth to the present generation and to posterity."

On the same day he gave a kind of farewell dinner to the foreign ministers and their wives, Mr. and Mrs. Adams, Mr. Jefferson, and other conspicuous personages of both sexes. "During the dinner much hilarity prevailed," says Bishop White, who was present. When the cloth was removed Washington filled his glass: "Ladies and gentlemen," said he, "this is the last time I shall drink your health as a public man; I do it with sincerity, wishing you all possible happiness."

The gaiety of the company was checked in an instant; all felt the importance of this leave-taking; Mrs. Liston, the wife of the British minister, was so much affected that tears streamed down her cheeks.

On the 4th of March, an immense crowd had gathered about Congress Hall. At eleven o'clock, Mr. Jefferson took the oath as Vice President in the presence of the Senate; and proceeded with that body to the Chamber of the House of Representatives, which was densely crowded, many ladies occupying chairs ceded to them by members.

* Life of Washington, vol. iii., 8vo. p. 360, 361.

After a time, Washington entered amidst enthusiastic cheers and acclamations, and the waving of handkerchiefs. Mr. Adams soon followed and was likewise well received, but not with like enthusiasm. Having taken the oath of office, Mr. Adams, in his inaugural address, spoke of his predecessor as one "who, by a long course of great actions, regulated by prudence, justice, temperance, and fortitude, had merited the gratitude of his fellow-citizens, commanded the highest praises of foreign nations, and secured immortal glory with posterity."

At the close of the ceremony, as Washington moved toward the door to retire, there was a rush from the gallery to the corridor that threatened the loss of life or limb, so eager were the throng to catch a last look of one who had so long been the object of public veneration. When Washington was in the street he waved his hat in return for the cheers of the multitude, his countenance radiant with benignity, his gray hairs streaming in the wind. The crowd followed him to his door; there, turning round, his countenance assumed a grave and almost melancholy expression, his eyes were bathed in tears, his emotions were too great for utterance, and only by gestures could he indicate his thanks and convey his farewell blessing.*

In the evening a splendid banquet was given to him by the principal inhabitants of Philadelphia in the Amphitheatre, which was decorated with emblematical paintings. All the heads of departments, the foreign ministers, several officers of the late army, and various persons of note, were present. Among the paintings, one represented the home of his heart, the home to which he was about to hasten—Mount Vernon.

* From personal recollections of William A. Duer, late President o. Columbia College.

CHAPTER XXXI.

WASHINGTON AT MOUNT VERNON—INFLUX OF STRANGE FACES—LAWRENCE LEWIS—MISS NELLY CUSTIS—WASHINGTON'S COUNSEL IN LOVE MATTERS—A ROMANTIC EPISODE—RETURN OF GEORGE WASHINGTON LAFAYETTE.

His official career being terminated, Washington set off for Mount Vernon accompanied by Mrs. Washington, her grand-daughter Miss Nelly Custis, and George Washington Lafayette, with his preceptors.

Of the enthusiastic devotion manifested towards him wherever he passed, he takes the following brief and characteristic notice: "The attentions we met with on our journey were very flattering, and to some, whose minds are differently formed from mine, would have been highly relished; but I avoided, in every instance where I had any previous notice of the intention, and could, by earnest entreaties, prevail, all parade and escorts."

He is at length at Mount Vernon, that haven of repose to which he had so often turned a wishful eye, throughout his agitated and anxious life, and where he trusted to pass quietly and serencly the remainder of his days. He finds himself, however, "in the situation of a new beginner; almost every thing about him required considerable repairs, and a house is immediately to be built for the reception and safe keeping of his military, civil, and private papers." "In a word," writes he, "I am already surrounded by joiners, masons, and painters, and such is my anxiety to be out of their hands, that I have searcely a room to put a friend into, or to sit in myself, without the music of hammers and the odoriferous scent of paint."

Still he is at Mount Vernon, and as the spring opens the rural beauties of the country exert their sweetening influence. In a letter to his friend Oliver Wolcott, who, as Secretary of the Treasury, was still acting on "the great theatre," he adverts but briefly to public affairs. "For myself," adds he, exultingly, "having turned aside from the broad walks of political into the narrow paths of private life, I shall leave it with those whose duty it is to consider subjects of this sort, and, as every good citizen ought to do, conform to whatsoever the ruling powers shall decide. To make and sell a little flour annually, to repair houses going fast to ruin, to build one for the security of my papers of a public nature, and to amuse myself in agricultural and rural pursuits, will constitute employment for the few years I have to remain on this terrestrial globe. If, also, I could now and then meet the friends I esteem, it would fill the measure and add zest to my enjoyments; but, if ever this happens, it must be under my own vine and fig-tree, as I do not think it probable that I shall go beyond twenty miles from them."

And again, to another friend he indulges in pleasant anticipations: "Retired from noise myself and the responsibility attached to public employment, my hours will glide smoothly on. My best wishes, however, for the prosperity of our country will always have the first place in my thoughts; while to repair buildings and to cultivate my farms, which require close attention, will occupy the few years, perhaps days, I may be a sojourner here, as I am now in the sixty-fifth year of my peregrination through life."  $\ast$

A letter to his friend James McHenry, Secretary of War, furnishes a picture of his every-day life. "I am indebted to you," writes he, "for several unacknowledged letters; but never mind that; go on as if you had answers. You are at the source of information, and can find many things to relate, while I have nothing to say that could either inform or amuse a Secretary of War in Philadelphia. I might tell him that I begin my diurnal course with the sun; that, if my hirelings are not in their places at that time, I send them messages of sorrow for their indisposition; that, having put these wheels in motion, I examine the state of things further; that the more they are probed the deeper I find the wounds which my buildings have sustained, by an absence and neglect of eight years; that, by the time I have accomplished these matters, breakfast (a little after seven o'clock, about the time I preume you are taking leave of Mrs. McHenry) is ready; that, this being over, I mount my horse and ride round my farms, which employs me until it is time to dress for dinner, at which I rarely miss seeing strange faces, come, as they say, out of respect to me. Pray, would not the word euriosity answer as well? And how different this from having a few social friends at a cheerful board! The usual time of sitting at table, a walk, and tea bring me within the dawn of candle light; previous to which, if not prevented by company, I resolve that, as soon as the glimmering taper supplies the place of the great luminary, I will retire to my writing table and acknowledge the letters I have received; but when the lights are brought I feel tired and disinclined to engage in this work, conceiving that the next night will do as well. The next night comes, and with it the same causes for postponement, and so on. Having given you the history of a day, it will serve for a year, and, I am persuaded, you will not require a second edition of it. But it may strike you that in this detail no mention is made of any portion of time allotted for reading. The remark would be just, for I have not looked into a book since I came home; nor shall I be able to do it until I have discharged my workmen; probably not before the nights grow longer, when possibly I may be looking in Doomsday Book."

* Letter to Wm. Heath. Writings, xi. 199.

In his solitary rides about Mount Vernon and its woodlands, fond and melancholy thoughts would occasionally sadden the landscape as his mind reverted to past times and early associates. In a letter to Mrs. S. Fairfax, now in England, he writes: "It is a matter of sore regret when I cast my eyes toward Belvoir, which I often do, to reflect that the former inhabitants of it, with whom we lived in such harmony and friendship, no longer reside there, and the ruins only can be viewed as the mementoes of former pleasures."

The influx of strange faces alluded to in the letter to Mr. McHenry, soon became overwhelming, and Washington felt the necessity of having some one at hand to relieve him from a part of the self-imposed duties of Virginia hospitality.

With this view he bethought him of his nephew, Lawrence Lewis, the same who had gained favor with him by volunteering in the Western expedition, and accompanying General Knox as aide-de-camp. He accordingly addressed a letter to him in which he writes: "Whenever it is convenient to you to make this place your home, I shall be glad to see you. * * * As both your aunt and I are in the decline of life, and regular in our habits, especially in our hours of rising and going to bed, I require some person (fit and proper) to ease me of the trouble of entertaining company, particularly of nights, as it is my inclination to retire, (and unless prevented by very particular company, I always do retire,) either to bed or to my study soon after candle .ght. In taking those duties (which hospitality obliges one to nestow on company) off my hands, it would render me a very acceptable service."*

In consequence of this invitation, Lawrence thenceforward became an occasional inmate at Mount Vernon. The place at this time possessed attractions for gay as well as grave, and was often enlivened by young company. One great attraction was Miss Nelly Custis, Mrs. Washington's grand-daugher, who, with her brother George W. P. Custis, had been adopted by the General at their father's death, when they were quite children, and brought up by him with the most affectionate care. He was fond of children, especially girls; as to boys, with all his spirit of command, he found them at times somewhat ungovernable. I can govern men, would he say, but I cannot govern boys. Miss Nelly had grown up under the special eye of her grandmother, to whom she was devotedly attached, and who was particular in enforcing her observance of all her lessons, as well as instructing her in the arts of housekeeping. She was a great favorite with the General; whom, as we have before observed, she delighted with her gay whims and sprightly sallies, often overcoming his habitual gravity, and surprising him into a hearty laugh.

She was now maturing into a lovely and attractive woman and the attention she received began to awaken some solicitude in the General's mind. This is evinced in a half-sportive letter of advice written to her during a temporary absence from Mount Vernon, when she was about to make her first appearance at a ball at Georgetown. It is curious as a specimen of Washington' counsel in love matters. It would appear that Miss Nelly, to allay his solicitude, had already, in her correspondence, professed "a perfect apathy toward the youth of the present day, and a determination never to give herself a moment's uneasiness on account of any of them." Washington doubted the firmness and constancy of her resolves. "Men and women," writes he, "feel the same inclination towards each other now that they always have done, and which they will continue to do, until there is a new order of things; and you, as others have done, may find that the passions of your sex are easier raised than allayed. Do not, therefore, boast too soon, nor too strongly of your insensibility. * * * Love is said to be an involuntary passion, and it is, therefore, contended that it cannot be resisted. This is true in part only, for like all things else, when nourished and supplied plentifully with aliment, it is rapid in its progress; but let these be withdrawn, and it may be stifled in its birth, or much stinted in its growth. * * * Although we cannot avoid first impressions, we may assuredly place them under guard. * * * When the fire is beginning to kindle and your heart growing warm, propound these questions to it. Who is this invader? Have I a competent knowledge of him? Is he a man of good character? A man of sense? For, be assured, a sensible woman can never be happy with a fool. What has been his walk in life? * * * Is his fortune sufficient to maintain me in the manner I have been accustomed to live, and as my sisters do live? And is he one to whom my friends can have no reasonable objection? If all these interrogatories can be satisfactorily answered, there will remain but one more to be asked; that, however, is an important one. Have I sufficient ground to conclude that his affections are engaged by me? Without this the heart of sensibility will strug gle against a passion that is not reciprocated." *

The sage counsels of Washington, and the susceptible feelings of Miss Nelly, were soon brought to the test by the residence of Lawrence Lewis at Mount Vernon. A strong attachment for her grew up on his part, or perhaps already existed, and was strengthened by daily intercourse. It was favorably viewed by his uncle. Whether it was fully reciprocated was uncertain. A formidable rival to Lewis appeared in the person of young Carroll of Carrollton, who had just returned from Europe, adorned with the graces of foreign travel, and whose suit was countenanced by Mrs. Washington. These were among the poetic days of Mount Vernon, when its halls echoed to the tread of lovers. They were haleyon days with Miss Nelly, as she herself declared, in after years, to a lady, from whom we have the story: "I was young and romantic then," said she, "and fond of wandering alone by moonlight in the woods of Mount Vernon. Grandmamma thought it wrong and unsafe, and seolded and coaxed me into a promise that I would not wander in the woods again unaccompanied. But I was missing one evening, and was brought home from the interdicted woods to the drawing-room, where the General was walking up and down with his hands behind him, as was his wont. Grandmamma, seated in her great arm-chair, opened a severe reproof."

Poor Miss Nelly was reminded of her promise, and taxed with her delinquency. She knew that she had done wrong—admitted her fault, and essayed no excuse; but, when there was a slight pause, moved to retire from the room. She was just shutting the door when she overheard the General attempting, in a low voice, to intercede in her behalf. "My dear," observed he, "I would say no more—perhaps she was not alone."

His intercession stopped Miss Nelly in her retreat. She reopened the door and advanced up to the General with a firm step. "Sir," said she, "you brought me up to speak the truth, and when I told Grandmamma I was alone, I hope you believed I was alone."

The General made one of his most magnanimous bows. "My child," replied he, "I beg your pardon."

We will anticipate dates, and observe that the romantic episode of Miss Nelly Custis terminated to the General's satisfaction; she became the happy wife of Lawrence Lewis, as will be recorded in a future page.

Early in the autumn, Washington had been relieved from his constant solicitude about the fortunes of Lafayette. Letters received by George W. Lafayette from friends in Hamburg, informed the youth that his father and family had been liberated from Olmutz and were on their way to Paris, with the intention of embarking for America. George was disposed to sail for France immediately, eager to embrace his parents and sisters in the first moments of their release. Washington urged him to defer his departure until he should receive letters from the prisoners themselves, lest they should cross the ocean in different directions at the same time, and pass each other, which would be a great shock to both parties. George, however, was not to be persuaded, and "I could not withhold my assent," writes Washington, "to the gratification of his wishes, to fly to the arms of those whom he holds most dear."

George and his tutor, Mr. Frestel, sailed from New York on the 26th of October. Washington writes from Mount Vernon to Lafayette: "This letter, I hope and expect, will be presented to you by your son, who is highly deserving of such parents as you and your amiable lady.

"He can relate, much better than I can describe, my participation in your sufferings, my solicitude for your relief, the measures I adopted, though ineffectual, to facilitate your liberation from an unjust and cruel imprisonment, and the joy I experienced at the news of its accomplishment. I shall hasten, therefore, to congratulate you, and be assured that no one can do it with more cordiality, with more sincerity, or with greater affection on the restoration of that liberty which every act of your life entitles you to the enjoyment of; and I hope I may add, to the uninterrupted possession of your estates, and the confidence of your country."

The account which George W. Lafayette had received of the liberation of the prisoners of Olmutz was premature. It did not take place until the 19th of September, nor was it until in the following month of February that the happy meeting took place beween George and his family, whom he found residing in the chatcau of a relative in Holstein.

CHAPTER XXXII.

FARTING ADDRESS OF THE FRENCH DIRECTORY TO MR. MONROE—THE NEW

AMERICAN MINISTER ORDERED TO LEAVE THE REPUBLIC—CONGRESS CONVENED—MEASURES OF DEFENCE RECOMMENDED—WASHINGTON'S CONCERN —APPOINTMENT OF THREE ENVOYS EXTRAORDINARY—DOUBTS THEIR SUCCESS—HEARS OF AN OLD COMPANION IN ARMS—THE THREE MINISTERS

AND TALLEYRAND—THEIR DEGRADING TREATMENT—THREATENED WAR

WITH FRANCE—WASHINGTON APPOINTED COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF—ARRANGES FOR THREE MAJOR GENERALS—KNOX AGGRIEVED.

Washington had been but a few months at Mount Vernon, when he received intelligence that his successor in office had issued a proclamation for a special session of Congress. He was not long in doubt as to its object. The French government had declared, on the recall of Mr. Monroe, that it would not receive any new minister plenipotentiary from the United States until that power should have redressed the grievances of which the republic had complained. When Mr. Monroe had his audience of leave, Mr. Barras, the president of the Directory, addressed him in terms complimentary to himself, but insulting to his country. "The French Republic hopes," said he, "that the successors of Columbus, of Raleigh, and of Penn, ever proud of their liberty, will never forget that they owe it to France. * * * In their wisdom, they will weigh the magnanimous benevolence of the French people with the artful caresses of perfidious designers, who meditate to draw them back to their ancient slavery. Assure, Mr. Minister, the good American people that, like them, we adore liberty; that they will always have our esteem, and that they will find in the French people the republican generosity which knows how to accord peace, as it knows how to make its sovereignty respected.

"As to you, Mr. Minister Plenipotentiary, you have fought for the principles, you have known the true interests of your country. Depart with our regrets. We give up, in you, a representative of America, and we retain the remembrance of the citizen whose personal qualities honor that title."

A few days afterwards, when Mr. Charles Cotesworth Pinckney presented himself as successor to Mr. Monroe, the Directry refused to receive him, and followed up the indignity by ordering him to leave the territories of the republic. Its next step was to declare applicable to American ships the rules in regard to neutrals, contained in the treaty which Washington had signed with England.

It was in view of these facts and of the captures of American vessels by French cruisers, that President Adams had issued a proclamation to convene Congress on the 15th of May. In his opening speech, he adverted especially to what had fallen from Mr. Barras in Monroe's audience of leave. "The speech of the President," said he, "discloses sentiments more alarming than the refusal of a minister, because more dangerous to our independence and union; and, at the same time, studiously marked with indignities towards the government of the United States. It evinces a disposition to separate the people from their government; to persuade them that they have different affections, principles, and interests from those of their fellow-citizens, whom they themselves have chosen to manage their common concerns, and thus to produce divisions fatal to our peace. Such attempts ought to be repelled with a decision which shall convince France and the world, that we are not a degraded people, humiliated under a colonial spirit of fear, and sense of inferiority, fitted to be the miserable instrument of foreign influence, and regardless of national honor, character, and interest."

Still he announced his intention to institute a fresh attempt by negotiation, to effect an amicable adjustment of differences, on terms compatible with the rights, duties, interests, and honor of the nation, but in the mean time he recommended to Congress to provide effectual measures of defence.

Though personally retired from public life, Washington was too sincere a patriot to be indifferent to public affairs, and felt acutely the unfriendly acts of the French Government, so repugnant to our rights and dignity. "The President's speech," writes he, "will, I conceive, draw forth, mediately or immediately, an expression of the public mind; and as it is the right of the people that this should be carried into effect, their sentiments ought to be unequivocally known, that the principles on which the government has acted, and which, from the President's speech, are likely to be continued, may either be changed, or the opposition that is endeavoring to embarrass every measure of the executive, may meet effectual discountenance. Things cannot and ought not to remain any longer in their present disagreeable state. Nor, should the idea that the government and the people have different views, be suffered any longer to prevail at home or abroad; for it is not only injurious to us, but disgraceful also, that a government constituted as ours is, should be administered contrary to their interest, if the fact be so."*

In pursuance of the policy announced by Mr. Adams, three envoys extraordinary were appointed to the French republic, viz.: Charles Cotesworth Pinckney, John Marshall, and Elbridge Gerry; the two former federalists, the latter a democrat. The object of their mission, according to the President, was "to dissipate umbrages, remove prejudices, rectify errors, and adjust all differences by a treaty between the two powers."

Washington doubted an adjustment of the differences. "Candor," said he, "is not a more conspicuous trait in the character of governments than it is of individuals. It is hardly to be expected, then, that the Directory of France will acknowledge its errors and tread back its steps immediately. This would announce at once, that there has been precipitancy and injustice in the measures they have pursued; or that they were incapable of judging, and had been deceived by false appearances."

About this time he received a pamphlet on the "Military and Political Situation of France." It was sent to him by the author, General Dumas, who, in the time of our revolution, had been an officer in the army of the Count de Rochambeau. "Your Excellency," writes Dumas, "will observe in it (the pamphlet) the effect of your lessons." Then speaking of his old military chief: "General Rochambeau," adds he, "is still at his country scat near Vendome. He enjoys there tolerably good health considering his great age, and reckons, as well as his military family, amongst his most dear and glorious remembrances, that of the time we had the honor to serve under your command."

* Letter to Thomas Pinckney. Writings, xi. 202.

Some time had elapsed since Washington had heard of his old companion in arms, who had experienced some of the melodramatic vicissitudes of the French revolution. After the arrest of the king he had taken anew the oath of the constitution, and commanded the army of the north, having again received the baton of field marshal. Thwarted in his plans by the minister of war, he had resigned and retired to his estate near Vendome; but, during the time of terror had been arrested, conducted to Paris, thrown into the conciergerie, and condemned to death. When the car came to convey a number of the victims to the guillotine, he was about to mount it, but the executioner seeing it full, thrust him back. "Stand back, old marshal," cried he, roughly, "your turn will come by and bye." (Retire toi, vieux maréchal, ton tour viendra plus tard.) A sudden change in political affairs saved his life, and enabled him to return to his home near Vendome, where he now resided."

In a reply to Dumas, which Washington forwarded by the minister plenipotentiary about to depart for France, he sent his cordial remembrances to de Rochambeau.*

The three ministers met in Paris on the 4th of October, (1797,) but were approached by Talleyrand and his agents in a manner which demonstrated that the avenue to justice could only be opened by gold. Their official report reveals the whole * The worthy de Rochambeau survived the storms of the Revolution. In 1803 he was presented to Napoleon, who, pointing to Berthier and other generals who had once served under his orders, said: "Marshal, behold your scholars." "The scholars have surpassed their master," replied the modest veteran.

In the following year he received the cross of grand officer of the legion of honor, and a marshal's pension. He died full of years and honors, in 1807.

† American State Papers, vols. iii. and iv.

of this dishonorable intrigue. It states that Mr. Pinckney received a visit from Mr. Bellarni, the secret agent of Mr. Talley rand, who assured him that Citizen Talleyrand had the highest esteem for America and the citizens of the United States, and was most anxious for their reconciliation with France. With that view some of the most offensive passages in the speech of President Alams (in May 1797) must be expunged, and a douceur of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars put at the disposal of Mr. Talleyrand for the use of the Directory, and a large loan made by America to France.

On the 20th of October, the same subject was resumed in the apartments of the plenipotentiary, and on this occasion, beside the secret agent, an intimate friend of Talleyrand was present. The expunging of the passages in the President's speech was again insisted on, and it was added that, after that, money was the principal object. "We must have money—a great deal of money!" were his words.

At a third conference, October 21st, the sum was fixed at 32,000,000 francs (6,400,000 dollars), as a loan secured on the Dutch contributions, and 250,000 dollars in the form of a douceur to the Directory.

At a subsequent meeting, October 27th, the same secret agent said, "Gentlemen, you mistake the point, you say nothing of the money you are to give—you make no offer of money—on that point you are not explicit." "We are explicit enough," replied the American envoys. "We will not give you one farthing; and before coming here, we should have thought such an offer as you now propose, would have been regarded as a mortal insult."

On this indignant reply, the wily agent intimated that if they would only pay, by way of fees, just as they would to a lawyer, who should plead their cause, the sum required for the private use of the Directory, they might remain at Paris until they should receive further orders from America as to the loan required for government.*

Being inaccessible to any such disgraceful and degrading propositions, the envoys remained several months in Paris unaccredited, and finally returned at separate times, without an official discussion of the object of their mission.

During this residence of the envoys in Paris, the Directory, believing the people of the United States would not sustain their government in a war against France, proceeded to enact a law subjecting to capture and condemnation neutral vessels and their cargoes, if any portion of the latter was of British fabric or produce, although the entire property might belong to neutrals. As the United States were at this time the great neutral carriers of the world, this iniquitous decree struck at a vital point in their maritime power. ‡

When this act and the degrading treatment of the American envoys became known, the spirit of the nation was aroused, and war with France seemed inevitable.

The crisis was at once brought to Washington's own door. "You ought to be aware," writes Hamilton to him, May 19th, "that in the event of an open rupture with France, the public voice will again call you to command the armies of your country; and though all who are attached to you will, from attachment as well as public considerations, deplore an occasion which should once more tear you from that repose to which you have so good a right, yet it is the opinion of all those with whom I converse, that you will be compelled to make the sacrifice. All your past labors may demand, to give them efficacy, this farther, this very great sacrifice."

* See Life of Talleyrand, by the Rev. Charles K. MeHarg, pp. 161, 162.

† Marshall left France April 16th, 1798; Gerry on the 26th of July. Pinckney, detained by the illness of his daughter, did not arrive in the nited States until early in October.

† McHarg's Life of Talleyrand, 160.

The government was resolved upon vigorous measures. Congress, on the 28th of May, authorized Mr. Adams to enlist ten thousand men as a provisional army, to be called by him into actual service, in case of hostilities.

Adams was perplexed by the belligerent duties thus suddenly devolved upon him. How should he proceed in forming an army? Should he call on all the old generals who had figured in the revolution, or appoint a young set? Military tactics were changed, and a new kind of enemy was to be met. "If the French come here," said he, "we will have to march with a quick step and attack, for in that way only they are said to be vulnerable."

These and other questions he propounded to Washington by letter, on the 22d of June. "I must tax you sometimes for advice," writes he. "We must have your name, if you will in any case permit us to use it. There will be more efficacy in it than in many an army."

And McHenry, the Secretary of War, writes, about the same time: "You see how the storm thickens, and that our vessel will soon require its ancient pilot. Will you—may we flatter ourselves, that, in a crisis so awful and important, you will—accept the command of all our armies? I hope you will, because you alone can unite all hearts and all hands, if it is possible that they can be united."

In a reply to the President's letter, Washington writes, on the 4th of July: "At the epoch of my retirement, an invasion of these States by any European power, or even the probability of such an event happening in my days, was so far from being con templated by me, that I had no conception that that or any other occurrence would arise in so short a period, which could turn my eyes from the shade of Mount Vernon. * * In case of actual invasion, by a formidable force, I certainly should not in trench myself under the cover of age and retirement, if my services should be required by my country to assist in repelling it."

And in his reply of the same date, to the Secretary of War, he writes: "I see, as you do, that clouds are gathering, and that a storm may ensue; and I find, too, from a variety of hints, that my quiet, under these circumstances, does not promise to be of long continuance.

* * * * * * *

"As my whole life has been dedicated to my country in one shape or another, for the poor remains of it, it is not an object to contend for ease and quiet, when all that is valuable is at stake, further than to be satisfied that the sacrifice I should make of these, is acceptable and desired by my country."

Before these letters were despatched he had already been nominated to the Senate (July 3d) commander-in-chief of all the armies raised or to be raised. His nomination was unanimously confirmed on the following day, and it was determined that the Secretary of War should be the bearer of the commission to Mount Vernon, accompanied by a letter from the President.

The reasons and motives," writes Mr. Adams in his instructions to the Secretary, "which prevailed with me to venture upon such a step as the nomination of this great and illustrious character, whose voluntary resignation alone occasioned my introduction to the office I now hold, were too numerous to be detailed in this letter, and are too obvious and important to escape the observation of any part of America or Europe. But as it is a movement of great delicacy, it will require all you address to communicate the subject in a manner that shall be unoffensive to his feelings and consistent with all the respect that is due from me to him.

"If the General should decline the appointment, all the world will be silent and respectfully assent. If he should accept it, all the world, except the enemies of this country, will rejoice."

Mr. McHenry was instructed to consult Washington upon the organization of the army, and upon every thing relating to it. He was the bearer also of a letter from Hamilton. "I use the liberty," writes he, "which my attachment to you and to the public authorizes, to offer you my opinion, that you should not decline the appointment. It is evident that the public satisfaction at it is lively and universal. It is not to be doubted that the circumstances will give an additional spring to the public mind, will tend much to unite, and will facilitate the measures which the conjuncture requires."

It was with a heavy heart that Washington found his dream of repose once more interrupted; but his strong fidelity to duty would not permit him to hesitate. He accepted the commission, however, with the condition that he should not be called into the field until the army was in a situation to require his presence; or it should become indispensable by the urgency of circumstances.

"In making this reservation," added he, in his letter to the President, "I beg it to be understood that I do not mean to withhold any assistance to arrange and organize the army, which you may think I can afford. I take the liberty, also, to mention that I must decline having my acceptance considered as drawing after it any immediate charge upon the public; or that I can receive any emoluments annexed to the appointment before entering into a situation to incur expense."

He made another reservation, through the Secretary of War, but did not think proper to embody it in his public letter of acceptance, as that would be communicated to the Senate, which was, that the principal officers in the line and of the staff, should be such as he could place confidence in.

As to the question which had perplexed Mr. Adams whether, in forming the army, to call on all the old generals or appoint a new set, Washington's idea was that, as the armies about to be raised were commencing de novo, the President had the right to make officers of citizens or soldiers at his discretion, availing himself of the best aid the country afforded. That no officer of the old army, disbanded fourteen years before, could expect, much less claim, an appointment on any other ground than superior experience, brilliant exploits, and general celebrity founded on merit.

It was with such views that, in the arrangements made by him with the Secretary of War, the three Major-Generals stood, Hamilton, who was to be Inspector-General, Charles Cotesworth Pinckney (not yet returned from Europe), and Knox: in which order he wished their commissions to be dated. The apppointment of Hamilton as second in command was desired by the public, on account of his distinguished ability, energy, and fidelity. Pickering, in recommending it, writes: "The enemy whom we are now preparing to encounter, veterans in arms, led by able and active officers, and accustomed to victory, must be met by the best blood, talents, energy, and experience, that our country ean produce." Washington, speaking of him to the President, says: "Although Colonel Hamilton has never acted in the character of a general officer, yet, his opportunities as the principal and most confidential aid of the commander-in-chief, afforded him the means of viewing every thing on a larger scale than those whose attention was confined to divisions or brigades, who know nothing of the correspondences of the commander-in-chief, or of the various orders to, or transactions with, the general staff of the army. These advantages, and his having served with usefulness in the old Congress, in the general convention, and having filled one of the most important departments of government, with acknowledged abilities and integrity, have placed him on high ground, and made him a conspicuous character in the United States and in Europe.

"By some he is considered an ambitious man, and, therefore, a dangerous one. That he is ambitious, I shall readily grant, but it is of that laudable kind which prompts a man to excel in whatever he takes in hand. He is enterprising, quick in his perceptions, and his judgment intuitively great—qualities essential to a military character."

Charles Cotesworth Pinckney was placed next in rank, not solely on account of his military qualifications, which were great, but of his popularity and influence in the Southern States, where his connections were numerous and powerful; it being apprehended that, if the French intended an invasion in force, their operations would commence south of Maryland; in which case it would be all-important to embark General Pinckney and his connections heartily in the active scenes that would follow.

By this arrangement Hamilton and Pinckney took precedence of Knox, an officer whom Washington declared he loved and esteemed; but he trusted the exigencies of the case would reconcile the latter to the position assigned to him. "Viewing things in this light," writes he to Knox, July 16th, "I would fain hope, as we are forming an army anew, which army, if needful at all, is to fight for every thing which ought to be dear and sacred to freemen, that former rank will be forgotten, and, among the fit and chosen characters, the only contention will be who shall be foremost in zeal at this crisis to serve his country, in whatever situation circumstances may place him."

The reply of Knox, written in the glow of the moment, bespoke how deeply his warm impulsive feelings were wounded. "I vesterday received your favor," writes he, "which I opened with all the delightful sensations of affection, which I always before experienced upon the receipt of your letters. But I found, on its perusal, a striking instance of that vicissitude of human affairs and friendships, which you so justly describe. I read it with astonishment, which, however, subsided in the reflection that few men know themselves, and therefore, that for more than twenty years I have been acting under a perfect delusion. Conscious myself of entertaining for you a sincere, active, and in variable friendship, I easily believed it was reciprocal. Nay more, I flattered myself with your esteem and respect in a military point of view. But I find that others, greatly my juniors in rank, have been, upon a scale of comparison, preferred before me. If this, perhaps, the world may also concur with you that I have no just reason to complain. But every intelligent and just principle of society required, either that I should have been previously consulted in an arrangement, in which my feelings and happiness have been so much wounded, or that I should not have been dragged forth to public view at all, to make the comparison so conspicuously odious."

After continuing in an expostulatory vein, followed by his own views of the probable course of invasion, he adds, toward the close of his letter,—"I have received no other notification of an appointment than what the newspapers announce. When it shall please the Secretary of War to give me the information, I shall endeavor to make him a suitable answer. At present, I do not perceive how it can possibly be to any other purport, than in the negative."

In conclusion, he writes: "In whatever situation I shall be, I shall always remember with pleasure and gratitude, the friend-ship and confidence with which you have heretofore honored me.

"I am, with the highest attachment, &c."

Washington was pained in the extreme at the view taken by General Knox of the arrangement, and at the wound which it had evidently given to his feelings and his pride. In a letter to the President (25th Sept.), he writes: "With respect to General Knox, I can say with truth there is no man in the United States with whom I have been in habits of greater intimacy, no one whom I have loved more sincerely, nor any for whom I have had a greater friendship. But esteem, love, and friendship can have no influence on my mind, when I conceive that the subjugation of our government and independence are the objects aimed at by the enemies of our peace, and when possibly our all is at stake."

In reply to Knox, Washington, although he thought the reasons assigned in his previous letter ought to have been sufficiently explanatory of his motives; went into long details of the circumstances under which the military appointments had been made, and the important considerations which dictated them; and showing that it was impossible for him to consult Knox previously to the nomination of the general officers.

"I do not know," writes he, "that these explanations will afford you any satisfaction or produce any change in your determination, but it was just to myself to make them. If there has been any management in the business, it has been concealed from me. I have had no agency therein, nor have I conceived a thought on the subject that has not been disclosed to you with the utmost sincerity and frankness of heart. And now, notwith-standing the insinuations, which are implied in your letter, of the vicissitudes of friendship and the inconstancy of mine, I will pronounce with decision, that it ever has been, and, notwithstanding the unkindness of the charge, ever will be, for aught I know to the contrary, warm and sincere."

The genial heart of Knox was somewhat soothed and mollified by the "welcome and much esteemed letter of Washington, in which," said he, "I recognize fully all the substantial friendship and kindness which I have invariably experienced from you." Still he was tenacious of the point of precedence, and unwilling to serve in a capacity which would compromise his pride. "If an invasion shall take place," writes he, "I shall deeply regret all circumstances which would insuperably bar my having an active command in the field. But if such a measure should be my destiny, I shall fervently petition to serve as one of your aidesde-camp, which, with permission, I shall do with all the cordial devotion and affection of which my soul is capable."

On the 18th of October Washington learnt through the Gazettes of the safe arrival of General Pinckney at New York, and was anxious lest there should be a second part of the difficulty created by General Knox. On the 21st he writes again to Knox, reiterating his wish to have him in the augmented corps a major-general.

"We shall have either no war, or a severe contest with France; in either case, if you will allow me to express my opinion, this is the most eligible time for you to come forward. In the first case, to assist with your counsel and aid in making judicious provisions and arrangements to avert it; in the other case, to share in the glory of defending your country, and, by making all secondary objects yield to that great and primary object, display a mind superior to embarrassing punctilios at so critical a moment as the present.

"After having expressed these sentiments with the frankness of undisgnised friendship, it is hardly necessary to add, that, if you should finally decline the appointment of Major-General, there is none to whom I would give a more decided preference as an aide-de-camp, the offer of which is highly flattering, honorable, and grateful to my feelings, and for which I entertain a high sense. But, my dear General Knox, and here again I repeat to you, in the language of candor and friendship, examine well your own mind upon this subject. Do not unite yourself to the suite of a man, whom you may consider as the primary cause of what you call a degradation, with unpleasant sensations. This, while it is gnawing upon you, would, if I should come to the knowledge of it, make me unhappy; as my first wish would be that my military family, and the whole army, should consider themselves a band of brothers, willing and ready to die for each other."

Before Knox could have received this letter, he had on the 23d of October, written to the Secretary of War, declining to serve under Hamilton and Pinckney, on the principle that "no officer can consent to his own degradation by serving in an inferior station." General Pinckney, on the contrary, cheerfully accepted his appointment, although placed under Hamilton, who had been of inferior rank to him in the last war. It was with the greatest pleasure he had seen that officer's name at the head of the list of major-generals, and applauded the discernment which had placed him there. He regretted that General Knox had declined his appointment, and that his feelings should be hurt by being outranked. "If the authority," adds he, "which appointed me to the rank of second major in the army, will review the arrangement, and place General Knox before me, I will neither quit the service nor be dissatisfied." "

* Letter to the Secretary of War.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

WASHINGTON TAXED ANEW WITH THE CARES OF OFFICE—CORRESPONDENCE WITH LAFAYETTE—A MARRIAGE AT MOUNT VERNON—APPOINTMENT OF A MINISTER TO THE FRENCH REPUBLIC—WASHINGTON'S SURPRISE—HIS ACTIVITY ON HIS ESTATE—POLITICAL ANXIETIES—CONCERN ABOUT THE ARMY.

Early in November (1798) Washington left his retirement and repaired to Philadelphia, at the earnest request of the Secretary of War, to meet that public functionary and Major-Generals Hamilton and Pinckney, and make arrangements respecting the forces about to be raised. The Secretary had prepared a series of questions for their consideration, and others were suggested by Washington, all bearing upon the organization of the provisional army. Upon these Washington and the two Major-Generals were closely engaged for nearly five weeks, at great inconvenience and in a most inclement season. The result of their deliberations was reduced to form, and communicated to the Sccretary in two letters drafted by Hamilton, and signed by the Commander-inchief. Not the least irksome of Washington's task, in his present position, was to wade through volumes of applications and recommendations for military appointments; a task which he performed with extreme assiduity, anxious to avoid the influence of favor or prejudice, and sensitively alive to the evil of improper selections.

As it was a part of the plan on which he had accepted the command of the army to decline the occupations of the office until circumstances should require his presence in the field; and as the season and weather rendered him impatient to leave Philadelphia he gave the Secretary of War his views and plans for the charge and direction of military affairs, and then set out once more for Mount Vernon. The cares and concerns of office, however, followed him to his retreat. "It is not the time nor the attention only," writes he, "which the public duties I am engaged in require, but their bringing upon me applicants, recommenders of applicants, and seekers of information, none of whom, perhaps, are my acquaintances, with their servants and horses to aid in the consumption of my forage, and what to me is more valuable, my time, that I most regard; for a man in the country, nine miles from any house of entertainment, is differently situated from one in a city, where none of these inconveniences are felt."

In a letter, recently received from Lafayette, the latter spoke feelingly of the pleasure he experienced in conversing incessantly with his son George about Mount Vernon, its dear and venerated inhabitants, of the tender obligations, so profoundly felt, which he and his son had contracted towards him who had become a father to both.

In the conclusion of his letter, Lafayette writes that, from the information he had received, he was fully persuaded that the French Directory desired to be at peace with the United States. "The aristocratical party," adds he, "whose hatred of America dates from the commencement of the European revolution, and the English government, which, since the Declaration of Independence, have forgotten and forgiven nothing, will rejoice, I know, at the prospect of a rupture between two nations heretofore united in the cause of liberty, and will endeavor, by all the means in their power, to precipitate us into a war. * * * * But you are there, my dear General, independent of all parties, venerated by all, and if, as I hope, your information lead you to judge favorably of the disposition of the French government, your influence ought to prevent the breach from widening, and should insure a noble and durable reconciliation."

In his reply, Dec. 25th, Washington says: "You have expressed a wish worthy of the benevolence of your heart, that I would exert all my endeavors to avert the calamitous effects of a rupture between our countries. Believe me, my dear friend, that no man can deprecate an event of this sort more than I should.

* * You add, in another place, that the Executive Directory are disposed to an accommodation of all differences. If they are sincere in this declaration, let them evidence it by actions; for words, unaccompanied therewith, will not be much regarded now. I would pledge myself that the government and people of the United States will meet them heart and hand at a fair negotiation; having no wish more ardent than to live in peace with all the world, provided they are suffered to remain undisturbed in their just rights."

"Of the politics of Europe," adds he, in another part of his letter, "I shall express no opinion, nor make any inquiry who is ight or who is wrong. I wish well to all nations and to all men. My politics are plain and simple. I think every nation has a right to establish that form of government under which it conceives it may live most happy; provided it infringes no right, or is not dangerous to others; and that no governments ought to interfere with the internal concerns of another, except for the security of what is due to themselves."

Washington's national pride, however, had been deeply wounded by the indignities inflicted on his country by the French, and he doubted the propriety of entering into any fresh negotiations with them, unless overtures should be made on their part. As to any symptoms of an accommodation they might at present evince, he ascribed them to the military measures adopted by the United States, and thought those measures ought not to be relaxed.

We have spoken in a preceding chapter of a love affair growing up at Mount Vernon between Washington's nephew, Lawrence Lewis, and Miss Nelly Custis. The parties had since become engaged, to the General's great satisfaction, and their nuptials were celebrated at Mount Vernon on his birthday, the 22d of February (1799). Lawrence had recently received the commission of Major of cavalry in the new army which was forming; and Washington made arrangements for settling the newly married couple near him on a part of the Mount Vernon lands, which he had designated in his will to be bequeathed to Miss Nelly.

As the year opened, Washington continued to correspond with the Secretary of War and General Hamilton on the affairs of the provisional army. The recruiting business went on slowly, with interruptions, and there was delay in furnishing commissions to the officers who had been appointed. Washington, who was not in the secrets of the cabinet, was at a loss to account for this apparent torpor. "If the augmented force," writes he to Hamilton, "was not intended as an in terrorem measure, the delay in recruiting it is unaccountable, and baffles all conjecture on reasonable grounds."

The fact was, that the military measures taken in America had really produced an effect on French policy. Efforts had been made by M. Talleyrand, through unofficial persons, to induce an amicable overture on the part of the United States. At length that wily minister had written to the French Secretary of Legation at the Hagne, M. Pichon, intimating that whatever plenipotentiary the United States might send to France to put an end to the existing differences between the two countries, would be undoubtedly received with the respect due to the representative of a free, independent, and powerful nation. M. Pichon communicated a copy of this letter to Mr. William Vans Murray, the American minister in Holland, who forthwith transmitted it to his government. Mr. Adams caught at the chance for an extrication from his belligerent difficulties, and laid this letter before the Senate on the 18th of February, at the same time nominating Mr. Murray to be minister plenipotentiary to the French Republic.

Washington expressed his extreme surprise when the news of this unexpected event reached him. "But far, very far indeed," writes he, "was that surprise short of what I experienced the next day, when, by a very intelligent gentleman immediately from Philadelphia, I was informed that there had been no direct overture from the government of France to that of the United States for a negotiation; on the contrary, that M. Talleyrand was playing the same loose and roundabout game he had attempted the year before with our envoys; and which, as in that case, might mean any thing or nothing, as would subserve his purposes best."

Before the Senate decided on the nomination of Mr. Murray, two other persons were associated with him in the mission, namely, Oliver Ellsworth and Patrick Henry. The three envoys being confirmed, Mr. Murray was instructed by letter to inform the French Minister of Foreign Affairs of the fact, but to apprise him that his associate envoys would not embark for Europe until the Directory had given assurance, through their Minister for Foreign Affairs, that those envoys would be received in proper form and treated with on terms of equality. Mr. Murray was directed at the same time to have no further informal communications with any French agent.

Mr. Henry declined to accept his appointment on account of ill health, and Mr. William Richardson Davie was ultimately substituted for him.

Throughout succeeding months, Washington continued to superintend from a distance the concerns of the army, as his ample and minute correspondence manifests; and he was at the same time earnestly endeavoring to bring the affairs of his rural domain into order. A sixteen years' absence from home, with short intervals, had, he said, deranged them considerably, so that it required all the time he could spare from the usual avocations of life to bring them into tune again. It was a period of incessant activity and toil, therefore, both mental and bodily. He was for hours in his study occupied with his pen, and for hours on horseback, riding the rounds of his extensive estate, visiting the various farms, and superintending and directing the works in operation. All this he did with unfailing vigor, though now in his sixty-seventh year.

Occasional reports of the sanguinary conflict that was going on in Europe would reach him in the quiet groves of Mount Vernon, and awaken his solicitude. "A more destructive sword," said he, "was never drawn, at least in modern times, than this war has produced. It is time to sheathe it and give peace to mankind." *

Amid this strife and turnoil of the nations, he felt redoubled anxiety about the success of the mission to France. The great successes of the allies combined against that power; the changes in the Directory, and the rapidity with which every thing seemed verging towards a restoration of the monarchy, induced some members of the cabinet to advise a suspension of the mission; but Mr. Adams was not to be convinced or persuaded. Having furnished the commissioners with their instructions, he gave his final order for their departure, and they sailed in a frigate from Rhode Island on the 3d of November.

A private letter written by Washington shortly afterwards to the Secretary of War, bespeaks his apprehensions: "I have for some time past viewed the political concerns of the United States with an anxious and painful eye. They appear to me to be moving by hasty strides to a crisis; but in what it will result, that Being, who sees, foresees, and directs all things, alone can tell. The vessel is afloat, or very nearly so, and considering myself as a passenger only, I shall trust to the mariners (whose duty it is to watch) to steer it into a safe port."

His latest concern about the army was to give instructions for hutting the troops according to an idea originally suggested by Hamilton, and adopted in the revolutionary war. "Although I had determined to take no charge of any military operations," writes he, "unless the troops should be called into the field, yet, under the present circumstances, and considering that the advanced season of the year will admit of no delay in providing winter quarters for the troops, I have willingly given my aid in that business, and shall never decline any assistance in my pow er, when necessary, to promote the good of the service."*

* Letter to William Vans Murray.

* Washington's Writings, xi. 463.

VOL. 7.-13

CHAPTER XXXIV

WASHINGTON DIGESTS A PLAN FOR THE MANAGEMENT OF HIS ESTATE—HIS VIEWS IN REGARD TO A MILITARY ACADEMY—LETTER TO HAMILTON—HIS LAST HOURS—THE FUNERAL—THE WILL—ITS PROVISIONS IN REGARD TO HIS SLAVES—PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS ON HIS DEATH—CONCLUSION.

Winter had now set in, with occasional wind and rain and frost, yet Washington still kept up his active round of in-door and out-door avocations, as his diary records. He was in full health and vigor, dined out occasionally, and had frequent guests at Mount Vernon, and, as usual, was part of every day in the saddle, going the rounds of his estates, and, in his military phraseology, "visiting the outposts."

He had recently walked with his favorite nephew about the grounds, showing the improvements he intended to make, and had especially pointed out the spot where he purposed building a new family vault; the old one being damaged by the roots of trees which had overgrown it and caused it to leak. "This change," said he, "I shall make the first of all, for I may require it before the rest."

"When I parted from him," adds the nephew, "he stood on the steps of the front door, where he took leave of myself and another. * * * * It was a bright frosty morning; he had taken his usual ride, and the clear healthy flush on his cheek, and his sprightly manner, brought the remark from both of us that we had never seen the General look so well. I have sometimes thought him decidedly the handsomest man I ever saw; and when in a lively mood, so full of pleasantry, so agreeable to all with whom he associated, that I could hardly realize he was the same Washington whose dignity awed all who approached him."*

For some time past Washington had been occupied in digesting a complete system on which his estate was to be managed for several succeeding years; specifying the cultivation of the several farms, with tables designating the rotations of the crops. It occupied thirty folio pages, and was executed with that clearness and method which characterized all his business papers. This was finished on the 10th of December, and was accompanied by a letter of that date to his manager or steward. It is a valuable document, showing the soundness and vigor of his intellect at this advanced stage of his existence, and the love of order that reigned throughout his affairs. "My greatest anxiety," said he on a previous occasion, "is to have all these concerns in such a clear and distinct form, that no reproach may attach itself to me when I have taken my departure for the land of spirits." †

It was evident, however, that full of health and vigor, he looked forward to his long-cherished hope, the enjoyment of a serene old age in this home of his heart.

According to his diary, the morning on which these voluminous instructions to his steward were dated was clear and calm, but the afternoon was lowering. The next day (11th), he notes that there was wind and rain, and "at night a large circle round the moon."

* Paulding's Life of Washington, vol. ii. p. 196.

† Letter to James McHenry. Writings, xi. 407.

The morning of the 12th was overcast. That morning he wrote a letter to Hamilton, heartily approving of a plan for a military academy, which the latter liad submitted to the Secretary of War. "The establishment of an institution of this kind upon a respectable and extensive basis," observes he, "has ever been considered by me an object of primary importance to this country; and while I was in the chair of government I omitted no proper opportunity of recommending it in my public speeches and otherwise, to the attention of the legislature. But I never undertook to go into a detail of the organization of such an academy, leaving this task to others, whose pursuit in the path of science and attention to the arrangement of such institutions, had better qualified them for the execution of it. * * * I sincerely hope that the subject will meet with due attention, and that the reasons for its establishment which you have clearly pointed out in your letter to the secretary, will prevail upon the legislature to place it upon a permanent and respectable footing." He closes his letter with an assurance of "very great esteem and regard," the last words he was ever to address to Hamilton.

About ten o'clock he mounted his horse, and rode out as usual to make the rounds of the estate. The ominous ring round the moon, which he had observed on the preceding night, proved a fatal portent. "About one o'clock," he notes, "it began to snow, soon after to hail, and then turned to a settled cold rain." Having on an over-coat, he continued his ride without regarding the weather, and did not return to the house until after three.

His secretary approached him with letters to be franked, that they might be taken to the post-office in the evening. Washington franked the letters, but observed that the weather was too bad to send a servant out with them. Mr. Lear perceived that snow was hanging from his hair, and expressed fears that he had got wet; but he replied, "No, his great-coat had kept him dry." As dinner had been waiting for him he sat down to table without changing his dress. "In the evening," writes his secretary, "he appeared as well as usual."

On the following morning the snow was three inches deep and still falling, which prevented him from taking his usual ride. He complained of a sore throat, and had evidently taken cold the day before. In the afternoon the weather cleared up, and he went out on the grounds between the house and the river, to mark some trees which were to be cut down. A hoarseness which had hung about him through the day grew worse towards night, but he made light of it.

He was very cheerful in the evening, as he sat in the parlor with Mrs. Washington and Mr. Lear, amusing himself with the papers which had been brought from the post-office. When he met with any thing interesting or entertaining, he would read it aloud as well as his hoarseness would permit, or he listened and made occasional comments, while Mr. Lear read the debates of the Virginia Assembly.

On retiring to bed, Mr. Lear suggested that he should take something to relieve the cold. "No," replied he, "you know I never take any thing for a cold. Let it go as it came."

In the night he was taken extremely ill with ague and difficulty of breathing. Between two and three o'clock in the morning he awoke Mrs. Washington, who would have risen to call a servant; but he would not permit her, lest she should take cold. At daybreak, when the servant woman entered to make a fire, she was sent to call Mr. Lear. He found the general breathing with difficulty, and hardly able to utter a word intelligibly. Washington desired that Dr. Craik, who lived in Alexandria, should be sent for, and that in the mean time Rawlins, one of the overseers, should be summoned, to bleed him before the doctor could arrive.

A gargle was prepared for his throat, but whenever he attempted to swallow any of it, he was convulsed and almost suffo-Rawlins made his appearance soon after sunrise, but when the general's arm was ready for the operation, became agi-"Don't be afraid," said the general, as well as he could Rawlins made an incision. "The orifice is not large enough," said Washington. The blood, however, ran pretty freely, and Mrs. Washington, uncertain whether the treatment was proper, and fearful that too much blood might be taken, begged Mr. Lear to stop it. When he was about to untie the string the general put up his hand to prevent him, and as soon as he could speak, murmured, "more-more;" but Mrs. Washington's doubts prevailed, and the bleeding was stopped, after about half a pint of blood had been taken. External applications were now made to the throat, and his feet were bathed in warm water, but without affording any relief.

His old friend, Dr. Craik, arrived between eight and nine, and two other physicians, Drs. Dick and Brown, were called in Various remedies were tried, and additional bleeding, but all of no avail.

"About half past four o'clock," writes Mr. Lear, "he desired me to call Mrs. Washington to his bedside, when he requested her to go down into his room and take from his desk two wills, which she would find there, and bring them to him, which she did. Upon looking at them, he gave her one, which he observed was useless, as being superseded by the other, and desired her to burn it, which she did, and took the other and put it into her closet.

"After this was done, I returned to his bedside and took his hand. He said to me: 'I find I am going, my breath cannot last long. I believed from the first, that the disorder would prove fatal. Do you arrange and record all my late military letters and papers. Arrange my accounts and settle my books, as you know more about them than any one else; and let Mr. Rawlins finish recording my other letters which he has begun.' I told him this should be done. He then asked if I recollected any thing which it was essential for him to do, as he had but a very short time to continue with us. I told him that I could recollect nothing; but that I hoped he was not so near his end. He observed, smiling, that he certainly was, and that, as it was the debt which we must all pay, he looked to the event with perfect resignation."

In the course of the afternoon he appeared to be in great pain and distress from the difficulty of breathing, and frequently changed his posture in the bed. Mr. Lear endeavored to raise him and turn him with as much ease as possible. "I am afraid I fatigue you too much," the general would say. Upon being assured to the contrary, "Well," observed he gratefully, "it is a debt we must pay to each other, and I hope when you want aid of this kind you will find it."

His servant, Christopher, had been in the room during the day, and almost the whole time on his feet. The general noticed it in the afternoon, and kindly told him to sit down.

About five o'clock his old friend, Dr. Craik, came again into the room, and approached the bedside. "Doctor," said the general, "I die hard, but I am not afraid to go. I believed, from my first attack, that I should not survive it—my breath cannot last long." The doctor pressed his hand in silence, retired from the bedside, and sat by the fire absorbed in grief.

Between five and six the other physicians came in, and he was assisted to sit up in his bed. "I feel I am going," said he; "I thank you for your attentions, but I pray you to take no more trouble about me; let me go off quietly; I cannot last long." He lay down again; all retired excepting Dr. Craik. The general continued uneasy and restless, but without complaining, frequently asking what hour it was.

Further remedies were tried without avail in the evening. He took whatever was offered him, did as he was desired by the physicians, and never uttered sigh or complaint.

"About ten o'clock," writes Mr. Lear, "he made several attempts to speak to me before he could effect it. At length he said, 'I am just going. Have me decently buried, and do not let my body be put into the vault in less than three days after I am dead.' I bowed assent, for I could not speak. He then looked at me again and said, 'Do you understand me?' I replied, 'Yes.' 'Tis well,' said he.

"About ten minutes before he expired (which was between ten and eleven o'clock) his breathing became easier. He lay quietly; he withdrew his hand from mine and felt his own pulse. I saw his countenance change. I spoke to Dr. Craik, who sat by the fire. He came to the bedside. The general's hand fell from his wrist. I took it in mine and pressed it to my bosom. Dr. Craik put his hands over his eyes, and he expired without a struggle or a sigh.

"While we were fixed in silent grief, Mrs. Washington, who was seated at the foot of the bed, asked with a firm and collected voice, 'Is he gone?' I could not speak, but held up my hand as a signal that he was no more. 'Tis well,' said she in the same voice. 'All is now over; I shall soon follow him; I have no more trials to pass through.'"

We add from Mr. Lear's account a few particulars concerning the funeral. The old family vault on the estate had been opened, the rubbish cleared away, and a door made to close the entrance, which before had been closed with brick. The funeral took place on the 18th of December. About eleven o'clock the people of the neighborhood began to assemble. The corporation of Alexandria, with the militia and Free Masons of the place, and eleven pieces of cannon, arrived at a later hour. A schooner was stationed off Mount Vernon to fire minute guns.

About three o'clock the procession began to move, passing out through the gate at the left wing of the house, proceeding round in front of the lawn and down to the vault, on the right wing of the house; minute guns being fired at the time. The troops, horse and foot, formed the escort; then came four of the clergy. Then the general's horse, with his saddle, holsters, and pistols, led by two grooms in black. The body was borne by the Free Masons and officers; several members of the family and old friends, among the number Dr. Craik, and some of the Fairfaxes, followed as chief mourners. The corporation of Alexandria and numerous private persons closed the procession. The Rev. Mr. Davis read the funeral service at the vault, and pronounced a short address; after which the Masons performed their ceremonies, and the body was deposited in the vault.

Such were the obsequies of Washington, simple and modest, according to his own wishes; all confined to the grounds of Mount Vernon, which, after forming the poetical dream of his life, had now become his final resting-place.

On opening the will which he had handed to Mrs. Washington shortly before his death, it was found to have been carefully drawn up by himself in the preceding July; and by an act in conformity with his whole career, one of its first provisions directed the emancipation of his slaves on the decease of his wife. It had long been his earnest wish that the slaves held by him in his own right should receive their freedom during his life, but he had found that it would be attended with insuperable difficulties on account of their intermixture by marriage with the "dower negroes," whom it was not in his power to manumit under the tenure by which they were held.

With provident benignity he also made provision in his will for such as were to receive their freedom under this devise, but who, from age, bodily infirmities, or infancy, might be unable to support themselves, and he expressly forbade, under any pretence whatsoever, the sale or transportation out of Virginia, of any slave of whom he might die possessed. Though born and educated a slave-holder, this was all in consonance with feelings, sentiments and principles which he had long entertained.

In a letter to Mr. John F. Mercer, in September, 1786, he writes, "I never mean, unless some particular circumstances should compel me to it, to possess another slave by purchase, it being among my first wishes to see some plan adopted by which slavery in this country may be abolished by law." And eleven years afterwards, in August, 1797, he writes to his nephew. Lawrence Lewis, in a letter which we have had in our hands, "I wish from my soul that the legislature of this State could see the policy of a gradual abolition of slavery. It might prevent much future mischief."

A deep sorrow spread over the nation on hearing that Washington was no more. Congress, which was in session, immediately adjourned for the day. The next morning it was resolved that the Speaker's chair be shrouded with black: that the members and officers of the House wear black during the session, and that a joint committee of both Houses be appointed to consider on the most suitable manner of doing honor to the memory of the man, "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his fellow-citizens."

Public testimonials of grief and reverence were displayed in every part of the Union. Nor were these sentiments confined to the United States. When the news of Washington's death reached England, Lord Bridport, who had command of a British fleet of nearly sixty sail of the line, lying at Torbay, lowered his flag half-mast, every ship following the example; and Bonaparte, First Consul of France, on announcing his death to the army, ordered that black crape should be suspended from all the standards and flags throughout the public service for ten days.

In the preceding volumes of our work, we have traced the career of Washington from early boyhood to his elevation to the presidential chair. It was an elevation he had neither sought nor wished; for when the independence of his country was achieved, the modest and cherished desire of his heart had been "to live and die a private citizen on his own farm;" * and he had shaped out for himself an ideal elysium in his beloved shades of Mount Vernon. But power sought him in his retirement. The weight and influence of his name and character were deemed all essential to complete his work; to set the new government in motion, and conduct it through its first perils and trials. With unfeigned reluctance he complied with the imperative claims of his country, and accepted the power thus urged upon him: advancing to its exercise with diffidence, and aiming to surround himself with men of the highest talent and information whom he might consult in emergency; but firm and strong in the resolve in all things to act as his conscience told him was "right as it respected his God, his country, and himself." For he knew no divided fidelity, no separate obligation; his most sacred duty to himself was his highest duty to his country and his God.

In treating of his civil administration in this closing volume, we have endeavored to show how truly he adhered to this resolve, and with what inflexible integrity and scrupulous regard to the public weal he discharged his functions. In executing our task, we have not indulged in discussions of temporary questions of controverted policy which agitated the incipient establishment of our government, but have given his words and actions as connected with those questions, and as illustrative of his character. In this volume, as in those which treat of his military career, we have avoided rhetorical amplification and embellishments, and all gratuitous assumptions, and have sought, by simple and truthful details, to give his character an opportunity of developing itself, and of manifesting those fixed principles and that noble consistency which reigned alike throughout his civil and his military career.

The character of Washington may want some of those poetical elements which dazzle and delight the multitude, but it possessed fewer inequalities, and a rarer union of virtues than perhaps ever fell to the lot of one man. Prudence, firmness, sagacity, moderation, an overruling judgment, an immovable justice, courage that never faltered, patience that never wearied, truth that disdained all artifice, magnanimity without alloy. It seems as if Providence had endowed him in a preëminent degree with the qualities requisite to fit him for the high destiny he was called upon to fulfil—to conduct a momentous revolution which was to form an era in the history of the world, and to inaugurate a new and untried government, which, to use his own words, was to lay the foundation "for the enjoyment of much purer civil liberty, and greater public happiness, than have hitherto been the portion of mankind."

The fame of Washington stands apart from every other in history; shining with a truer lustre and a more benignant glory. With us his memory remains a national property, where all sympathies throughout our widely-extended and diversified empire meet in unison. Under all dissensions and amid all the storms of party, his precepts and example speak to us from the grave with a paternal appeal; and his name—by all revered—forms a universal tie of brotherhood—a watchword of our Union.

"It will be the duty of the historian and the sage of all na tions," writes an eminent British statesman, (Lord Brougham,) "to let no occasion pass of commemorating this illustrious man, and until time shall be no more, will a test of the progress which our race has made in wisdom and virtue, be derived from the veneration paid to the immortal name of Washington."

.

APPENDIX.

T.

PORTRAITS OF WASHINGTON.

[The following notices of the various representations of Washington, which have been prepared by the publisher for the illustrated edition of this work, are kindly furnished by Mr. H. T. TUCKERMAN, from a volume which he has now in press.]

THE earliest portraits of Washington are more interesting, perhaps, as memorials than as works of art; and we can easily imagine that associations endeared them to his old comrades. The dress (blue coat. scarlet facings, and underclothes) of the first portrait by Peale, and the youthful face, make it suggestive of the first experience of the future commander, when, exchanging the surveyor's implements for the colonel's commission, he bivouacked in the wilderness of Ohio, the leader of a motley band of hunters, provincials and savages, to confront wily Frenchmen, cut forest roads, and encounter all the perils of Indian ambush, inclement skies, undisciplined followers, famine, and woodland skirmish. It recalls his calm authority and providential escape amid the dismay of Braddock's defeat, and his pleasant sensation at the first whistling of bullets in the weary march to Fort Neces-To CHARLES WILSON PEALE, we owe this precious relic of the chieftain's youth. His own career partook of the vicissitudes and was impressed with the spirit of the revolutionary era; a captain of volunteers at the battles of Trenton and Germantown, and a State representative of Pennsylvania, a favorite pupil of West, an ingenious mechanician, and a warrior, he always cherished the instinct and the faculty for art; and even amid the bustle and duties of the camp, never failed to seize auspicious intervals of leisure, to depict his brother officers. This portrait was executed in 1772, and is now at Arlington House

The resolution of Congress by which a portrait by this artist was ordered, was passed before the occupation of Philadelphia. Its progress marks the vicissitudes of the revolutionary struggle; commenced in the gloomy winter and half-famished encampment at Valley Forge, in 1778, the battles of Trenton, Princeton, and Monmouth intervened before its completion. At the last place Washington suggested that the view from the window of the farm-house opposite to which he was sitting, would form a desirable background. Peale adopted the idea. and represented Monmouth Court House and a party of Hessians under guard, marching out of it.* The picture was finished at Princeton, and Nassau Hall is a prominent object in the background; but Congress adjourned without making an appropriation, and it remained in the artist's hands. Lafayette desired a copy for the King of France: and Peale executed one in 1779, which was sent to Paris; but the misfortunes of the royal family occasioned its sale, and it became the property of the Count de Menou, who brought it again to this country and presented it to the National Institute, where it is now preserved. Chapman made two copies at a thousand dollars each; and Dr. Craik, one of the earliest and warmest personal friends of Washington, their commissions as officers in the French war having been signed on the same day. (1754,) declared it a most faithful likeness of him as he appeared in the prime of his life.†

There is a tradition in the Peale family, honorably represented

* MS. Letter of Titian R. Peale to George Livermore, Esq.

† Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—His Excellency General Washington set off from this city to join the army in New Jersey. During the course of his short stay, the only relief he has enjoyed from service since he first entered it, he has been honored with every mark of esteem, &c. The Council of this State being desirous of having his picture in full length, requested his sitting for that purpose, which he politely complied with, and a striking likeness was taken by Mr. Peale, of this city. The portrait is to be placed in the council chamber. Don Jnan Marrailes, the Minister of France, has ordered five copies, four of which, we hear, are to be sent abroad.—Penn. Pucket, Feb. 11, 1779. Peale's first portrait was executed for Col. Alexander; his last is now in the Bryan Gallery, New York. He painted one in 1776 for John Hancock, and besides that for New Jersey, others for Pennsylvania and Maryland.

through several generations, by public spirit and artistic gifts, that intelligence of one of the most important triumphs of the American arms was received by Washington in a despatch he opened while sitting to Wilson Peale for a miniature intended for his wife, who was also present. The scene occurred one fine summer afternoon; and there is something attractive to the fancy in the association of this group quietly occupied in one of the most beautiful of the arts of peace, and in a commemorative act destined to gratify conjugal love and a nation's pride, with the progress of a war and the announcement of a victory fraught with that nation's liberty and that leader's eternal renown.

The characteristic traits of Peale's portraits of Washington now at the National Institute and Arlington House, and the era of our history and of Washington's life they embalm, make them doubly valuable in a series of pictorial illustrations, each of which, independent of the degree of professional skill exhibited, is essential to our Washingtonian gallery. Before Trumbull and Stuart had caught from the living man his aspect in maturity and age—the form knit to athletic proportions by self-denial and activity, and clad in the garb of rank and war, and the countenance open with truth and grave with thought, yet rounded with the contour and ruddy with the glow of early manhood-was thus genially delineated by the hand of a comrade, and in the infancy of native art. Of the fourteen portraits by Peale, that exhibiting Washington as a Virginia colonel in the colonial force of Great Britain. is the only entire portrait before the revolution extant.* One was painted for the college of New Jersey, at Princeton, in 1780, to occupy a frame in which a portrait of George the Third had been destroyed by a cannon ball during the battle at that place on the 3d of January, 1777. It still remains in the possession of the College, and was saved fortunately from the fire which a few years ago consumed Nassau Hall. Peale's last portrait of Washington, executed in 1783, he retained until his death, and two years since, it was sold with the rest of the collection known as the "Peale Gallery," at Philadelphia. There is a pencil sketch also by this artist, framed with the wood of the tree in front of the famous Chew's house, around which centred the battle of Germantown.†

* A miniature, said to have been painted in 1757, at the age of 25, has been engraved for Irving's Washington.

† &quot;The Editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer was lately shown a pencil sketch of General Washington, taken from life by Charles Wilson Peale, in the year

A few octogenarians in the city of brotherly love, used to speak. not many years since, of a diminutive family, the head of which manifested the sensitive temperament, if net the highest capabilities of artistic genius. This was Robert Edge Pine. He brought to America the earliest cast of the Venus de Medici, which was privately exhibited to the select few-the manners and morals of the Quaker city forbidding its exposure to the common eye. He was considered a superior colorist, and was favorably introduced into society in Philadelphia by his acknowledged sympathy for the American cause, and by a grand project such as was afterwards partially realized by Trumbull; that of a series of historical paintings, illustrative of the American Revolution, to embrace original portraits of the leaders, both civil and military, in that achievement, including the statesmen who were chiefly instrumental in framing the Constitution and organizing the Government. He brought a letter of introduction to the father of the late Judge Hopkinson, whose portrait he executed, and its vivid tints and correct resemblance, still attest to his descendants the ability of the painter. He left behind him in London, creditable portraits of George the Second, Garrick, and the Duke of Northumberland. In the intervals of his business as a teacher of drawing and a votary of portraiture in general, he collected, from time to time, a large number of "distinguished heads," although, as in the case of Ceracchi, the epoch and country were unfavorable to his ambitious project; of these portraits the heads of General Gates, Charles Carroll, Baron Steuben, and Washington, are the best known and most highly prized. Pine remained three weeks at Mount Vernon, and his portrait bequeathes some features with great accuracy; artists find in it certain merits not discoverable in those of a later date; it has the permanent interest of a representation from life, by a painter of established reputation; yet its tone is cold and its effect unimpressive, beside the more bold and glowing pencil of Stuart. It has repose and dignity. In his letter to Washington, asking his co-operation in the design he meditated, Pine says, "I have been some time at Annapolis painting the portraits of patriots, legislators, heroes and beauties, in order to adorn my large picture;" and he seems to have commenced his enterprise with sanguine hopes of one day accomplishing his object, which, however, it was reserved for a native artist eventually to complete. That his appeal to Washington was not neglected, however, is evident from an encouraging allusion to Pine and his scheme, in the correspondence of the former. "Mr. Pine," he says, "has met a favorable reception in this country, and may, I conceive, command as much business as he pleases. He is now preparing materials for historical representations of the most important events of the war." Pine's picture is in the possession of the Hopkinson family at Philadelphia. The fac-simile of Washington's letter proves that it was taken in 1785. A large copy was purchased at Montreal, in 1817, by the late Henry Brevoort, of New York, and is now in the possession of his son, J. Carson Brevoort, at Bedford, L. I.†

<sup>1777.</sup> It was framed from a part of the elm-tree then standing in front of Chew's house, on the Germantown battle-ground, and the frame was made by a son of Dr. Craley, of Revolutionary fame."

The profile likeness of Washington by Sharpless, is a valuable item of the legacy which Art has bequeathed of those noble and benign features; he evidently bestowed upon it his greatest skill, and there is no more correct facial outline of the immortal subject in existence; a disciple of Lavater would probably find it the most available side-view for physiognomical inference; it is remarkably adapted to the burin, and has been once, at least, adequately engraved; it also has the melancholy attraction of being the last portrait of Washington taken from life.

One of Canova's fellow-workmen, in the first years of his artistic life, was a melancholy enthusiast, whose thirst for the ideal was deepened by a morbid tenacity of purpose and sensitiveness of heart;—a form of character peculiar to Italy; in its voluptuous phase illustrated by Petrarch, in its stoical by Alfieri, and in its combination of patriotic and tender sentiments by Foscolo's "Letters of Jacopo Ortis." The political confusion that reigned in Europe for a time, seriously interfered with the pursuit of art; and this was doubtless a great motive with Guiseppe Ceracchi for visiting America; but not less inciting was the triumph of freedom, of which that land had recently become the scene—a triumph that so enlisted the sympathies and fired the imagination of the republican sculptor, that he designed a grand national monument, commemorative of American Independence, and sought the patronage of the newly organized government in its behalf. Washington, individually, favored his design, and the model of the proposed work received the warm approval of competent judges; but taste for art, especially for grand monumental statuary, was quite undeveloped on this side of the Atlantic, and the recipient of Papal orders found little encouragement in a young republic, too busy in laying the foundation of her civil polity, to give much thought to any memorials of her nascent glory. It was, however, but a question of time. purpose is even now in the process of achievement. Washington's native State voluntarily undertook the enterprise for which the general government, in its youth, was inadequate; and it was auspiciously reserved for a native artist, and a single member of the original confederacy, to embody, in a style worthy of more than Italian genius, the grand conception of a representative monument, with Washington in a colossal equestrian statue as the centre, and the Virginia patriots and orators of the Revolution, grouped around his majestic figure. Ceracchi, however, in aid of his elaborate project, executed the only series of marble portraitures from life of the renowned founders of the national government: his busts of Hamilton, Jay, Trumbull, and Governor George Clinton, were long the prominent ornaments of the Academy of Fine Arts, in New York; the latter, especially, was remarkable, both in regard to its resemblance to the original, and as a work of art. His most important achievement, however, was a bust of Washington, generally considered the most perfect representation of the man and the hero combined, after Stuart's and Houdon's masterpieces. It is in the heroic style, with a fillet. The fate of this valuable effigy was singular. It was purchased by the Spanish Ambassador, as a gift to the Prince of Peace, then at the height of his power at Madrid; before the bust reached Spain, Godoy was exiled, and the minister recalled, who, on his arrival, transferred it, unpacked, to Richard Meade, Esq., of Philadelphia, in whose family it remained until two years ago, when, at the administrators' sale of that gentleman's fine collection of paintings, it was purchased by Governeur Kemble, and can now be seen at his hospitable mansion, on the banks of the Hudson.

* Sparks' Writings of Washington.

† This portrait is now in the engraver's hands for the illustrated edition of this work.

The zeal of Ceracchi in his cherished purpose, is indicated by the assurance he gave Dr. Hugh Williamson—the historian of North Carolina, and author of the earliest work on the American climate, and one of the first advocates of the canal policy—when inviting him to sit for his bust—that he did not pay him the compliment in order to secure his vote for the national monument, but only to perpetuate the "features of the American Cato." With characteristic emphasis, the honest Doctor declined, on the ground that posterity would not care for his lineaments; adding that, "if he were capable of being lured into the support of any scheme whatever, against his conviction of right, wood, and not stone, ought to be the material of his image."*

Baffled, as Ceracchi ultimately was, in the realization of hope inspired alike by his ambition as a sculptor and his love of republican institutions, he carried to Europe the proud distinction of having taken the initiative in giving an enduring shape to the revered and then unfamiliar features of Washington. He executed two busts, one colossal, a cast of which was long in the New York Academy of Fine Impoverished, the darling scheme of his life frustrated in America, and his own patriotic hopes crushed by the victories of Bonaparte in Italy, and his rapid advances towards imperial sway, the enthusiastic artist brooded, with intense disappointment, over the contrast between the fresh and exuberant national life, of which he had partaken here, and the vassalage to which Europe was again reduced. Napoleon and Washington stood revealed, as it were, side by side—the selfish aggrandizement of the one, who trampled on humanity under the prestige of military fame, and the magnanimity of the other, content to be the immaculate agent of a free people, after sacrificing all for their welfare. Imbued with the principles and a witness of the self-control which consummated our revolutionary triumph, Ceracchi beheld, with an impatience that caution only restrained, the steady and unscrupulous encroachment of Bonaparte on all that is sacred in nationality and freedom. Somewhat of the deep indignation and the sacrificial will that nerved the hand of Charlotte Corday, somewhat of the fanaticism that moved the student-assassin of Kotzebue, and, perhaps, a little of the vengeful ire of Ravaillac, at length kindled the Italian blood of the sculptor. He became one of the most determined secret conspirators against the now established usurper. The memoirs of the time speak of his "exaggerated notions," his disdain of life, of the profound gloom that often clouded his soul, of the tears he alternately shed of admiration at the brilliant exploits of the conqueror. and of grief at the wrongs inflicted on the beautiful land of his nativity.

* Dr. Hosack's Essays.

'This man," says one fair chronicler of those exciting times, "has a soul of fire." A plot, which is stigmatized as nefarious, and, according to rumor, was of the Fieschi stamp, aimed at the life of Bonaparte, when First Consul, was finally discovered, and Ceracchi became legally compromised as one of those pledged to its execution. He was tried, boldly acknowledged his murderous intention, and was condemned to death. Among his fellow-conspirators were two or three republican artists with whom he had become intimate at Rome; they were arrested at the opera, and daggers found upon their persons: the plot is designated in the annals of the time as the Arena Conspiracy Ceracchi was a Corsican by birth; and, from an ardent admirer, thus became the deadly foe of his great countryman; and the gifted artist, the enthusiastic republican, the vindictive patriot, and the sculptor of Washington—perished on the scaffold.

His bust gives Washington a Roman look, but has been declared to exhibit more truly the expression of the mouth than any other work. Those of Hamilton and Governor Clinton, by this artist, are deemed, by their respective families, as correct as portraits, as they are superior as pieces of statuary. And this is presumptive evidence in favor of the belief that Ceracchi's attachment to the heroic style did not seriously interfere with the general truth of his portraiture.

The design of a statue was, therefore, only realized on the arriva. The history of this sculptor is a striking contrast to that of Houdon. of Ceracchi. A native of Versailles, he flourished at an epoch remarkably prolific of original characters in all departments of letters and art. Many of these, especially his own countrymen, have been represented by his chisel. He enjoyed a long and prosperous existence, having survived the taste he initiated, and the friends of his youth, but maintaining a most creditable reputation to his death, which occurred in his eighty-eighth year. He rose to distinction by a new style, which appears to have exhibited, according to the subject, a remarkable simplicity on the one hand, and elaboration on the other. An over-estimate of the effect of details marred his more labored creations; but he had a faculty of catching the air, and a taste in generalizing the conception, both of a real and fanciful subject, which manifested unusual genius. There was an individuality about his best works that won attention and established his fame. Of the ideal kind, two were the subjects of much critical remark, though for different reasons. One of them was intended to exhibit the effect of cold

-an idea almost too melo-dramatic and physical for sculpture, but quite in character for a Frenchman, aiming, even in his severe and limited art, at theatrical effect. The other was a statue of Diana-the object of numerous bon mots, first, because it was ordered by Catharine of Russia, who, it was generally thought, had no special affinity with he chaste goddess; and, secondly, on account of the voluptuous sharacter given it by the artist, which procured for his Diana the name of Venus. Houdon's bust of Voltaire gained him renown at once in this department of his pursuit, and is a memorable example of his success. How various the characters whose similitudes are perpetuated by his chisel-Gluck and Buffon. Rousseau and D'Alembert, Mirabeau and Washington! Jefferson, in behalf of the State of Virginia, arranged with Houdon at Paris, to undertake the latter commission; and he accompanied Dr. Franklin to the United States. He remained at Mount Vernon long enough to execute a model of Washington's head, and familiarize himself with every detail of his features and the traits of his natural language; but that implicit fidelity, now evident in the busts of our own leading sculptors, was not then in vogue, and the artists of the day were rather adepts in idealizing than in precise imitation of nature; therefore, the result of Houdon's labors, though, in general, satisfactory, cannot be used with the mathematical exactitude, as a guide, which greater attention to minutiæ would have secured. There is a sketch by Stuart indicating some minute errors in the outline of Houdon's bust. On leaving, he presented Washington with the bas-relief which used to hang over his chair in the library at Mount Vernon. He completed the statue after his return to Paris, and in the diary of Gouverneur Morris, is an entry noting his attendance at the artist's studio, to stand for the figure of his illustrious friend, whom, before he became corpulent, he is said to have resembled. He alludes to the circumstance as "being the humble employment of a mannikin;" and adds, "this is literally taking the advice of St. Paul, to be all things to all men." The original cast of the head of this statue is still at Mount Vernon, and the statue itself is the cherished ornament of the Capitol at Richmond, and has been declared, by one of Washington's biographers, to be "as perfect a resemblance, in face and figure, as the art admits;" while, on the other hand, a critic of large and studious observation, who was well acquainted with the appearance of the original, says that, as a likeness, the head is inferior to Ceracchi's bust. The costume is authentic, that Washington wore as commander-in-chief; it has been assailed with the usual arguments—its want of classical effect, and its undignified style; but less conservative reasoners appland the truth of the drapery, and the work is endeared as a faithful and unique representation of the man—the only one from life, bequeathed by the art of the sculptor. "Judge Marshall," says Dr. Sparks in a letter to us, "once told me that the head of Houdon's statue at Richmond, seen at a point somewhat removed towards the side, from the front, presented as perfect a resemblance of the living man as he could conceive possible in marble."

REMBRANDT PEALE, when quite young, became the companion of his father's artistic labors. In compliment to the latter, Washington sat for a likeness to the novice of eighteen, who says the honor agitated more than it inspired him, and he solicited his father's intercession and countenance on the memorable occasion. Of the precise value of his original sketch it is difficult to form an accurate opinion. but the mature result of his efforts to produce a portrait of Washington has attained a high and permanent fame. He availed himself of the best remembered points, and always worked with Houdon's bust before him. This celebrated picture is the favorite portrait of a large number of amateurs. It is more dark and mellowed in tint, more elaborately worked up, and, in some respects, more effectively arranged. than any of its predecessors. Enclosed in an oval of well-imitated stone fretwork, vigorous in execution, rich in color, the brow, eyes, and mouth, full of character-altogether it is a striking and impressive delineation. That it was thus originally regarded we may infer from the unanimous resolution of the U.S. Senate, in 1832, appropriating two thousand dollars for its purchase, and from the numerous copies of the original, in military costame, belonging to the artist, which have been and are still ordered. Rembrandt Peale is said to be the only living artist who ever saw Washington. In the pamphlet which he issued to authenticate the work, we find the cordial testimony to its fidelity and other merits of Lawrence Lewis, the eldest nephew of Washington: of the late venerable John Vaughan, of Bishop White, Rufus King, Charles Carroll, Edward Livingston, General Smith, Dr. James Thatcher, and Judge Cranch. Chief Justice Marshall says of it: 'It is more Washington himself than any portrait I have ever seen;" and Judge Peters explains his approval by declaring "I judge from its effect on my heart."

No artist enjoyed the opportunities of Colonel Trumbull as the portrayer of Washington. As aide-de-camp he was familiar with his appearance in the prime of his life and its most exciting era. At the commencement of the Revolutionary struggle, this officer was among the most active, and essentially promoted the secure retreat of the American forces, under General Sullivan, from Rhode Island; he. therefore, largely partook of the spirit of those days, came freely under the influence of Washington's character as it prevaded the camp, and had ample time and occasion to observe the Commander-in-Chief in his military aspect, and in social intercourse, on horseback, in the field, and at the hospitable board, in the councils of war, when silently meditating his great work, when oppressed with anxiety, animated by hope, or under the influence of those quick and strong feelings he so early learned to subdue. After Trumbull's resignation, and when far away from the scene of Washington's glory, he painted his head from recollection, so distinctly was every feature and expression impressed upon his mind. In the autumn of 1789 he returned from Europe, and began his sketches of the chiefs and statesmen of the Revolution, afterwards embodied in the pictures that adorn the Rotunda of the Capitol, and the originals of which, invaluable for their authenticity, may now be seen in the gallery at New Haven. Here is preserved the most spirited portrait of Washington that exists—the only reflection of him as a soldier of freedom worthy of the name, drawn from life. artist's own account of this work is given in his memoirs: "In 1792 I was again in Philadelphia, and there painted the portrait of General Washington, now placed in the gallery at New Haven, the best, certainly, of those that I painted, and the best, in my estimation, which exists in his heroic and military character. The city of Charleston, S. C., instructed Mr. W. R. Smith, one of the representatives of South Carolina, to employ me to paint for them a portrait of the great man, and I undertook it con amore, as the commission was unlimited, meaning to give his military character at the most sublime moment of its exertion—the evening previous to the battle of Trenton, when, viewing the vast superiority of his approaching enemy, the impossibility of again crossing the Delaware or retreating down the river, he conceives the plan of returning by a night march into the country from which he had been driven, thus cutting off the enemy's communication and destroying the depot of stores at Brunswick." There is a singular felicity in this choice of the moment to represent Washington, for it combines all the most desirable elements of expression characteristic of the man. It is a moment, not of brilliant achievement, but of intrepid conception, when the dignity of thought is united with the sternness of resolve, and the enthusiasm of a daring experiment kindles the habitual mood of self-control into an unwonted glow. As the artist unfolded his design to Washington, the memory of that eventful night thrilled him anew; he rehearsed the circumstances, described the scene, and his face was lighted up as the memorable crisis in his country's fate and his own career was renewed before him. He spoke of the desperate chance, the wild hope, and the hazardous but fixed determination of that hour; and, as the gratified painter declares, "looked the scene." "The result," he says, "was, in my own opinion, eminently successful, and the General was satisfied." Whether the observer of the present day accedes to the opinion, that he "happily transferred to the canvas the lofty expression of his animated countenance, the resolve to conquer or perish;" whether the picture comes up to his preconceived ideal of the heroic view of Washington or not, he must admit that it combines great apparent fidelity, with more spirit and the genius of action, than all other portraits.

Although not so familiar as Stuart's, numerous good copies of Trumbull's Washington, some from his own, ond others by later pencils, have rendered it almost as well known in this country. Contemporaries give it a decided preference; it recalled the leader of the American armies, the man who was "first in the hearts of his countrymen," ere age relaxed the facial muscles and modified the decisive lines of the mouth; it was associated in their minds with the indignant rebuke at Monmouth, the brilliant surprise at Trenton, and the heroic patience at Valley Forge; it was the Washington of their youth who led the armies of freedom, the modest, the brave, the vigilant and triumphant chief. Ask an elderly Knickerbocker what picture will give you a good idea of Washington, and he will confidently refer you. as the testimony his father has taught him, to Trumbull's portrait in the City Hall. When Lafayette first beheld a copy of this picture, in a gentleman's house in New Jersey, on his visit to this country, a few years before his death, he uttered an exclamation of delight at its resemblance. An excellent copy, by Vauderlyn, adorns the U.S. House of Representatives, for the figure in which, Geo. B. Rapalye, Esq., a highly respected citizen of New York, stood with exemplary patience, for many days, wearing a coat, perhaps the first specimen of American broadcloth, that had been worn by Washington. The air of the figure is as manly and elegant, the look as dignified and commanding, and the brow as practical in its moulding, as in Stuart's representation of him at a more advanced period; but the face is less round, the profile more aquiline, the complexion has none of the fresh and ruddy hue, and the hair is not yet blanched. It is, altogether, a keener, more active, less thoughtful, but equally graceful and dignified man. He stands in an easy attitude, in full uniform, with his hand on his horse's neck; and the most careless observer, though ignorant of the subject, would recognize, at a glance, the image of a brave man, an intelligent officer, and an honorable gentleman. The excellent engraving of Durand has widely disseminated Trumbull's spirited head of Washington.

Although the concurrent testimony of those best fitted to judge, give the palm to Trumbull's portrait, now in the gallery at New Haven, as the most faithful likeness of Washington in his prime, this praise seems to refer rather to the general expression and air, than to the details of the face. Trumbull often failed in giving a satisfactory likeness; he never succeeded in rendering the complexion, as is obvious by comparing that of his picture in the New York City Hall with any or all of Stuart's heads; the former is yellow, and gives the idea of a bilious temperament, while the latter, in every instance, have the florid, ruddy tint, which, we are assured, was characteristic of Washington, and indicative of his active habits, constant exposure to the elements, and Saxon blood. The best efforts of Trumbull were his first, careful sketches; he never could elaborate with equal effect; the collection of small, original heads, from which his historical pictures were drawn, are invaluable, as the most authentic resemblances in existence of our revolutionary heroes. They have a genuine look and a spirited air, seldom discoverable in the enlarged copies.

"Washington," says Trumbull, in describing the picture, "is represented standing on elevated ground, on the south side of the Creek at Trenton, a little below the stone-bridge and mill. He has a reconnoitring glass in his hand, with which he is supposed to have been examining the strength of the hostile army, pouring into and occupying Trenton, which he has just abandoned at their appearance; and, having ascertained their great superiority, as well in numbers as discipline he is supposed to have been meditating how to avoid the apparently impending ruin, and to have just formed the plan which he executed during the night. This led to the splendid success at Princeton on the following morning; and, in the estimation of the great Frederic, placed his military character on a level with that of the greatest commanders of ancient or modern times. Behind, and near, an attendant holds his horse. Every minute article of dress, down to the buttons and spurs, and the buckles and straps of the horse furniture, were carefully painted from the different objects."

The gentleman who was the medium of this commission to Trumbull, praised his work; but aware of the popular sentiment, declared it not calm and peaceful enough to satisfy those for whom it was intended. With reluctance, the painter asked Washington, overwhelmed as he was with official duty, to sit for another portrait, which represents him in his every-day aspect, and, therefore, better pleased the citizens of Charleston. "Keep this picture," said Washington to the artist, speaking of the first experiment, "and finish it to your own taste." When the Connecticut State Society of Cincinnati dissolved. a few of the members purchased it as a gift to Yale College.

GILBERT STUART'S most cherished anticipation when he left England for America, was that of executing a portrait of Washington. A comsummate artist in a branch which his own triumphs had proved could be rendered of the highest interest, he eagerly sought illustrious subjects for his pencil. This enthusiasm was increased in the present case, by the unsullied fame and the exalted European reputation of the American hero, by the greatest personal admiration of his character. and by the fact that no satisfactory representation existed abroad of a man whose name was identical with more than Roman patriotism and magnanimity. Stuart, by a series of masterly portraits, had established his renown in London; he had mingled in the best society; his vigorous mind was cognizant of all the charms that wit and acumen lend to human intercourse, and he knew the power which genius and will may so readily command. His own nature was more remarkable for strength than refinement; he was eminently fitted to appreciate practical talents and moral energy; the brave truth of nature rather than her more delicate effects, were grasped and reproduced by his skill; he might not have done justice to the ideal contour of Shelley, or the gentle features of Mary of Scotland, but could have perfectly reflected the dormant thunder of Mirabeau's countenance, and the argumentative abstraction that knit the brows of Samuel Johnson. He was a votary of truth in her boldest manifestations, and a delineator of character in its normal and sustained elements. The robust, the venerable, the moral picturesque, the mentally characteristic, he seized by intuition; those lines of physiognomy which channelled by will the map of inward life, which years of consistent thought and action trace upon the countenance, the hue that, to an observant eye, indicates almost the daily vocation, the air suggestive of authority or obedience, firmness or vacillation, the glance of the eye, which is the measure of natural intelligence and the temper of the soul, the expression of the mouth that infallibly betrays the disposition, the tint of hair and mould of features, not only attesting the period of life but revealing what that life has been, whether toilsome or inert, self-indulgent or adventurous, careworn or pleasurable—these, and such as these records of humanity, Stuart transferred, in vivid colors and most trustworthy outlines, to the canvas. Instinctive, therefore, was his zeal to delineate Washington; a man, who, of all the sons of fame, most clearly and emphatically wrote his character in deeds upon the world's heart, whose traits required no imagination to give them effect and no metaphysical insight to unravel their perplexity, but were brought out by the exigencies of the time in distinct relief, as bold, fresh, and true as the verdure of spring and the lights of the firmament, equally recognized by the humblest peasant and the most gifted philosopher.

To trace the history of each of Stuart's portraits of Washington would prove of curious interest. One of his letters to a relative, dated the second of November, 1794, enables us to fix the period of the earliest experiment. "The object of my journey," he says, "is only to secure a portrait of the President and finish yours." One of the succeeding pictures was bought from the artist's studio by Mr. Tayloe, of Washington, and is, at peesent, owned by his son, B. Ogle Tayloe, Esq.; another was long in the possession of Madison, and is now in that of Gov. E. Coles, of Philadelphia. The full-length, in the Presidential mansion, at the seat of Government, was saved through the foresight and care of the late Mrs. Madison, when the city was taken by the British in the last war. Stuart, however, always denied that this copy was by him. Another portrait of undoubted authenticity was offered to and declined by Congress, a few years ago, and is owned by a Boston gentleman; and one graced the hospitable dwelling of Samuel Williams, the London banker. For a long period artistic productions on this side of the water were subjects of ridicule. Tudor not inaptly called the New England country meeting-houses "wooden" lanterns;" almost every town boasted an architectural monstrosity popularly known as somebody's "folly;" the rows of legs in Trumbull's picture of the Signing of the Declaration, obtained for it the sarcastic name, generally ascribed to John Randolph, of "the shin piece;" and Stuart's full length, originally painted for Lord Lansdowne, with one arm resting on his sword hilt, and the other extended, was distinguished among artists by the title of the "tea-pot portrait," from the resemblance of the outline to the handle and spout of that domestic utensil. The feature, usually exaggerated in poor copies, and the least agreeable in the original, is the mouth, resulting from the want of support of those muscles consequent on the loss of teeth, a defect which Stuart vainly attempted to remedy by inserting cotton between the jaw and the lips; and Wilson Peale more permanently, but not less ineffectually, sought to relieve by a set of artificial teeth.

We have seen in western New York, a cabinet head of Washington which bears strong evidence of Stuart's pencil, and is traced directly by its present owner to his hand, which was purchased of the artist and presented to Mr. Gilbert, a member of Congress from Columbia County, New York, a gentleman who held the original in such veneration that he requested, on his death-bed, to have the picture exhibited to his fading gaze, as it was the last object he desired to behold on earth. The remarks of the latter artist indicate what a study he made of his illustrious sitter: "There were," he said, "features in his face totally different from what he had observed in any other human being; the sockets of the eyes, for instance, were larger than what he ever met with before, and the upper part of the nose broader. All his features were indicative of the strongest passions; yet, like Socrates, his judgment and great self-command made him appear a man of a different cast in the eyes of the world." The color of his eyes were a light grayish blue, but according to Mr. Custis, Stuart painted them of a deeper blue, saying, "in a hundred years they will have faded to the right color."

While Congress was in session at Philadelphia, in 1794, Stuart went thither with a letter of introduction to Washington, from John Jay. He first met his illustrious subject on a reception evening, and was spontaneously accosted by him with a greeting of dignified urbanity. Familiar as was the painter with eminent men, he afterwards declared that no human being ever awakened in him the sentiment of reverence to such a degree. For a moment, he lost his self-possession -with him an experience quite unprecedented-and it was not until several interviews that he felt himself enough at home with his sitter to give the requisite concentration of mind to his work. This was owing not less to the personal impressiveness of Washington-which all who came in contact with him felt and acknowledged-than to the profound respect and deep interest which the long anticipations of the artist had fostered in his own mind. He failed, probably from this cause, in his first experiment. No portrait-painter has left such a reputation for the faculty of eliciting expression by his social tact, as Stuart. He would even defer his task upon any pretext until he succeeded in making the sitter, as he said. "look like himself." To induce a natural, unconscious, and characteristic mood, was his initiative step in the execution of a portrait. Innumerable are the anecdotes of his ingenuity and persistence in carrying out this habit. More or less conversant with every topic of general interest, and endowed with rare conversational ability and knowledge of character, he seldom failed to excite the ruling passion, magnetize the prominent idiosyncrasy, or awaken the professional interest of the occupant of his throne, whether statesman, farmer, actor, judge, or merchant; and his fund of good stories, narrated with dramatic effect, by enchaining the attention or enlisting the sympathies, usually made the delighted listener self-oblivious and demonstrative, when, with an alertness and precision like magic, the watchful limner transferred the vital identity of his pre-occupied and fascinated subject, with almost breathing similitude. In Washington, however, he found a less flexible character upon which to scintillate his wit and open his anecdotical battery. Facility of adaptation seldom accompanies great individuality; and a man whose entire life has been oppressed with responsibility, and in whom the prevalent qualities are conscience and good sense, can scarcely be expected to possess humor and geniality in the same proportion as selfcontrol and reflection. On the professional themes of agriculture and military science, Washington was always ready to converse, if not with enthusiasm, at least in an attentive and intelligent strain; but the artillery of repartee, and the sallies of fancy, made but a slight impression upon his grave and reserved nature. He was deficient in language -far more a man of action than of words-and had been obliged to think too much on vast interests, to "carry America in his brain," as one of his eulogists has aptly said, to readily unbend in colloquial diversion. By degrees, however, the desirable relation was established between himself and the artist, who, of several portraits, justly gave the preference to the Lansdowne picture and the unfinished one now possessed by the Boston Athenaum. They, doubtless, are the most perfect representations of Washington, as he looked at the time they were executed, and will ever be the standards and resource of subsequent delineators. The latter, supposed by many to have been his original "study," engaged his attention for months. The freshness of color, the studious modelling of the brow, the mingling of clear purpose and benevolence in the eye, and a thorough nobleness and dignity in the whole head, realize all the most intelligent admirer of the original has imagined-not, indeed, when thinking of him as the intrepid leader of armies, but in the last analysis and complete image of the hero in retirement, in all the consciousness of a sublime career, unimpeachable fidelity to a national trust, and the eternal gratitude of a free people. It is this masterpiece of Stuart that has not only perpetuated, but distributed over the globe the resemblance of Washington. It has been sometimes lamented, that so popular a work does not represent him in the aspect of a successful warrior, or in the flush of youth; but there seems to be a singular harmony between this venerable image-so majestic, benignant, and serenc-and the absolute character and peculiar example of Washington, separated from what was purely incidental and contingent in his life. Self-control, endurance, dauntless courage, loyalty to a just but sometimes desperate cause, hope through the most hopeless crisis, and a tone of feeling the most exalted, united to habits of candid simplicity, are better embodied in such a calm, magnanimous, mature image, full of dignity and sweetness, than if portrayed in battle array or melodramatic attitude. Let such pictures as David's Napoleon -with prancing steed, flashing eye, and waving sword-represent the mere victor and military genius; but he who spurned a crown, knew no watchword but duty, no goal but freedom and justice, and no reward but the approval of conscience and the gratitude of a country, lives more appropriately, both to memory and in art, under the aspect of a finished life, crowned with the harvest of honor and peace, and serene in the consummation of disinterested purpose.

A letter of Stuart's which appeared in the New York Evening Post, in 1853,* attested by three gentlemen of Boston, with one from Wash-

It may set this question at rest to state, that Stuart himself has given an account of all the portraits of Washington that he painted.

* Extract from article in Evening Post, N. Y., March 15th, 1853:-

ington making the appointment for a sitting, proves the error long current in regard both to the dates and the number of this artist's original portraits. He there distinctly states that he never executed but three from life, the first of which was so unsatisfactory that he destroyed it; the second was the picture for Lord Lansdowne; and the third, the one now belonging to the Boston Athenæum. Of these originals he made twenty-six copies. The finishing touches were put to the one in September, 1795, and to the other, at Philadelphia, in the spring of 1796. This last, it appears by a letter of Mr. Custis, which we have examined, was undertaken against the desire of Washington,

A gentleman of Philadelphia has in his possession the originals of the following documents. [Edit. Post.]—

SIR:—I am under promise to Mrs. B'ngham, to sit for you to-morrow at nine o'clock, and wishing to know if it be convenient to you that I should do so, and whether it shall be at your own house, (as she talked of the State-House.) I send this note to you to ask information.—I am, Sir, your obedient servt.,

GEO. WASHINGTON.

Monday Evening, 11th April, 1796.

This letter was endorsed in Washington's handwriting,—"Mr. Stuart, Chestnut Street." At the foot of the manuscript are the following certificates:—

In looking over my papers to find one that had the signature of George Washington, I found this, asking me when he should sit for his portrait, which is now owned by Samuel Williams, of London. I have thought it proper it should be his, especially as he owns the only original painting I ever made of Washington, except one I own myself. I painted a third, but rubbed it out. I now present this to his brother, Timo Williams, for said Samuel.

Boston, 9th day of March, 1823.

GT. STUART.

Attest-J. P. Davis.

W. Dutton.

L. BALDWIN.

N.B.—Mr. Stnart painted in ye winter season his first portrait of Washington, but destroyed it. The next painting was ye one owned by S. Williams; the third Mr. S. now has—two only remain, as above stated.

T. W.

The picture alluded to in the above note of the late Timo Williams, as being then in Mr. Stuart's possession, is the one now in the Boston Athenæum; and that which belonged to the late Samuel Williams, Esq., alluded to in Mr. Stuart's note above quoted, is yet extant and owned by the son of an American gentleman, (John D. Lewis, Esq.,) who died in London some years since, where it still remains. Mr. Williams had paid for it at the sale of the personal effects of the Marquis of Lansdowne,—to whom it was originally presented by Mr. Bingham, of Philadelphia,—two thousand guineas.

It is this portrait, full length and life size, from which the bad engraving was made by Heath, so many copies of which are still to be seen in this country.

and at the earnest solicitation of his wife, who wished a portrait from life of her illustrious husband, to be placed among the other family pietures at Mount Vernon. For this express purpose, and to gratify her, the artist commenced the work, and Washington agreed to sit once more. It was left, intentionally, unfinished, and when subsequently claimed by Mr. Custis, who offered a premium upon the original price, Stuart excused himself, much to the former's dissatisfaction, on the plea that it was a requisite legacy for his children. Simultaneously with the Lansdowne portrait the artist executed for William Constable that now in the possession of his grandson, Henry E. Pierrepont, Esq., of Brooklyn, L. I. Motives of personal friendship induced the artist to exert his best skill in this instance; it is a fac-simile of its prototype, and the expression has been thought even more noble and of higher significance, more in accordance with the traditional character of the subject, than the Athenseum picture. It has the eyes looking off, and not at the spectator, as in the latter. Mr. Constable, the original proprietor, was aid to General Washington; and when Lafayette visited this country in 1824, upon entering the drawing-room at Brooklyn Heights, where the picture hangs, he exclaimed, "That is my old friend, indeed!" Colonel Nicholson Fish, and General Van Rensselaer, joined in attesting the superior correctness of the likeness.

The usual objection to Stuart's Washington is a certain feebleness about the lines of the mouth, which does not correspond with the distinct outline of the frontal region, the benign yet resolved eye, and the harmonious dignity of the entire head; but this defect was an inevitable result of the loss of teeth, and their imperfect substitution by a false set. In view of the state of the arts in this country at the period, and the age of Washington, we cannot but congratulate ourselves that we have so pleasing and satisfactory a portrait, and exclaim, with Leslie, "how fortunate it was that a painter existed in the time of Washington, who could hand him down looking like a gentleman!" Dr. Marshall, brother of the Chief Justice, said that Washington did not resemble Pine's portrait, when he knew him, that Wertmuller's had too French a look, another by Wertmuller had eyes too light, but that Stuart's was prodigiously "like."

Opinions are quite diverse in regard to the Werthuller portrait. There are many points of executive merit in the original not completely rendered in the engraving; the air of the head, the grave and refined look, well-arranged hair, neat ruffles, and old-fashioned coat sprinkled at the shoulders with powder, at once gave the somewhat vague yet unmistakable impression of "the portrait of a gentleman." There is an expression of firmness and clear-sightedness, and an erect, brave attitude which reveals the soldier; and there is more animation than we are accustomed to see in portraits of Washington. The latter trait is probably that which led to the selection of this picture as an illustration to Irving's Biography.

ADOLPHE ULRIC WERTMULLER was a devoted student of art, but his taste and style were chiefly formed under the influence of the old French Academy-and long before the delicate adherence to nature which now redeems the best modern pictures of French artists, had taken the place of a certain artificial excellence and devotion to mere effect. The career of this accomplished painter was marked by singular vicissitudes; -- a native of Stockholm, after preparatory studies there, he went to Paris, and remained several years acquiring both fame and fortune by his pencil; the latter, however, was nearly all lost by the financial disasters at the outbreak of the Revolution, and Wertmuller embarked for America, and arrived in Philadelphia in 1794. He was well received and highly estimated; Washington sat to him; * in 1796 he returned to Europe, but, after a brief period, the failure of a commercial house at Stockholm, in whose care he had placed his funds, so vexed him, that he returned to Philadelphia in 1800, where he soon after exhibited his large and beautiful picture of "Dana"-which, while greatly admired for the executive talent it displayed, was too exceptionable a subject to meet with the approbation of the sober citizens, whose sense of propriety was so much more vivid than their enthusiasm for art. Wertmuller soon after married a lady of Swedish descent, purchased a farm in Delaware county, Penn, and resided there in much comfort and tranquillity, until his death in 1812. His pictures were sold at auction; and a small copy of the "Dana" brought $500; the original, some years after, being purchased in New York for three times that sum. In an appreciative notice of him, which appeared soon after his death in a leading literary journal, there is the following just reference to his portrait of Washington: "It has been much praised and frequently copied on the continent of Europe; but it has a forced and foreign air, into which the painter seems to have fallen by losing sight of the noble presence before him, in an attempt after ideal dignity." *

* See notice of Wertmuller in Analectic Magazine, 1815.

Wertmuller was eminent in his day for miniatures and oil portraits. Our first knowledge of him was derived from the superb picture of Danæ, which, for some time, occupied a nook, curtained from observation, in the studio of the late Henry Inman, of New York, and it was exhibited in Washington City, thirty years ago. There was fine drawing and rich color in this voluptuous creation—enough to convey a high idea of the skill and grace of the artist. With this picture vividly in the mind, it is difficult to realize that the chaste, subdued portrait of Washington was from the same hand.

It was confidently asserted, that Washington invariably noted in his diary his sittings to portrait painters, and that no entry appears in reference to this picture. Its claim to originality was, therefore, ques-With the impatience of the whole subject, however, that Washington confessed at last, he may have ceased to record what became a penance; and were the picture satisfactory in other respects, we should not be disposed to complain that it was skilfully combined from other portraits. But, in our view, the engraving, at least, has intrinsic faults. It is neither the Washington familiar to observation as portrayed, nor to fancy as idealized. There is a self-conscious expression about the mouth, not visible in Stuart's or Trumbull's heads, and out of character in itself; the eyebrows are raised so as to indicate either a supercilious or a surprised mood, both alien to Washington's habitual state of mind; it is impossible for the brows to be knit between the eyes, and arched over them at the same time, as in this engraving; the eyes themselves have a staring look; the animation so much wanted is here obtained at the expense of that serenity which was a normal characteristic of the man; we miss the modesty, the latent power, the placid strength, so intimately associated with the looks as well as the nature of Washington; the visage is too clongated; compared with the Athenaum portrait this picture has a commonplace expression; it does not approach it in moral elevation; we should pass it by in a gallery as the likeness of a gentleman and a brave officer, but not linger over it as the incarnation of disinterested, magnanimous, loyal courage, such as lent a certain unconscious, impressive, and superior aspect to Washington, and divided him, by an infinite distance, from the mob of vulgar heroes.

* * * * * * *

The latest and most triumphant attempt to embody and illustrate the features, form and character of Washington in statuary, was made by the late American sculptor-Thomas Crawford. How well he studied, and how adequately he reproduced the head of his illustrious subject, may be realized by a careful examination of the noble and expressive marble bust of Washington from his chisel, now in the possession of John Ward, Esq., of New York. Essentially, and as far as contour and proportions are concerned, based upon the model of Houdon,-this beautiful and majestic effigy is instinct with the character of its subject, so that while satisfactory in detail as a resemblance caught from nature, it, at the same time, is executed in a spirit perfectly accordant with the traditional impressions and the instinctive ideas whence we derive our ideal of the man, the chieftain, and the patriot; the moulding of the brow. the pose of the head, and especially the expression of the mouth, are not less authentic than effective. But the crowning achievement of this artist is his equestrian statue execnted for the State of Virginia, and now the grand trophy and ornament of her Capitol. "When on the evening of his arrival, Crawford went to see, for the first time, his Washington in bronze at the Munich foundry, he was surprised at the dusky precincts of the vast area; suddenly torches flashed illumination on the magnificent horse and rider, and simultaneously burst forth from a hundred voices a song of triumph and jubilee; thus the delighted Germans congratulated their gifted brother and hailed the sublime work-typical to them of American freedom, patriotism, and genius. The Bavarian king warmly recognized its original merits and consummate effect; the artists would suffer no inferior hands to pack and despatch it to the sea-side; peasants greeted its triumphal progress; the people of Richmond were emulous to share the task of conveying it from the quay to Capitol Hill; mute admiration followed by ecstatic cheers, hailed its unveiling, and the most gracious native eloquence inaugurated its erection. We might descant upon the union of majesty and spirit in the figure of Washington, and the vital truth of action in the horse, the air of command and of rectitude, the martial vigor and grace, so instantly felt by the popular heart, and so rritically praised by the adept in sculpture cognizant of the difficulties to overcome, and the impression to be absolutely conveyed by such a work in order to make it at once true to nature and to character; we might repeat the declaration that no figure ancient or modern, so entirely illustrates the classical definition of oratory, as consisting in action, as the statue of Patrick Henry, one of the grand accessories of the work,—which seems instinct with that memorable utterance, "Give me liberty, or give me death!" By a singular and affecting coincidence, the news of Crawford's death reached the United States simultaneously with the arrival of the ship containing this colossal bronze statue of Washington-his "crowning achievement." In this work, the first merit is naturalness; although full of equine ardor, the graceful and noble animal is evidently subdued by his rider; calm power is obvious in the man; restrained eagerness in the horse; Washington's left hand is on the snaffle bridle, which is drawn back; he sits with perfect ease and dignity, the head and face a little turned to the left, as if his attention had just been called in that direction, either in expectancy, or to give an order; he points forward and a little upwards; the figure is erect, the chest thrown forward, the knees pressed to the saddle, the heel nearly beneath the shoulder, and the sole of the foot almost horizontal. The seat is a military and not a hunting seat; the horse is recognized by one acquainted with breeds, as "a charger of Arab blood.

His hands were large, as became one inured to practical achievement; his forehead was of that square mould that accompanies an executive mind, not swelling at the temples, as in the more ideal conformation of poetical men; a calm and benevolent light usually gleamed from his eyes, and they flashed, at times, with valorous purpose or stern indignation; but they were not remarkably large as in persons of more fluency, and foretold Washington's natural deficiency in language, proclaiming the man of deeds, not words; neither had they the liquid hue of extreme sensibility, nor the varying light of an unsubdued temperament; their habitual expression was self-possessed, serenc and thoughtful. There was a singular breadth to the face, invariably preserved by Stuart, but not always by Trumbull, who often gives an aquiline and somewhat elongated visage: no good physiognomist can fail to see in his nose that dilation of the nostril and prominence of the ridge which belong to resolute and spirited characters; the distance between the eyes marks a capacity to measure distances and appreciate form and the relation of space; but these special traits are secondary to the carriage of the body, and the expression of the whole face, in which appear to have blended an unparalleled force of impression. When fully possessed of the details of his remarkable countenance, and inspired by the record of his career, we turn from the description of those who beheld the man, on horseback, at the head of an army, presiding over the national councils, or seated in the drawing-room, to any of the portraits, we feel that no artist ever caught his best look, or transmitted his features when kindled by that matchless soul. If we compare any selection of engravings with each other so inferior are the greater part extant, we find such glaring dis crepancies, that doubts multiply; and we realize that art never did entire justice to the idea, the latent significance, and the absolute character of Washington. There is dignity in Houdon's bust, an effective facial angle in the crayon of Sharpless, and elegance, wisdom and benignity in Stuart's head; but what are they, each and all, in contrast with the visage we behold in fancy, and revere in heart? has been ingeniously remarked, that the letters received by an individual indicate his character better than those he writes, because they suggest what he elicits from others, and thereby furnish the best key to his scope of mind and temper of soul; on the same principle the likeness drawn, not from the minute descriptions, but the vivid impressions of those brought into intimate contact with an illustrious character, are the most reliable materials for his portrait; they reflect the man in the broad mirror of humanity, and are the faithful daguerreotypes which the vital radiance of his nature leaves on the consciousness of mankind.

II.

WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS.

[The original MS. of the Farewell Address, in Washington's handwriting, and with his revisions and alterations, having been purchased by James Lenox, Esq., of New York, that gentleman caused a few copies of it, with some illustrative documents, to be printed for private distribution. By permission of Mr. Lenox it is here reprinted, with the alterations, and with his explanatory remarks.]

PREFACE.

This reprint of Washington's Farewell Address to the people of the United States, is made from the original manuscript recently sold in Philadelphia by the Administrators of the late Mr. David C. Claypoole, in whose possession it had been from the date of its first publication. The paper is entirely in the autograph of Washington: no one acquainted with his handwriting can inspect it, and doubt for a moment the statements to that effect made by Mr. Claypoole and Mr. Rawle.

Upon examining the manuscript, it was found that, in addition to its importance as an historical document, and its value from being in the autograph of Washington, it was of great interest as a literary curiosity, and threw light upon the disputed question of the authorship of the Address. It clearly shows the process by which that paper was wrought into the form in which it was first given to the public; and notes written on the margin of passages and paragraphs, which have been crased, prove, almost beyond a doubt, that this draft was submitted to the judgment of other persons. Such memoranda were unnecessary either for Washington's own direction on a subsequent revision, or for the guidance of the printer; but he might very naturally thus note the reasons which had led him to make the alterations before he asked the advice and opinion of his friends. It seems probable, therefore, that this is the very draft sent to General Hamilton and Chief Justice Jay, as related in the letter of the latter. Some of the alterations, however, were evidently made during the writing of the paper; for in a few instances a part, and even the whole, of a sentence is struck out, which afterwards occurs in the body of the address.

Mr. Claypoole's description of the appearance of the manuscript is very accurate. There are many alterations, corrections, and interlineations: and whole sentences and paragraphs are sometimes obliterated. All these, however, have been deciphered without much trouble, and carefully noted.

It was thought best to leave the text in this edition as it was first printed: only two slight verbal variations were found between the corrected manuscript, and the common printed copies. All the interlineations and alterations are inserted in brackets [], and where, in any case, words or sentences have been struck out, either with or without corrections in the text to supply their place, these portions have been deciphered and are printed in notes at the foot of the page. The reader will thus be enabled to perceive at a glance the changes made in the composition of the address; and if the draft made by General Hamilton, and read by him to Mr. Jay, should be published, it will be seen how far Washington adopted the modifications and suggestions made by them.

When this preface was thus far prepared for the press, an opportunity was afforded, through the kindness of John C. Hamilton, Esq., to examine several letters which passed between Washington and General Hamilton relating to the Address, and also a copy of it in the handwriting of the latter. It appears from these communications that the President, both in sending to him a rough draft of the document, and at subsequent dates, requested him to prepare such an Address as he thought would be appropriate to the occasion; that Washington consulted him particularly, and most minutely, on many points connected with it; and that at different times General Hamilton did forward to the President three drafts of such a paper. first was sent back to him with suggestions for its correction and enlargement: from the second draft thus altered and improved, the manuscript now printed may be supposed to have been prepared by Washington, and transmitted for final examination to General Hamilton and Judge Jay; and with it the third draft was returned to the President, and may probably yet be found among his papers.

The copy in the possession of Mr. Hamilton is probably the second of these three drafts: it is very much altered and corrected throughout. In comparing it with that in Washington's autograph, the sentiments are found to be the same, and the words used are very frequently identical. Some of the passages erased in the manuscript are in the draft: three paragraphs, viz. those on pages 50, 51, and 52 have nothing corresponding to them in the draft; but a space is left in it, evidently for the insertion of additional matter. The comparison of these two papers is exceedingly curious. It is difficult to conceive how two persons could express the same ideas in substantially the same language, and yet with much diversity in the construction of the sentences, and the position of the words.

J. L.

New York, April 12, 1850.

FAREWELL ADDRESS.

FRIENDS, AND FELLOW-CITIZENS:

The period for a new election of a Citizen, to administer the Executive Government of the United States, being not far distant, and the time actually arrived, when your thoughts must be employed in designating the person, who is to be clothed with that important trust [*], it appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed, to decline being considered among the number of those, out of whom a choice is to be made.

I beg you, at the same time, to do me the justice to be assured, that this resolution has not been taken, without a strict regard to all the considerations appertaining to the relation, which binds a dutiful citizen to his country—and that, in withdrawing the tender of service which silence in my situation might imply, I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your future interest, no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness; but [am supported by] † a full conviction that the step is compatible with both.

The acceptance of, and continuance hitherto in, the office to which your suffrages have twice called me, have been a uniform sacrifice of inclination to the opinion of duty, and to a deference for what appeared to be your desire.—I constantly hoped, that it would have been much earlier in my power, consistently with motives which I was not at liberty to disregard, to return to that retirement, from which I had been reluctantly drawn.—The strength of my inclination to do this, previous to the last election, had even led to the preparation of an address to declare it to you; but mature reflection on the then per plexed and critical posture of our affairs with foreign Nations, and the unanimous advice of persons entitled to my confidence, impelled me to abandon the idea.—

* for another term

I rejoice that the state of your concerns, external as well as internal, no longer renders the pursuit of inclination incompatible with the sentiment of duty, or propriety; and [am persuaded] * whatever partiality [may be retained] † for my services, [that] ‡ in the present circumstances of our country [you] will not disapprove my determination to retire.

The impressions, [with] § which I first [undertook] || the arduous trust, were explained on the proper occasion. In the discharge of this trust, I will only say that I have, with good intentions, contributed [towards] || the organization and administration of the government, the best exertions of which a very fallible judgment was capable. Not unconscious, in the outset, of the inferiority of my qualifications, experience in my own eyes, [perhaps] still more in the eyes of others, has [strengthened] ** the motives to diffidence of myself; and every day the increasing weight of years admonishes me more and more, that the shade of retirement is as necessary to me as it will be welcome.—Satisfied that if any circumstances have given peculiar value to my services, they were temporary, I have the consolation to believe, that, while choice and prudence invite me to quit the political scene, patriotism does not forbid it. [††]

In looking forward to the moment, which is [intended] to terminate the career of my public life, my feelings do not permit me to suspend the deep acknowledgment [of] † that debt of gratitude which I owe to my beloved country,—for the many honors it has conferred upon me; still more for the stedfast confidence with which it has supported me;

In the margin opposite this paragraph is the following note in Washington's Autograph also erased, 'obliterated to avoid the imputation of affected modesty."

†† May I also have that of knowing in my retreat, that the involuntary errors, I have probably committed, have been the sources of no serions or lasting mischief to our country. I may then expect to realize, without alloy, the sweet enjoyment of partaking, in the midst of my fellow-citizens, the benign influence of good laws under a free government; the ever favorite object of my heart, and the happy reward, I trust, of our mutual cares, dangers and labours.

‡‡ demanded by

and for the opportunities I have thence enjoyed of manifesting my inviolable attachment, by services faithful and persevering, though [in usefulness unequal |* to my zeal .- If benefits have resulted to our country from these services, let it always be remembered to your praise, and as an instructive example in our annals, that [†] under circumstances in which the Passions agitated in every direction were liable to [mislead], amidst appearances sometimes dubious, vicissitudes of fortune often discouraging-in situations in which not unfrequently want of success has countenanced the spirit of criticism [the constancy of your support | was the essential prop of the efforts and [a] § guarantee of the plans by which they were effected. Profoundly penetrated with this idea, I shall carry it with me to the grave, as a strong incitement to unceasing vows [||] that Heaven may continue to you the choicest tokens of its beneficence-that your union and brotherly affection may be perpetual—that the free constitution, which is the work of your hands, may be sacredly maintained-that its administration in every department may be stamped with wisdom and virtue—that, in fine, the happiness of the people of these States, under the auspices of liberty, may be made complete, by so careful a preservation and so prudent a use of this blessing as will acquire to them the glory [¶] of recommending it to the applause, the affection, and adoption of every nation which is yet a stranger to it.

Here, perhaps, I ought to stop.—But a solicitude for your welfare which cannot end but with my life, and the apprehension of danger, natural to that solicitude, Jurge me, on an occasion like the present, to offer] ** to your solemn contemplation, and to recommend to your frequent review, some sentiments which are the result of much reflection, of no inconsiderable observation [††], and which appear to me all important to the permanency of your felicity as a people.-These will be offered to you with the more freedom as you can only see in them, the disinterested warnings of a departing friend, who can [possibly] have no personal motive to bias his counsels.—[Nor can I forget, as an

* unequal in usefulness

the constancy of your support

<sup>1</sup> wander and fluctuate

§ the

the only return I can henceforth make Tor satisfaction

<sup>**</sup> encouraged by the remembrance of your indulgent reception of my sent ments on an occasion not dissimilar to the present, urge me to offer tt and experience

encouragement to it your indulgent reception of my sentiments on a former and not dissimilar occasion.]

Interwoven as is the love of liberty with every ligament of your hearts, no recommendation of mine is necessary to fortify or confirm the attachment.——

The Unity of Government which constitutes you one people, is also now dear to you.-It is justly so ;-for it is a main Pillar in the Edifice of your real independence; [the support] of your tranquillity at home; your peace abroad; of your safety; [*] of your prosperity [†]; of that very Liberty which you so highly prize.—But, as it is easy to foresee, that from [different] ‡ causes, and from different quarters, much pains will be taken, many artifices employed, to weaken in your minds the conviction of this truth:—as this is the point in your [political] fortress against which the batteries of internal and external enemies will be most constantly and actively (though often covertly and insidiously) directed, it is of infinite moment, that you should properly estimate the mmense value of your national Union to your collective and individual happiness;—that you should cherish [§] a cordial, habitual, and immoveable attachment [to it, accustoming yourselves to think and speak of it as of the Palladium of your political safety and prosperity; watching for its preservation with jealous anxiety; discountenancing whatever may suggest even a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned, and indignantly frowning upon the first dawning of every attempt to alienate any portion of our Country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now

For this you have every inducement of sympathy and interest.—Citizens [by birth or choice of a common country], I that country has a right to concentrate your affections.—The name of AMERICAN, which belongs to you, in your national capacity, must always exalt the just * in every relation † in every shape ‡ various § towards it ¶ that you should accustom yourselves to reverence it as the Palladium of your political safety and prosperity, adapting constantly your words and actions to that momentous idea; that you should watch for its preservation with jealous anxiety, discountenance whatever may suggest a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned; and frown upon the first dawning of any attempt to alienate any portion of our Country from the rest, or to enfeeble the sacred ties which now link together the several parts.

¶ of a common country by birth or choice

pride of Patriotism, more than any appellation [*] derived from local discriminations.—With slight shades of difference, you have the same Religion, Manners, Habits, and political Principles.—You have in a common cause fought and triumphed together.—The Independence and Liberty you possess are the work of joint councils and joint efforts—of common dangers, sufferings and successes.—

But these considerations, however powerfully they address them selves to your sensibility, are greatly outweighed by those which apply more immediately to your Interest.—Here every portion of our country finds the most commanding motives for carefully guarding and preserving the Union of the whole.

The North in an [unrestrained] † intercourse with the South, protected by the equal Laws of a common government, finds in the productions of the latter [‡] great additional resources of maritime and commercial enterprise-and precious materials of manufacturing industry.—The South, in the same intercourse, benefiting by the agency of the North, sees its agriculture grow and its commerce expand. Turning partly into its own channels the seamen of the North, it finds its particular navigation envigorated; - and while it contributes, in different ways, to nourish and increase the general mass of the national navigation, it looks forward to the protection of a maritime strength to which itself is unequally adapted.—The East, in a like intercourse with the West, already finds, and in the progressive improvement of interior communications, by land and water, will more and more find, a valuable vent for the commodities which it brings from abroad, or manufactures at home.—The West derives from the East supplies requisite to its growth and comfort, and what is perhaps of still greater consequence, it must of necessity owe the secure enjoyment of indispensable outlets for its own productions to the weight, influence, and the future maritime strength of the Atlantic side of the Union, directed by an andissoluble community of interest, as one Nation. [Any other] § tenure by which the West can hold this essential advantage, [whether derived] | from its own separate strength or from an apostate and unnatural connection with any foreign Power, must be intrinsically precarious. [¶]

I liable every moment to be disturbed by the fluctuating combinations of the [*] While [then] every part of our Country thus [feels] † an immediate and particular interest in Union, all the parts ‡ [combined cannot fail to find in the united mass of means and efforts [8] greater strength, greater resource, proportionably greater security from external danger, a less frequent interruption of their peace by foreign Nations; and, [what is] | of inestimable value! they must derive from Union an exemption from those broils and wars between themselves, which [so frequently] I afflict neighbouring countries, not tied together by the same government; which their own rivalships alone would be sufficient to produce; but which opposite foreign alliances, attachments and intrigues would stimulate and embitter.—Hence likewise they will avoid the necessity of those overgrown Military establishments, which under any form of Government are inauspicious to liberty, and which [are to be regarded] ** as particularly hostile to Republican Liberty: In this sense it is, that your Union ought to be considered as a main prop of your liberty, and that the love of the one ought to endear to you the preservation of the other.

These considerations speak a persuasive language to [every] †† reflecting and virtuous mind, -[and] ## exhibit the continuance of the Union as a primary object of Patriotic desire.—Is there a doubt, whether a common government can embrace so large a sphere? Let experience solve it.—To listen to mere speculation in such a case were eriminal.—[We are authorised] §§ to hope that a proper organization of the whole, with the auxiliary agency of governments for the respective subdivisions, will afford a happy issue to the experiment. 'Tis well worth a fair and full experiment. [|||] With such powerful and obvious motives to Union, [affecting | ¶¶ all parts of our country [***], while experience shall not have demonstrated its impracticability, there will primary interests of Europe, which must be expected to regulate the conduct of the Nations of which it is composed.

* And † finds 1 of it § cannot fail to find ¶ inevitably

| which is an advantage

** there is reason to regard †† any 11 they §§ 'Tis natural

II It may not impossibly be found, that the spirit of party, the machinations of foreign powers, the corruption and ambition of individual citizens are more formidable adversaries to the Unity of our Empire than any inherent difficulties in the scheme. Against these the mounds of national opinion, national sympathy and national jealousy onght to be raised.

TT as always be [reason] * to distrust the patriotism of those, who in any quarter may endeavour to weaken its bands. [†]--

In contemplating the causes which may disturb our Union, it occurs as matter of serious concern, that [any ground should have been furnished for characterizing parties by] ‡ Geographical discriminations—Northern and Southern—Atlantic and Western; [whence designing men may endeavor to excite a belief that there is a real difference of local interests and views.] § One of the expedients of Party to acquire influence, within particular districts, is to misrepresent the opinions and aims of other districts.—You cannot shield yourselves too much against the jealousies and heartburnings which spring from these misrepresentations;—They tend to render alien to each other those who ought * cause in the effect itself

† Besides the more serious causes already hinted as threatening our Union, there is one less dangerous, but sufficiently dangerous to make it prudent to be upon our guard against it. I allude to the petulance of party differences of opinion. It is not uncommon to hear the irritations which these excite vent themselves in declarations that the different parts of the United States are ill affected to each other, in menaces that the Union will be dissolved by this or that measure. Intimations like these are as indiscreet as they are intemperate. Though frequently made with levity and without any really evil intention, they have a tendency to produce the consequence which they indicate. They teach the minds of men to consider the Union as precarious; -as an object to which they ought not to attach their hopes and fortunes ;-and thus chill the sentiment in its favour. By alarming the pride of those to whom they are addressed, they set ingenuity at work to depreciate the value of the thing, and to discover reasons of indifference towards it. This is not wise .- It will be much wiser to habitnate ourselves to reverence the Union as the palladium of our national happiness: to accommodate constantly our words and actions to that idea, and to discountenance whatever may suggest a suspicion that it can in any event be abandoned. (In the margin opposite this paragraph are the words, "Not important enough.") to be bound together by fraternal affection.-The inhabitants of our Western country have lately had a useful lesson on this [head.] *-They have seen, in the negotiation by the Executive, and in the unanimous ratification by the Senate, of the Treaty with Spain, and in the universal satisfaction at that event, throughout the United States, a decisive proof how unfounded were the suspicions propagated among them of a policy in the General Government and in the Atlantic States unfriendly to their interests in regard to the Mississippi.—They have heen witnesses to the formation of two Treaties, that with G. Britain, and that with Spain, which secure to them every thing they could desire, in respect to our foreign Relations towards confirming their prosperity.-Will it not be their wisdom to rely for the preservation of these advantages on the Union by which they were procured ?-Will they not henceforth be deaf to those advisers, if such there are, who would sever them from their Brethren, and connect them with Aliens ?-

‡ our parties for some time past have been too much characterized by § These discriminations,——the mere contrivance of the spirit of Party, (always dexterous to seize every handle by which the passions can be wielded, and too skilful not to turn to account the sympathy of neighbourhood), have furnished an argument against the Union as evidence of a real difference of local interests and views; and serve to hazard it by organizing larger districts of country, under the leaders of contending factions; whose rivalships, prejudices and schemes of ambition, rather than the true interests of the Country, will direct the use of their influence. If it be possible to correct this poisou in the habit of our body politic, it is worthy the endeavours of the moderate and the good to effect it.

To the efficacy and permanency of your Union, a Government for the whole is indispensable.-No alliances however strict between the parts can be an adequate substitute.—They must inevitably experience the infractions and interruptions which all alliances in all times have experienced.—Sensible of this momentous truth, you have improved upon your first essay, by the adoption of a Constitution of Government, better calculated than your former for an intimate Union, and for the efficacious management of your common concerns.—This government, the offspring of our own choice, uninfluenced and unawed, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support.— Respect for its authority, compliance with its Laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true Liberty. The basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and to alter their Constitutions of Government.-But the Constitution which at any time exists, 'till changed by an explicit and authentic act of the whole People, is sacredly obligatory upon all. -The very idea of the power and the right of the People to establish Government, presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established Government.

All obstructions to the execution of the Laws, all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with [the real] design to direct, controll, counteract, or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities, are destructive of this fundamental principle, and of fatal tendency .- They serve to organize faction, to give it an artificial and extraordinary force—to put, [*] in the place of the delegated will of the Nation, the will of a party;—often a small but artful and enterprising minority of the community; -and, according to the alternate triumphs of different parties, to make the public administration the mirror of the ill-concerted and incongruous projects of faction, rather than the organ of consistent and wholesome plans, digested by common councils and modified by mutual interests. -- However combinations or associations of the above description may now and then answer popular ends, [†] they are likely, in the course of time and things, to become potent engines, by which cunning, ambitious and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the People, and to usurp for themselves the reins of Government; destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion .-

Towards the preservation of your Government and the permanency of your present happy state, it is requisite, not only that you steadily discountenance irregular opposition to its acknowledged authority, but also that you resist with care [the] ‡ spirit of innovation upon its principles however specious the pretexts.—One method of assault may be to effect, in the forms of the Constitution, alterations which will impair the energy of the system, [and thus to] § undermine what cannot be directly overthrown. In all the changes to which you may be invited, remember that time and habit are at least as necessary to fix the true character of Governments, as of other human institutions-that experience is the surest standard, by which to test the real tendency of the existing Constitution of a Country-that facility in changes upon the credit of mere hypothesis and opinion exposes to perpetual change, from the endless variety of hypothesis and opinion:—and remember, especially, that for the efficient management of your common interests, in a country so extensive as ours, a Government of as much vigour as is consistent with the perfect security of Liberty is indispensable—Liberty itself will find in such a Government, with powers properly distributed and adjusted, its surest guardian.—[It is indeed little else than a name, where the Government is too feeble to withstand the enterprises of faction, to confine each member of the Society within the limits prescribed by the laws, and to maintain all in the secure and tranquil enjoyment of the rights of person and property.]*

I have already intimated to you the danger of Parties in the State with particular reference to the founding of them on Geographical discriminations.—Let me now take a more comprehensive view, and warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the Spirit of Party, generally.

This Spirit, unfortunately, is inseparable from [our] † nature, having its root in the strongest passions of the [human] mind.—It exists under different shapes in all Governments, more or less stifled, controuled or repressed; but in those of the popular form it is seen in its greatest rankness, and is truly their worst enemy.—[‡]

The alternate domination of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenge natural to party dissension, which in different ages and countries has perpetrated the most horrid enormities, is itself a frightful despotism.—But this leads at length to a more formal and * Owing to you as I do a frank and free disclosure of my heart, I shall not conceal from you the belief I entertain, that your Government as at present constituted is far more likely to prove too feeble than too powerful.

+ human

‡ In Republics of narrow extent, it is not difficult for those who at any time hold the reins of Power, and command the ordinary public favor, to overturn the established [constitution] * in favor of their own aggrandizement.—The same thing may likewise be too often accomplished in such Republics, by partial combinations of men, who though not in office, from birth, riches or other sources of distinction, have extraordinary influence and numerous [adherents.] †—By debauching the Military force, by surprising some commanding citadel, or by some other sudden and unforceseen movement the fate of the Republic is decided.—But in Republics of large extent, usurpation can scarcely make its way through these avenues.—The powers and opportunities of resistance of a wide extended and numerous nation, defy the successful efforts of the ordinary Military force, or of any collections which wealth and patronage may call to their aid.—In such Republics, it is safe to assert, that the conflicts of popular factions are the chief, if not the only inlets, of usurpation and Tyranny.

permanent despotism.—The disorders and miscries, which result, gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an Individual: and sooner or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this disposition to the purposes of his own clevation, on the ruins of Public Liberty.

Without looking forward to an extremity of this kind, (which nevertheless ought not to be entirely out of sight), the common and continual mischiefs of the spirit of Party are sufficient to make it the interest and the duty of a wise People to discourage and restrain it.—

It serves always to distract the Public Councils and enfeeble the Public administration.—It agitates the community with ill-founded jealousies and false alarms, kindles the animosity of one part against another, foments occasionally riot and insurrection.—It opens the door to foreign influence and corruption, which find a facilitated access [to the Government itself through the channels of party passions. Thus, the policy and the will of one country, are subjected to the policy and will of another.]*

There is an opinion that parties in free countries are useful checks upon the Administration of the Government, and serve to keep alive the Spirit of Liberty.—This within certain limits is probably true—and in Governments of a Monarchical east, Patriotism may look with indulgence, if not with favour, upon the spirit of party.—But in those of the popular character, in Governments purely elective, it is a spirit not to be encouraged.—From their natural tendency, it is certain there will always be enough of that spirit for every salutary purpose,—and there being constant danger of excess, the effort ought to be, by force of public opinion, to mitigate and assuage it.—A fire not to be quenched; it demands a uniform vigilance to prevent its bursting into a flame, lest, [instead of warning, it should]† consume.—

It is important, likewise, that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those entrusted with its administration, to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres; avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department to * through the channels of party passions. It frequently subjects the policy of our own country to the policy of some foreign country, and even enslaves the will of our Government to the will of some foreign Government.

t it should not only warm, but encroach upon another.—The spirit of encroachment tends to consoli date the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, [*] whatever [the form of government, a real] † despotism .- A just estimate of that love of power, and [‡] proneness to abuse it, which predominates in the human heart, is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position.-The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power, by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the Guardian of the Public Weal [against]& invasions by the others, has been evinced by experiments ancient and modern; some of them in our country and under our own eyes.—To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them.—If in the opinion of the People, the distribution or modification of the Constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates .- But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the [customary] | weapon by which free governments are destroyed.—The precedent [ ] must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or [transient] ** benefit which the use [††] can at any time yield.—

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, Religion and morality are indispensable supports.—In vain would that man claim the tribute of Patriotism, who should labour to subvert these great Pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of Men and Citizens.—The mere Politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them.—A volume could not trace all their connections with private and public felicity.—Let it simply be asked where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths, which are the instruments of investigation in Courts of Justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition, that morality can be maintained without religion.—Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure—reason and experience both orbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.—

'Tis substantially true that virtue or morality is a necessary spring

* under § from ** temporary † forms, a | usual and natural †† itself ‡ the ¶ of its use of popular government.—The rule indeed extends with more or less force to every species of Free Government.—Who that is a sincere friend to it, can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?—

[Promote then as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge.—In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that public opinion should be enlightened.]—*

As a very important source of strength and security, cherish public credit.—One method of preserving it is to use it as [sparingly]t as possible: - avoiding occasions of expense by cultivating peace, but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger frequently prevent much greater disbursements to repel it—avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by [shunning] I occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of Peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars may have occasioned, not ungenerously throwing upon posterity the burthen which we ourselves ought to bear. The execution of these maxims belongs to your Representatives, but it is necessary that public opinion should [co-operate.] \—To facilitate to them the performance of their duty, it is essential that you should practically bear in mind, that towards the payment of debts there must be Revenue—that to have Revenue there must be taxes—that no taxes can be devised which are not more or less inconvenient and unpleasant—that the intrinsic embarrassment inseparable from the selection of the proper objects (which is always a choice of difficulties) ought to be a decisive motive for a candid construction of the conduct of the Government in making it, and for a spirit of acquiescence in the measures for obtaining Revenue which the public exigencies may at any time dictate.-

(Over this paragraph in the original a piece of paper is wafered, on which the passage is written as printed in the text.)

† little

avoiding

§ coincide

* Cultivate industry and frugality, as auxiliaries to good morals and sources of private and public prosperity.—Is there not room to regret that our propensity to expense exceeds our means for it? Is there not more luxury among us and more diffusively, than suits the actual stage of our national progress? Whatever may be the apology for luxury in a country, mature in the Arts which are its ministers, and the cause of national opulence—can it promote the advantage of a young country, almost wholly agricultural, in the infancy of the Arts, and certainly not in the maturity of wealth?

Observe good faith and justice towards all Nations. [*] Cultivate peace and harmony with all .- Religion and morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it?—It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and, at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a People always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence .-Who can doubt that in the course of time and things, the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be, that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a Nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature.—Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?

In the execution of such a plan nothing is more essential than that [permanent, inveterate] † antipathies against particular nations and passionate attachments for others should be excluded; and that in place of them just and amicable feelings towards all should be cultivated .-The Nation, which indulges towards another [an]; habitual hatred or [an]§ habitual fondness, is in some degree a slave. It is a slave to its animosity or to its affection, either of which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interests. - Antipathy in one Nation against another [ | | disposes each more readily to offer insult and injury, to lay hold of slight causes of umbrage, and to be haughty and intractable, when accidental or trifling occasions of dispute occur.—Hence frequent collisions, obstinate, envenomed and bloody contests .-The Nation prompted by ill-will and resentment sometimes impels to War the Government, contrary to [the best] I calculations of policy. The Government sometimes participates in the [national] propensity, and adopts through passion what reason would reject;—at other times, it makes the animosity of the Nation subservient to projects of hostility instigated by pride, ambition, and other sinister and pernicious motives.—The peace often sometimes perhaps the Liberty, of Nations has been the victim .-

So likewise a passionate attachment of one Nation for another pro duces a variety of evils.—Sympathy for the favourite nation, facilitat

† rooted begets of course a similar sentiment in that other, I its own

* and cultivate peace and harmony with all, for in public as well as in private transactions, I am persuaded that honesty will always be found to be the best policy.

ing the illusion of an imaginary common interest in cases where no real common interest exists, and infusing into one [*] the enmities of the other, betrays the former into a participation in the quarrels and wars of the latter, without adequate inducement or justification: It leads also to concessions to the favourite Nation of privileges denied to others, which is apt doubly to injure the Nation making the concessions; [†] by unnecessarily parting with what ought to have been retained, ‡ and by exciting jealousy, ill-will, and a disposition to retaliate in the parties from whom equal privileges are withheld; and it gives to ambitious, corrupted, or deluded citizens (who devote themselves to the favourite Nation) facility to betray, or sacrifice the interests of their own country without odium, sometimes even with popularity:—gilding with the appearances of a virtuous sense of obligation, a commendable deference for public opinion, or a laudable zeal for public good, the base or foolish compliances of ambition, corruption, or infatuation.—

As avenues to foreign influence in innumerable ways, such attachments are particularly alarming to the truly enlightened and independent patriot.—How many opportunities do they afford to tamper with domestic factions, to practise the arts of seduction, to mislead public opinion, to influence or awe the public councils! Such an attachment of a small or weak, towards a great and powerful nation, dooms the former to be the satellite of the latter.

Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence, [I conjure you to] believe me, [fellow citizens], § the jealousy of a free people ought to be [constantly] || awake, since history and experience prove that foreign influence is one of the most baneful foes of Republican Government.—But that jealousy to be useful must be impartial; else it becomes the instrument of the very influence to be avoided, instead of a defence against it.—Excessive partiality for one foreign nation and excessive dislike of another, cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other.—Real Patriots, who may resist the intrigues of the favourite, are liable to become suspected and odious; while its tools and dupes usurp the applause and confidence of the people, to surrender their interests.—

The great rule of conduct for us, in regard to foreign Nations is, fin

* another § my friends, † 1stly | incessantly ‡ 2dly extending our commercial relations,] to have with them as little Political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements let them be fulfilled with [*] perfect good faith.—Here let us stop.-

Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation.—Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns.-Hence therefore it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by [†] artificial [ties] tin the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics, [or] § the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships, or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course.-If we remain one People, under an efficient government, the period is not far off, when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve [upon] || to be scrupulously respected.—When [¶] belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will [not] lightly hazard the giving us provocation [**]; when we may choose peace or war, as our interest guided by [††] justice shall counsel.—

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation?—Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground ?-Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humour or caprice ?-

'Tis our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances [##] with any portion of the foreign world ;-so far, I mean, as we are now at liberty to do it-for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing infidelity to [existing] §§ engagements, ([I hold the maxim no less applicable to public than to private affairs ] | | | , that honesty is [always] the best policy).—[I repeat it therefore let those engagements] II be observed in their genuine sense.—But in my opinion it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them .--

II those must

* circumspection indeed, but with ‡ connection § in I to observe I neither of two ** to throw our weight into the opposite scale; tt our 11 intimate connections §§ pre-existing for I hold it to be as true in public as in private transactions,

Taking care always to keep ourselves, by suitable establishments, on a respectably defensive posture, we may safely trust to [temporary]* alliances for extraordinary emergencies.——

Harmony, liberal intercourse with all nations, are recommended by policy, humanity and interest.—But even our commercial policy should hold an equal and impartial hand:-neither seeking nor granting exclusive favours or preferences;—consulting the natural course of things; -diffusing and diversifying by gentle means the streams of commerce, but forcing nothing; -establishing with Powers so disposed -in order to give to trade a stable course, to define the rights of our Merchants and to enable the Government to support them-conventional rules of intercourse, the best that present circumstances and mutual opinion will permit; but temporary, and liable to be from time to time abandoned or varied, as experience and circumstances shall dictate; constantly keeping in view, that 'tis folly in one nation to look for disinterested favors [from] † another,—that it must pay with a portion of its independence for whatever it may accept under that character-that by such acceptance, it may place itself in the condition of having given equivalents for nominal favours and yet of being reproached with ingratitude for not giving more.—There can be no greater error than to expect, or calculate upon real favours from Nation to Nation.—'Tis an illusion which experience must cure, which a just pride ought to discard.

In offering to you, my Countrymen, these counsels of an old and affectionate friend, I dare not hope they will make the strong and lasting impression, I could wish,—that they will controul the usual current of the passions or prevent our Nation from running the course which has hitherto marked the destiny of Nations.—But if I may even flatter myself, that they may be productive of some partial benefit; some occasional good; that they may now and then recur to moderate the fury of party spirit, to warn against the mischiefs of foreign intrigue, to guard against the impostures of pretended patriotism, this hope will be a full recompense for the solicitude for your welfare, by which they have been dictated.—

How far in the discharge of my official duties, I have been guided by the principles which have been delineated, the public Records and ther evidences of my conduct must witness to You, and to the World. -To myself, the assurance of my own conscience is, that I have at least believed myself to be guided by them.

In relation to the still subsisting War in Europe, my Proclamation of the 22d of April 1793 is the index to my plan.—Sanctioned by your approving voice and by that of Your Representatives in both Houses of Congress, the spirit of that measure has continually governed me:—uninfluenced by any attempts to deter or divert me from it.

After deliberate examination with the aid of the best lights I could obtain, [*] I was well satisfied that our country, under all the circumstances of the case, had a right to take, and was bound in duty and interest, to take a Neutral position.—Having taken it, I determined, as far as should depend upon me, to maintain it, with moderation, perseverance and firmness.—

[The considerations which respect the right to hold this conduct, [it is not necessary] † on this occasion [to detail.] I will only observe, that according to my understanding of the matter, that right, so far from being denied by any of the Belligerent Powers, has been virtually admitted by all.—] ‡

The duty of holding a neutral conduct may be inferred, without anything more, from the obligation which justice and humanity impose on every Nation, in cases in which it is free to act, to maintain inviolate the relations of Peace and Amity towards other Nations.—

(* and from men disagreeing in their impressions of the origin, progress, and nature of that war,)

† some of them of a delicate nature, would be improperly the subject of explanation.

‡ The considerations which respect the right to hold this conduct, some of them of a delicate nature, would be improperly the subject of explanation on this occasion. I will barely observe that according to my understanding of the matter, that right so far from being denied by any belligerent Power, has been virtually admitted by all.—

This paragraph is then erased from the word "conduct," and the following sentence interlined, "would be improperly the subject of particular discussion on this occasion. I will barely observe that to me they appear to be warranted by well-established principles of the Laws of Nations as applicable to the nature of our alliance with France in connection with the circumstances of the War, and the relative situation of the contending Parties."

A piece of paper is afterwards wafered over both, on which the paragraph as it stands in the text is written, and on the margin is the following note: "This is the first draft, and it is questionable which of the two is to be preferred."

The inducements of interest for observing that conduct, will best be referred to your own reflections and experience.—With me, a predominant motive has been to endeavour to gain time to our country to settle and mature its yet recent institutions, and to progress without interruption to that degree of strength and consistency, which is necessary to give it, humanly speaking, the command of its own fortunes.

Though in reviewing the incidents of my Administration, I am unconscious of intentional error—I am nevertheless too sensible of my defects not to think it probable that I [may] have committed many errors.—[Whatever they may be I]* fervently beseech the Almighty to avert or mitigate [the evils to which they may tend.]†—I shall also carry with me the hope that my country will never cease to view them with indulgence; and that after forty-five years of my life dedicated to its service, with an upright zeal, the faults of incompetent abilities will be consigned to oblivion, as myself must soon be to the mansions of rest. [‡]

Relying on its kindness in this as in other things, and actuated by that fervent love towards it, which is so natural to a man, who views in it the native soil of himself and his progenitors for [several] § generations;—I anticipate with pleasing expectation that retreat, in which I promise myself to realize, without alloy, the sweet enjoyment of partaking, in the midst of my fellow citizens, the benign influence of good Laws under a free Government,—the ever favourite object of ‡ May I without the charge of ostentation add, that neither ambition nor interest has been the impelling cause of my actions—that I have never designedly misused any power confided to me nor hesitated to use one, where I thought it could redound to your benefit? May I without the appearance of affectation say, that the fortune with which I came into office is not bettered otherwise than by the improvement in the value of property which the quick progress and uncommon prosperity of our country have produced? May I still further add without breach of delicacy, that I shall retire without cause for a blush, with no sentiments alien to the force of those vows for the happiness of his country so natural to a citizen who sees in it the native soil of his progenitors and himself for four generations?

On the margin opposite this paragraph is the following note: "This para graph may have the appearance of self-distrust and mere vanity."

§ four my heart, and the happy reward, as I trust, of our mutual cares, labours and dangers.*

Go. WASHINGTON.

United States, 19th September, 1796.

*The paragraph beginning with the words, "May I without the charge of ostentation add," having been struck out, the following note is written on the margin of that which is inserted in its place in the text:—"Continuation of the paragraph preceding the last ending with the word 'rest."

HI

PROCEEDINGS OF CONGRESS IN CONSEQUENCE OF THE DEATH OF WASHINGTON.

SPEECH OF JOHN MARSHALL IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, AND RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE HOUSE, DECEMBER 19TH, 1799,*

MR. SPEAKER,

The melancholy event, which was yesterday announced with doubt, has been rendered but too certain. Our Washington is no more! The hero, the patriot, and the sage of America; the man on whom in times of danger every eye was turned, and all hopes were placed, lives now only in his own great actions, and in the hearts of an affectionate and afflicted people.

If, Sir, it had even not been usual openly to testify respect for the memory of those whom Heaven has selected as its instruments for dispensing good to man, yet such has been the uncommon worth, and such the extraordinary incidents, which have marked the life of him whose loss we all deplore, that the whole American nation, impelled by the same feelings, would call with one voice for a public manifestation of that sorrow, which is so deep and so universal.

More than any other individual, and as much as to one individual was possible, has he contributed to found this our wide-spreading empire, and to give to the western world independence and freedom.

Having effected the great object for which he was placed at the head of our armies, we have seen him convert the sword into the ploughshare, and sink the soldier in the citizen.

* The intelligence of the death of Washington had been received the preceding day, and the House immediately adjourned. The next morning Mr. Marshall addressed this speech to the House.

When the debility of our federal system had become manifest, and the bonds which connected this vast continent were dissolving, we have seen him the chief of those patriots who formed for us a constitution, which, by preserving the union, will, I trust, substantiate and perpetuate those blessings which our Revolution had promised to bestow.

In obedience to the general voice of his country, calling him to preside over a great people, we have seen him once more quit the retirement he loved, and, in a season more stormy and tempestuous than war itself, with calm and wise determination pursue the true interests of the nation, and contribute, more than any other could contribute, to the establishment of that system of policy, which will, I trust, yet preserve our peace, our honor, and our independence.

Having been twice unanimously chosen the chief magistrate of a free people, we have seen him, at a time when his re-election with universal suffrage could not be doubted, afford to the world a rare instance of moderation, by withdrawing from his station to the peaceful walks of private life.

However the public confidence may change, and the public affections fluctuate with respect to others, with respect to him they have, in war and in peace, in public and in private life, been as steady as his own firm mind, and as constant as his own exalted virtues.

Let us, then, Mr. Speaker, pay the last tribute of respect and affection to our departed friend. Let the grand council of the nation display those sentiments which the nation feels. For this purpose I hold in my hand some resolutions, which I take the liberty of offering to the house.

Resolved, That this house will wait on the President, in condolence of this mournful event.

Resolved, That the Speaker's chair be shrouded with black, and that the members and officers of the house wear black during the session.

Resolved, That a committee, in conjunction with one from the Senate, be appointed to consider on the most suitable manner of paying honor to the memory of the man, first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his fellow-citizens.

LETTER FROM THE SENATE TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

23 December, 1799.

Sir,

The Senate of the United States respectfully take leave to express to you their deep regret for the loss their country sustains in the death of General George Washington.

This event, so distressing to all our fellow-citizens, must be peculiarly heavy to you, who have long been associated with him in deeds of patriotism. Permit us, Sir, to mingle our tears with yours. On this occasion it is manly to weep. To lose such a man, at such a crisis, is no common calamity to the world. Our country mourns a father. The Almighty Disposer of human events has taken from us our greatest benefactor and ornament. It becomes us to submit with reverence to him "who maketh darkness his pavilion."

With patriotic pride we review the life of our Washington, and compare him with those of other countries who have been pre-eminent in fame. Ancient and modern times are diminished before him. Greatness and guilt have too often been allied; but his fame is whiter than it is brilliant. The destroyers of nations stood abashed at the majesty of his virtues. It reproved the intemperance of their ambition, and darkened the splendor of victory. The scene is closed, and we are no longer anxious lest misfortune should sully his glory; he has travelled on to the end of his journey, and carried with him an increasing weight of honor; he has deposited it safely, where misfortune cannot tarnish it, where malice cannot blast it. Favored of Heaven, he departed without exhibiting the weakness of humanity. Magnanimous in death, the darkness of the grave could not obscure his brightness.

Such was the man whom we deplore. Thanks to God, his glory is consummated. Washington yet lives on earth in his spotless example; his spirit is in Heaven.

Let his countrymen consecrate the memory of the heroic general the patriotic statesman, and the virtuous sage. Let them teach their children never to forget, that the fruits of his labors and his example are their inheritance.

THE PRESIDENT'S ANSWER.

23 December, 1799.

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE,

I receive with the most respectful and affectionate sentiments, in this impressive address, the obliging expressions of your regret for the loss our country has sustained in the death of her most esteemed, beloved, and admired citizen.

In the multitude of my thoughts and recollections on this melancholy event, you will permit me to say, that I have seen him in the days of adversity, in some of the scenes of his deepest distress and most trying perplexities. I have also attended him in his highest elevation and most prosperous felicity, with uniform admiration of his wisdom, moderation, and constancy.

Among all our original associates in that memorable league of this continent, in 1774, which first expressed the sovereign will of a free nation in America, he was the only one remaining in the general government. Although with a constitution more enfeebled than his, at an age when he thought it necessary to prepare for retirement, I feel myself alone, bereaved of my last brother, yet I derive a strong consolation from the unanimous disposition which appears in all ages and classes, to mingle their sorrows with mine, on this common calamity to the world.

The life of our Washington cannot suffer by a comparison with those of other countries who have been most celebrated and exalted by fame. The attributes and decorations of royalty could only have served to eclipse the majesty of those virtues which made him, from being a modest citizen, a more resplendent luminary. Misfortune, had he lived, could hereafter have sullied his glory only with those superficial minds, who, believing that character and actions are marked by success alone, rarely deserve to enjoy it. Malice could never blast his honor, and envy made him a singular exception to her universal rule. For himself, he had lived long enough to life and to glory; for his fellow-citizens, if their prayers could have been answered, he would have been immortal; for me, his departure is at a most unfortunate moment. Trusting, however, in the wise and righteous dominion of Providence over the passions of men and the results of their actions, as well as over their lives, nothing remains for me but humble resignation.

His example is now complete; and it will teach wisdom and virtue to magistrates, citizens, and men, not only in the present age, but in future generations, as long as our history shall be read. If a Trajan found a Pliny, a Marcus Aurelius can never want biographers, eul gists, or historians.

JOHN ADAMS.

JOINT RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY BOTH HOUSES OF CONGRESS.

December 23d. Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That a marble monument be erected by the United States at the Capitol of the city of Washington, and that the family of General Washington be requested to permit his body to be deposited under it, and that the monument be so designed as to commemorate the great events of his military and political life.

And be it further resolved, That there be a funeral procession from Congress Hall, to the German Lutheran Church, in memory of General George Washington, on Thursday the 26th instant, and that an oration be prepared at the request of Congress, to be delivered before both Houses that day; and that the President of the Senate, and Speaker of the House of Representatives, be desired to request one of the members of Congress to prepare and deliver the same.

And be it further resolved, That it be recommended to the people of the United States, to wear crape on their left arm, as mourning, for thirty days.

And be it further resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to direct a copy of these resolutions to be transmitted to Mrs. Washington, assuring her of the profound respect Congress will ever bear for her person and character, of their condolence on the late afflicting dispensation of Providence; and entreating her assent to the interment of the remains of General Washington in the manner expressed in the first resolution.

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to issue his proclamation, notifying to the people throughout the United States the recommendation contained in the third resolution.

December 30th. Resolved, That it be recommended to the people of the United States to assemble, on the twenty-second day of February next, in such numbers and manner as may be convenient, publicly to testify their grief for the death of General George Washington, by suitable eulogies, orations, and discourses, or by public prayers.

And it is further resolved, That the President be requested to issue a ploclamation, for the purpose of carrying the foregoing resolution into effect.

IV.

WASHINGTON'S WILL.

IN THE NAME OF GOD, AMEN.

I, George Washington, of Mount Vernon, a citizen of the United States, and lately President of the same, do make, ordain, and declare this instrument, which is written with my own hand, and every page thereof subscribed with my name,* to be my last Will and Testament, revoking all others.

Imprimis.—All my debts, of which there are but few, and none of magnitude, are to be punctually and speedily paid, and the legacies, herein after bequeathed, are to be discharged as soon as circumstances will permit, and in the manner directed.

Item.—To my dearly beloved wife, Martha Washington, I give and bequeath the use, profit, and benefit of my whole estate real and personal, for the term of her natural life, except such parts thereof as are specially disposed of hereafter. My improved lot in the town of Alexandria, situated on Pitt and Cameron streets, I give to her and her heirs for ever; as I also do my household and kitchen furniture of every sort and kind, with the liquors and groceries which may be on hand at the time of my decease, to be used and disposed of as she may think proper.

Item.—Upon the decease of my wife, it is my will and desire that all the slaves whom I hold in my own right shall receive their freedom. To emancipate them during her life would, though earnestly wished by me, be attended with such insuperable difficulties, on account of their intermixture by marriage with the dower negroes, as to excite the most painful sensations, if not disagreeable consequences to the latter, while both descriptions are in the occupancy of the same proprietor; it not being in my power, under the tenure by which the dower negroes are held, to manumit them. And whereas, among those who will receive freedom according to this devise, there may be some, who, from old age, or bodily infirmities, and others, who, on account of their infancy, will be unable to support themselves, it is my will and desire, that all, who come under the first and second description, shall be comfortably clothed and fed by my heirs while they live; and that such of the latter description as have no parents living, or, if living, are unable or unwilling to provide for them, shall be bound by the court until they shall arrive at the age of twenty-five years; and, in cases where no record can be produced, whereby their ages can be ascertained, the judgment of the court, upon its own view of the subject, shall be adequate and final. The negroes thus bound, are (by their masters or mistresses) to be taught to read and write, and to be brought up to some useful occupation, agreeably to the laws of the Commonwealth of Virginia, providing for the support of orphan and other poor children. And I do hereby expressly forbid the sale or transportation out of the said Commonwealth, of any slave I may die possessed of, under any pretence whatsoever. And I do, moreover. most pointedly and most solemnly enjoin it upon my executors hereafter named, or the survivors of them, to see that this clause respecting slaves, and every part thereof, be religiously fulfilled at the epoch at which it is directed to take place, without evasion, neglect, or delay, after the crops which may then be on the ground are harvested, particularly as it respects the aged and infirm; seeing that a regular and permanent fund be established for their support, as long as there are subjects requiring it; not trusting to the uncertain provision to be made by individuals. And to my mulatto man, William, calling himself William Lee, I give immediate freedom, or, if he should prefer it, (on account of the accidents which have befallen him, and which have rendered him incapable of walking, or of any active employment,) to remain in the situation he now is, it shall be optional in him to do so; in either case, however, I allow him an annuity of thirty dollars, during his natural life, which shall be independent of the victuals and clothes he has been accustomed to receive, if he chooses the last alter native; but in full with his freedom, if he prefers the first; and this I give him, as a testimony of my sense of his attachment to me, and for his faithful services during the revolutionary war.

* In the original manuscript, George Washington's name was written at the bottom of every page.

Item.—To the trustees (governors, or by whatsoever other name they may be designated) of the Academy in the town of Alexandria, I give and bequeath, in trust, four thousand dollars, or in other words, twenty of the shares which I hold in the Bank of Alexandria, towards the support of a free school, established at and annexed to, the said Academy, for the purpose of educating such orphan children, or the children of such other poor and indigent persons, who are unable to accomplish it with their own means, and who, in the judgment of the trustees of the said seminary, are best entitled to the benefit of this The aforesaid twenty shares I give and bequeath in perpetuity; the dividends only of which are to be drawn for and applied, by the said trustees for the time being, for the uses above mentioned; the stock to remain entire and untouched, unless indications of failure of the said bank should be so apparent, or a discontinuance thereof, should render a removal of this fund necessary. In either of these cases, the amount of the stock here devised is to be vested in some other bank or public institution, whereby the interest may with regularity and certainty be drawn and applied as above. And to prevent misconception, my meaning is, and is hereby declared to be, that these twenty shares are in lieu of, and not in addition to, the thousand pounds given by a missive letter some years ago, in consequence whereof an annuity of fifty pounds has since been paid towards the support of this institution.

Item.—Whereas by a law of the Commonwealth of Virginia, enacted in the year 1785, the Legislature thereof was pleased, as an evidence of its approbation of the services I had rendered the public during the Revolution, and partly, I believe, in consideration of my having suggested the vast advantages which the community would derive from the extension of its inland navigation under legislative patronage, to present me with one hundred shares, of one hundred dollars each, in the incorporated Company, established for the purpose of extending the navigation of James River from the tide water to the mountains; and also with fifty shares, of £100 sterling each, in the corporation of another company, likewise established for the similar purpose of opening the navigation of the River Potomac from the tide water to Fort Cumberland; the acceptance of which, although the offer was highly honorable and grateful to my feelings, was refused, as inconsistent with a principle which I had adopted and had never departed from, viz., not to receive pecuniary compensation for any services I could render my country in its arduous struggle with Great Britain for its rights, and because I had evaded similar propositions from other States in the Union; adding to this refusal, however, an intimation, that, if it should be the pleasure of the legislature to permit me to appropriate the said shares to public uses, I would receive them on those terms with due sensibility; and this it having consented to, in flattering terms, as will appear by a subsequent law, and sundry resolutions, in the most ample and honorable manner;—I proceed after this recital, for the more correct understanding of the case, to declare; that, as it has always been a source of serious regret with me, to see the youth of theso United States sent to foreign countries for the purpose of education, often before their minds were formed, or they had imbibed any adequate ideas of the happiness of their own; contracting too frequently, not only habits of dissipation and extravagance, but principles unfriendly to republican government, and to the true and genuine liberties of mankind, which thereafter are rarely overcome; for these reasons it has been my ardent wish to see a plan devised on a liberal scale, which would have a tendency to spread systematic ideas through all parts of this rising empire, thereby to do away local attachments and State prejudices, as far as the nature of things would, or indeed ought to admit, from our national councils. Looking anxiously forward to the accomplishment of so desirable an object as this is (in my estimation), my mind has not been able to contemplate any plan more likely to effect the measure, than the establishment of a University in a central part of the United States, to which the youths of fortune and talents from all parts thereof may be sent for the completion of their education, in all the branches of polite literature, in arts and sciences, in acquiring knowledge in the principles of politics and good government, and, as a matter of infinite importance in my judgment, by associating with each other and forming friendships in juvenile years, be enabled to free themselves in a proper degree from those local prejudices and habitual jealousies which have just been mentioned, and which, when carried to excess, are never-failing sources of disquietude to the public mind, and pregnant of mischievous consequences to this country. Under these impressions, so fully dilated, Item.—I give and bequeath, in perpetuity, the fifty shares which I nold in the Potomac company, (under the aforesaid acts of the Legislature of Virginia,) towards the endowment of a University, to be established within the limits of the District of Columbia, under tho auspices of the general government, if that government should incline to extend a fostering hand towards it; and, until such seminary is established, and the funds arising on these shares shall be required for its support, my further will and desire is, that the profit accruing therefrom shall, whenever the dividends are made, be laid out in purchasing stock in the bank of Columbia, or some other bank, at the discretion of my executors, or by the Treasurer of the United States for the time being under the direction of Congress, provided that honorable body should patronize the measure; and the dividends proceeding from the purchase of such stock are to be vested in more stock, and so on, until a sum adequate to the accomplishment of the object is obtained; of which I have not the smallest doubt, before many years pass away, even if no aid or encouragement is given by the legislative authority, or from any other source.

Item.—The hundred shares which I hold in the James River Company, I have given and now confirm in perpetuity, to and for the use and benefit of Liberty Hall Academy, in the County of Rockbridge in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

Item.—I release, exonerate, and discharge the estate of my deceased brother, Samuel Washington, from the payment of the money which is due to me for the land I sold to Philip Pendleton, (lying in the county of Berkeley,) who assigned the same to him, the said Samuel, who by agreement was to pay me therefor. And whereas, by some contract (the purport of which was never communicated to me) between the said Samuel and his son, Thornton Washington, the latter became possessed of the aforesaid land, without any conveyance having passed from me, either to the said Pendleton, the said Samuel, or the said Thornton, and without any consideration having been made, by which neglect neither the legal nor equitable title has been alienated; it rests therefore with me to declare my intentions concerning the premises; and these are, to give and bequeath the said land to whomsoever the said Thornton Washington (who is also dead) devised the same, or to his heirs for ever, if he died intestate; exonerating the estate of the said Thornton, equally with that of the said Samuel, from payment of the purchase money, which, with interest, agreeably to the original contract with the said Pendleton, would amount to more than a thousand pounds. And whereas two other sons of my said deceased brother Samuel, namely, George Steptoe Washington and Lawrence Augustine Washington, were, by the decease of those to whose care they were committed, brought under my protection, and, in consequence, have occasioned advances on my part for their education at college and other schools, for their board, clothing, and other incidental expenses, to the amount of near five thousand dollars, over and above the sums furnished by their estate, which sum it may be inconvenient for them or their father's estate to refund; I do for these reasons acquit them and the said estate from the payment thereof, my intention being, that all accounts between them and me, and their father's estate and me, shall stand balanced.

Item .- The balance due to me from the estate of Bartholomew Dandridge, deceased, (my wife's brother.) and which amounted on the first day of October, 1795, to four hundred and twenty-five pounds, (as will appear by an account rendered by his deceased son, John Dandridge, who was the acting executor of his father's will.) I release and acquit from the payment thereof. And the negroes, then thirtythree in number, formerly belonging to the said estate, who were taken in execution, sold, and purchased in on my account, in the year (blank), and ever since have remained in the possession and to the use of Mary, widow of the said Bartholomew Dandridge, with their increase, it is my will and desire shall continue and be in her possession, without paying hire, or making compensation for the same for the time past, or to come, during her natural life; at the expiration of which, I direct that all of them who are forty years old and upwards shall receive their freedom; and all under that age, and above sixteen, shall serve seven years and no longer; and all under sixteen years shall serve until they are twenty-five years of age, and then be free. And, to avoid disputes respecting the ages of any of these negroes, they are to be taken into the court of the county in which they reside, and the judgment thereof, in this relation, shall be final and record thereof made, which may be adduced as evidence at any time thereafter if disputes should arise concerning the same. And I further direct, that the heirs of the said Bartholomew Dandridge shall equally share the benefits arising from the services of the said negroes according to the tenor of this devise, upon the decease of their mother.

Item.—If Charles Carter, who intermarried with my niece Betty Lewis, is not sufficiently secured in the title to the lots he had of me in the town of Fredericksburg, it is my will and desire, that my executors shall make such conveyances of them as the law requires to render it perfect.

Item.—To my nephew, William Augustine Washington, and his heirs, (if he should conceive them to be objects worth prosecuting,) a lot in the town of Manchester, (opposite to Richmond,) No. 265, drawn on my sole account, and also the tenth of one or two hundred acre lots, and two or three half-acre lots, in the city and vicinity of Richmond, drawn in partnership with nine others, all in the lottery of the deceased William Byrd, are given; as is also a lot which I purchased of John Hood, conveyed by William Willie and Samuel Gordon, trustees of the said John Hood, numbered 139, in the town of Edinburgh, in the County of Prince George, State of Virginia.

Item.—To my nephew, Bushrod Washington,* I give and bequeath all the papers in my possession which relate to my civil and military administration of the affairs of this country. I leave to him also such of my private papers as are worth preserving; and at the decease of my wife, and before, if she is not inclined to retain them, I give and bequeath my library of books and pamphlets of every kind.

Item.—Having sold lands which I possessed in the State of Pennsylvania and part of a tract held in equal right with George Clinton, late governor of New York, in the State of New York, my share of land and interest in the Great Dismal Swamp, and a tract of land which I owned in the County of Gloucester,—withholding the legal titles thereto, until the consideration money should be paid-and having moreover leased and conditionally sold (as will appear by the tenor of the said leases) all my lands upon the Great Kenhawa, and a tract upon Difficult Run, in the County of Loudoun, it is my will and direction, that whensoever the contracts are fully and respectively complied with, according to the spirit, true intent, and meaning thereof, on the part of the purchasers, their heirs or assigns, that then, and in that case, conveyances are to be made, agreeably to the terms of the said contracts, and the money arising therefrom, when paid, to be vested in bank stock; the dividends whereof, as of that also which is already vested therein, are to inure to my said wife during her life; but the stock itself is to remain and be subject to the general distribution hereafter directed.

* As General Washington never had any children, he gave the larger part of his property to his nephews and nieces, and the children of Mrs. Washington's son by her first marriage. The principal heir was Bushrod Washington, son of his brother, John Augustine Washington.

Item .- To the Earl of Buchan I recommit the "Box made of the Oak that sheltered the great Sir William Wallace, after the battle of Falkirk," presented to me by his Lordship, in terms too flattering for me to repeat, with a request "to pass it, on the event of my decease, to the man in my country, who should appear to merit it best, upon the same conditions that have induced him to send it to me." Whether easy or not to select the man, who might comport with his Lordship's opinion in this respect, is not for me to say; but, conceiving that no disposition of this valuable curiosity can be more eligible than the recommitment of it to his own cabinet, agreeably to the original design of the Goldsmiths' Company of Edinburgh, who presented it to him, and, at his request, consented that it should be transferred to me, I do give and bequeath the same to his Lordship; and, in case of his decease, to his heir, with my grateful thanks for the distinguished honor of presenting it to me, and more especially for the favorable sentiments with which he accompanied it.

Item .- To my brother, Charles Washington, I give and bequeath the gold-headed cane left me by Dr. Franklin in his will. I add nothing to it because of the ample provision I have made for his issue. To the acquaintances and friends of my juvenile years, Lawrence Washington and Robert Washington, of Chotanek, I give my other two goldheaded canes, having my arms engraved on them; and to each, as they will be useful where they live, I leave one of the spyglasses, which constituted part of my equipage during the late war. To my compatriot in arms and old and intimate friend, Dr. Craik, I give my bureau (or, as the cabinet-makers call it, tambour secretary) and the circular chair, an appendage of my study. To Dr. David Stewart I give my large shaving and dressing table, and my telescope. To the Reverend, now Bryan, Lord Fairfax, I give a Bible, in three large folio volumes, with notes, presented to me by the Right Reverend Thomas Wilson, Bishop of Sodor and Man. To General de Lafayette I give a pair of finely-wrought steel pistols, taken from the enemy in the revolutionary war. To my sisters-in-law, Hannah Washington and Mildred Washington, to my friends, Eleanor Stuart, Hannah Washington, of Fairfield, and Elizabeth Washington, of Hayfield, I give each a mourning ring, of the value of one hundred dollars. These bequests are not made for the intrinsic value of them, but as mementos of my esteem and regard. To Tobias Lear I give the use of the farm, which he now holds in virtue of a lease from me to him and his deceased wife, (for and during their natural lives.) free from rent during his life,; at the expiration of which, it is to be disposed of as is hereinafter directed. To Sally B. Haynie, (a distant relation of mine,) I give and bequeath three hundred dollars. To Sarah Green, daughter of the deceased Thomas Bishop, and to Ann Walker, daughter of John Alton, also deceased, I give each one hundred dollars, in consideration of the attachment of their fathers to me; each of whom having lived nearly forty years in my family. To each of my nephews, William Augustine Washington, George Lewis, George Steptoe Washington, Bushrod Washington, and Samuel Washington, I give one of the swords or conteaux, of which I may die possessed; and they are to choose in the order they are named. These swords are accompanied with an injunction not to unsheath them for the purpose of shedding blood, except it be for self-defence or in defence of their country and its rights; and in the latter case, to keep them unsheathed, and prefer falling with them in their hands to the relinquishment thereof.

And now, having gone through these specific devices, with explanations for the more correct understanding of the meaning and design of them, I proceed to the distribution of the more important part of my estate, in manner following;

FIRST.—To my nephew, Bushrod Washington, and his heirs, (partly in consideration of an intimation to his deceased father, while we were bachelors, and he had kindly undertaken to superintend my estate during my military services in the former war between Great Britain and France, that, if I should fall therein, Mount Vernon, then less extensive in domain than at present, should become his property,) I give and bequeath all that part thereof, which is comprehended within the following limits, viz. Beginning at the ford of Dogue Run, near my Mill, and extending along the road, and bounded thereby, as it now goes, and ever has gone, since my recollection of it, to the ford of Little Hunting Creek, at the Gum Spring, until it comes to a knoll opposite to an old road, which formerly passed through the lower field of Muddy-Hole Farm; at which, on the north side of the said road, are three red or Spanish oaks, marked as a corner, and a stone placed; thence by a line of trees, to be marked rectangular, to the back line or outer boundary of the tract between Thompson Mason and myself; thence with that line easterly (now double ditching, with a post-andrail fence thereon) to the run of Little Hunting Creek; thence with that run, which is the boundary between the lands of the late HumphreyPeake and me, to the tide water of the said creek; thence by that water to Potomac River; thence with the river to the mouth of Dogue Creek; and thence with the said Dogue Creek to the place of beginning at the aforesaid ford; containing upwards of four thousand acres, be the same more or less, together with the mansion-house, and all other buildings and improvements thereon.

Second.—In consideration of the consanguinity between them and my wife, being as nearly related to her as to myself, as on account of the affection I had for, and the obligation I was under to, their father when living, who from his youth had attached himself to my person, and followed my fortunes through the vicissitudes of the late Revolution, afterwards devoting his time to the superintendence of my private concerns for many years, whilst my public employments rendered it impracticable for me to do it myself, thereby affording me essential services, and always performing them in a manner the most filial and respectful; for these reasons, I say, I give and bequeath to George Fuyette Washington and Lawrence Augustine Washington, and their heirs, my estate east of Little Hunting Creek, lying on the River Potomac, including the farm of three hundred and sixty acres, leased to Tobias Lear, as noticed before, and containing in the whole, by deed, two thousand and twenty-seven acres, be it more or less; which said estate it is my will and desire should be equitably and advantageously divided between them, according to quantity, quality, and other circumstances, when the youngest shall have arrived at the age of twenty-one years, by three judicious and disinterested men; one to be chosen by each of the brothers, and the third by these two. In the mean time, if the termination of my wife's interest therein should have ceased, the profits arising therefrom are to be applied for their joint uses and benefit.

Third.—And whereas it has always been my intention, since my expectation of having issue has ceased, to consider the grandchildren of my wife in the same light as I do my own relations, and to act a friendly part by them; more especially by the two whom we have raised from their earliest infancy, namely, Eleanor Parke Custis and George Washington Parke Custis; and whereas the former of these hath lately intermarried with Lawrence Lewis, a son of my deceased sister, Betty Lewis, by which the inducement to provide for them both has been increased; wherefore, I give and bequeath to the said Lawrence Lewis, and Eleanor Parke Lewis, his wife, and their heirs, the residue of my Mount Vernon estate, not already devised to my nephew, Bushrod Washington, comprehended within the following description, viz. All the land north of the road leading from the ford of Dogue Run to the Gum Spring as described in the devise of the other part of the tract to Bushrod Washington, until it comes to the stone and three red or Spanish oaks on the knoll; thence with the rectangular line to the back line (between Mr. Mason and me); thence with that line westerly along the new double ditch to Dogue Run, by the tumbling dam of my Mill; thence with the said run to the ford afore-To which I add all the land I possess west of the said Dogue Run and Dogue Creek, bounded easterly and southerly thereby; together with the mill, distillery, and all other houses and improvements on the premises, making together about two thousand acres, be it more or less.

FOURTH.—Actuated by the principle already mentioned, I give and bequeath to George Washington Parke Custis, the grandson of my wife, and my ward, and to his heirs, the tract I hold on Four Mile Run, in the vicinity of Alexandria, containing one thousand two hundred acres, more or less, and my entire square, No. 21, in the city of Washington.

FIFTH.—All the rest and residue of my estate real and personal, not disposed of in manner aforesaid, in whatsoever consisting, wheresoever lying, and whensoever found, (a schedule of which, as far as is recollected, with a reasonable estimate of its value, is hereunto annexed,) I desire may be sold by my executors at such times, in such manner, and on such credits, (if an equal, valid, and satisfactory distribution of the specific property cannot be made without.) as in their iudement shall be most conducive to the interests of the parties concerned; and the moneys arising therefrom to be divided into twentythree equal parts, and applied as follows, viz. To William Augustino Washington, Elizabeth Spotswood, Jane Thornton, and the heirs of Ann Ashton, sons and daughters of my deceased brother, Augustine Washington, I give and bequeath four parts; that is, one part to each of them. To Fielding Lewis, George Lewis, Robert Lewis, Howell Lewis, and Betty Carter, sons and daughters of my deceased sister Betty Lewis, I give and bequeath five other parts; one to each of them. To George Steptoe Washington, Lawrence Augustine Washington, Harriot Parks, and the heirs of Thornton Washington, sons and daughters of my deceased brother, Samuel Washington, I give and bequeath other four parts; one to each of them. To Corbin Washington, and the heirs of Jane Washington, son and daughter of my deceased brother, John Augustine Washington, I give and bequeath two parts; one to each of them. To Samuel Washington, Frances Ball, and Mildred Hammond, son and daughters of my brother Charles Washington, I give and bequeath three parts; one part to each of them. And to George Fayette Washington, Charles Augustine Wash ington, and Maria Washington, sons and daughter of my deceased nephew, George Augustine Washington, I give one other part; that is, to each a third of that part. To Elizabeth Parke Law, Martha Parke Peter, and Eleanor Parke Lewis, I give and bequeath three other parts; that is, a part to each of them. And to my nephews, Bushrod Washington and Laurence Lewis, and to my ward, the grandson of my wife, I give and bequeath one other part; that is a third thereof to each of them. And, if it should so happen that any of the persons whose names are here enumerated (unknown to me) should now be dead, or should die before me, that in either of these cases, the heir of such deceased person shall, notwithstanding, derive all the benefits of the bequest in the same manner as if he or she was actually living at the time. And, by way of advice, I recommend it to my executors not to be precipitate in disposing of the landed property, (herein directed to be sold,) if from temporary causes the sale thereof should be dull; experience having fully evinced, that the price of land, especially above the falls of the river and on the western waters, has been progressively rising, and cannot be long checked in its increasing value. And I particularly recommend it to such of the legatees (under this clause of my will), as can make it convenient, to take each a share of my stock in the Potomac Company in preference to the amount of what it might sell for; being thoroughly convinced myself that no uses to which the money can be applied, will be so productive as the tolls arising from this navigation when in full operation, (and thus, from the nature of things, it must be, ere long,) and more especially if that of the Shenandoah is added thereto.

The family vault at Mount Vernon requiring repairs, and being improperly situated besides, I desire that a new one of brick, and upon a larger scale, may be built at the foot of what is commonly called the Vineyard Euclosure, on the ground which is marked out; in which my remains, with those of my deceased relations (now in the old vault), and such others of my family as may choose to be entombed there, may be deposited. And it is my express desire, that my corpse may be interred in a private manner, without parade or funeral oration.

LASTLY, I constitute and appoint my dearly beloved wife, Martha Washington, my nephews, William Augustine Washington, Bushrod Washington, George Steptoe Washington, Samuel Washington, and Lawrence Lewis, and my ward, George Washington Parke Custis (when he shall have arrived at the age of twenty-one years), executrix and executors of this my will and testament; in the construction of which it will be readily perceived, that no professional character has been consulted, or has had any agency in the draft; and that, although it has occupied many of my leisure hours to digest, and to throw it into its present form, it may, notwithstanding, appear crude and incorrect; but, having endeavored to be plain and explicit in all the devises, even at the expense of prolixity, perhaps of tautology, I hope and trust that no disputes will arise concerning them. But if, contrary to expectation, the case should be otherwise, from the want of legal expressions, or the usual technical terms, or because too much or too little has been said on any of the devises to be consonant with law, my will and direction expressly is, that all disputes (if unhappily any should arise) shall be decided by three impartial and intelligent men, known for their probity and good understanding, two to be chosen by the disputants, each having the choice of one, and the third by those two; which three men, thus chosen, shall, unfettered by law or legal constructions, declare their sense of the testator's intention; and such decision is, to all intents and purposes, to be as binding on the parties as if it had been given in the Supreme Court of the United States.

In witness of all and of each of the things herein contained, I have set my hand and seal, this ninth day of July, in the year one thousand seven hundred and ninety,* and of the Independence of the United States the twenty-fourth.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

anoman winding and

* It appears that the testator omitted the word "nine."

INDEX

INDEX.

A.	concerning sectional jealousies, ii. 271 on committee to confer with Lord ABERCROMBIE, General—	Howe, ii. 325 supersedes General Shirley, i. 20 commander-in-chief, i. 2 encamped at Lake George, i. 2s	6 distrusts the French Revolution, v. 90 proceeds against Ticonderoga, 1. 2.	6 on the office of Vice President, v. 90 falls back, i. 2-	8 his "Discourses on Davila," v. 90 attacks the French works, i. 2-	8 on the British Constitution, v. 109 repulsed by Montcalm, i. 2-superseded by Major General Am-	of Genet, v. 180
herst, i. 20
ABERCROMBIE, Lieutenant Colonel,	clected President, v. 252 attacks American batteries, iv. 34 ACKLAND, Lady Harriet-
with Burgoyne's army, iii. 20	convenes Congress, v. 266 i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i during the action, iii. 21 her distress, iii. 24 seeks her husband, iii. 24 kind treatment of, iii. 24 subsequent history, iii. 25
Ackland, Major—	Adams, Mrs.— commands the Grenadiers, iii. 29 wounded and taken prisoner, iii. 28	7 of Washington, i. 453 subsequent history (note), iii. 25	7 description of General Lee, ii. 2
Adams, John-	account of party at General Mifflin's, ii. 115 birth of American Independence, i. 30	2 to her husband on the cannonade, ii. 172 at town meetings, i. 36	1 Adams, Samuel—on the General Congress, i. 36 opposes petition to the king, i. 40 on the choice of commander-in-chief, i. 41	0 to his wife about Mr. Duché, i. 866 proposes Washington as command-	apprised of the movement of troops, i. 391 er-in-chief, i. 41	2 irresolute as to commander-in-chief, i. 411 on the conduct of Washington, i. 41 opposes Lee, and urges Ward as	on the united command of Schuyler second in command, i. 41	and Gates, 1i. 264 opposed to Lee and Gates, i. 41	11. 201 on the act of Massachusetts General Court, ii. 7	ADAMS, Sir Thomas, i. 298 to General Thomas on Schuyler's minister from France, v. 214 picture of festivities at head-quar-	complaints against the government ters, ii. 11
on the defence of New York, ii. 13 member of the Board of War and	in the expedition against Danbury, iii. 47 Ordnance, ii. 20
on the Declaration of Independence, ii. 24 its great importance, ii. 24	2 Allen, the fighting parson, iii. 165

			,
ALLEN, Ethan-		retreat from before Quebec,	11	201
at the head of the Green Mountain		British description of,	ii.	872
Boys,	i. 403	at New Brunswick,		414
	1. 403	contrasted with the British,		10
described,	i. 403	marches through Philadelphis,	iii.	138 commands expedition to Ticonde-	i	described by a Hessian,	iii	252
	i. 404	approach of winter,	311	305 approach of winter,
proceeds to Shoreham,	1. 404	destitution of,	iv.	- 83 arrives at Shoreham,	i. 405	pass through Philadelphia,	iv. iv.	816
			iv.	0-5
	1. 405	discontent of,
surprises Ticonderoga,	i. 405	memorial to Congress,	iv.	377 expedition against St. Johns,	i. 407		iv.	377
naturnata Wisandanana		other anonymous papers,
	i. 407	other anonymous papers,	iv.
rivalry with Arnold, l	i. 33	meeting of officers,	iv.	351
	i. 34	addressed by Washington		001
to Trew Tork Congress,		macaintiana of macaina	iv.	004 to rinnibuli,		resolutions of meeting,	1V.	99.4 designs on Canada, i	i. 34	its breaking up described,	iv.	404
	i. 36		iv.
repairs to Congress,				100
repairs to New York convention, i	i. 36	American Militia—to Trnmbull on the invasion of		fly before the British,	ii.	333
Canada, i	i. 39	cowardice of,		369
		-1111
	i. 42	signalize themselves,	iii.
joins as a volunteer, i	i. 42	gallant exploits,	iii.	7
	i. 43	American Prisoners, treatment of, i American i risoners, treatment of, i	110 10	122
	i. 54	American seamen, impressment of	, v.	166 report to Schuyler, i	i, 55	Ames, Fisher—
	i. 56	on the first Congress,	v	27
	00		٠.	407
to Montgomery on Canadian volun-		debate on Jefferson's report,	v.	187
teers,	i. 59	on Washington's farewell ad	1-
	i. 60	dress		246
decides to attack Montreal, i	i. 60	Amesbury, a British spy,	111.	77 taken prisoner, i	i. 61	Amherst, Major General-
	i. 61	to reduce Louisburg,		241
sent to England, i	i. 62	embarks,	1.	243 to General Prescott, i	i. 62	arrives at the bay of Gabarus,	i.	244 mamanu of	i. 63			244
		landing of troops,
treatment by the British,	i. 106	takes Louisburg,	1.	245 exchanged for Colonel Campbell, ii	i. 377	supersedes General Abererombie	. i.	265
	i. 877	to advance against Ticondenses a to advance against Ticonderoga a	ш.
leaves for home, ii	i. 378	Crown Point,	i.	265
ALLEN, Levi-		embarks for Ticonderoga,	í.	267
	1	repairs the works at Ticondero to Washington on the treatment		repairs the works at Theordere	184	000 of Ethan Allen, i	i. 105	and Crown Point,	1.	268 project to effect his release, i	i. 106	consequences of his delay,	i	268
	i. 266	further deler		278
	1. 200	further delay,
Alton, John, Washington's servant,	1	again in the field,	1.	280
	i. 172	arrives at Montreal.	i	280
		Amnerst, Captain, despatched	4.
Ambuseade, engagement with the		America, Captain, despatement	ιο
Boston, v	7. 171	England with news of the capta	ire
Amboy, disaffection of people, i	i. 240	of Louisburg,	i	245
		Augment Enhantes		210
American Colonies—		Anderson, Ephraim-affection for the mother country,	i. 299	plan for destroying British ships,	, ii.	279 resolve not to purchase British	i	entertained by Congress,	ii.	250
	i. 303
	1. 505	to the President of Congress on		004
American Army—	- 1	progress,	11.	251 besieging Boston, its nature,	i. 420	André, Major—
	i. 421	and the Mischianza,	411	373 and the reisemanza,	111.	400
distribution of before Boston, i	i. 5	aide-de-camp to Sir Henry Clinton	ı, 11i.	460 condition and discipline, i	i. 5	correspondence with Arnold,	iv.	97
	i. 7	sketch of his life,		99
camp described, i	i. 7	attempted interview with Arnold	, iv.	103 strict discipline, i	i. 18	goes on board the Vulture,	iv.	104
segreity of nowder	i. 23	interview with Arnold,		105 critical condition, i	i. 24	remains ashore all night,	iv.	106 difficulty of filling up.	i. 100	anxiety to escape,		107 grantly weakened	i. 129
			iv.
	i. 129	stopped by patrolling party,		108 strength in aud about New York, 1	i. 193	approaches the Neutral Ground, 1	. 11

parts with Smith,	iv. 109	rivalry with Ethan Allen,	ii.	38 stopped by Paulding.	iv. 110	opinion of Allen,	ii.	33 arrested and searched,	iv. 112	difficulties with Colonel Hinman,	ii,	37 taken to North Castle,	iv. 113	and the committee of inquiry,	ii.	37 sent to Arnold,	iv. 114	indignation,	ii,	-33 brought back,	iv. 114	sets off for Cambridge,	ii.	38 taken to Lower Salem,	iv. 115	commands the expedition as lien-to Washington,	iv. 115	tenant colonel,	ii.	53
amuses himself by sketching,	iv, 116	sets out for Canada,	ii.	54 propensity for earicature (note),	iv. 116	to Washington, on the expedition,	ii.	57 taken to the Robinson House,	iv, 128	to Washington, on his progress,	ii.
sent to West Point,	iv. 128	toils of the expedition,	ii.
conversation with Major Tall	-	obstacles to the expedition,	ii.
madge,	iv. 129	perseverance,	ii.
his fate predicted,	iv. 131	embarks on the Chaudiere,	ii.
arrives at Tappan,	iv, 133	arrives at Point Levi,	ii.	90
frank confession,	iv. 135	sudden apparition,	ii.
condemned as a spy,	iv. 135	at Point Levi,		118 concerning Sir Henry Clinton,	iv. 135	crosses to Wolfe's Cove,	ii.	119 qualities of,	iv. 137	discovered by a boat from the Liz-execution postponed,	iv. 139	ard,		119 affecting appeal to Washington,	iv. 141	on the Heights of Abraham,	ii.	120 nature of his mission,	iv. 142	obstacles before him,		120
British view of his case (note),	iv. 144	holds a council of war,		120 his execution,	iv. 145	demands a surrender,	ii.	121 burial,	iv. 146	retires to Point aux Trembles,	ii.	122 transferred to Westminster Ab-		joined by Montgomery,	ii.	129 bey,	iv. 146	leads his division against St.
sympathy in behalf of,	iv. 146	Roque,	ii.	148
ANGEL, Colonel, in the fight a		wounded,		149
Springfield,	iv. 63	assisted back to camp,	ii.	151
Annapolis before the revolution		determination and resources,		151
(note),	i. 294	gallant resolve,		151
Anspachers arrive at New York,	iii. 71	promoted to brigadier general,		198
Arbuthnot, Admiral—		keeps up the blockade,	ii.	198 arrival with troops,	iii. 478	difficulties,		198 convoys expedition to South Ca		accident,	ii.	199
olina,	iii. 483	obtains leave of absence,	ii.	199
	iv. 43	at Montreal,	ii.	212 passes Fort Moultrie,	iv. 45	affair at the Cedars,	ii.	213
sanadron scattered by a storm		council of war,		214 squadron scattered by a storm, encounters the French fleet,	iv 263	exchange of prisoners,		214
ARMSTRONG, Colonel John, con	1-	to Commissioners of Congress,		215 mands expedition against Kittar		joins Sullivan,		226
ning,	i. 221	commands flotilla at Ticonderoga,
Armstrong, Major General—	241	at Valcour Island,	ii.	386 to check the British,	iii. 180	his force,		386
at Brandywine,	iii, 187	engages the British,	ii.	357
on Washington (note),	iii. 283	escapes the enemy,		388 posted at the Schuylkill,	iii. 198	overtaken, brave resistance,		389 author of anonymous papers,	iv. 387	burns his vessels		389
	11.001	burns his vessels, arrives at Crown Point,		389
Armstrong, Captain— commands at Verplanck's Point,	iii 459	passed over by Congress,	iii.
	iv, 301	to Washington on his non-promopursues Colonel Coates,	iv. 301	tion,	iii.	45 fight at Quimby Creek,	v. 76	reasons for,	iii.
decoyed into an ambush,		hastens to Danbury,	iii.
Armstrong, Major, attention to Me	ii. 484	takes post at Ridgefield,	iii, cer,	11, 404	throws up a breastwork,	iii.
Arnold, Benedict—	i. 404	narrow escape,	iii.
arrives at Castleton, proposes the surprisal of Ticond	1. 404	presses the enemy hard,	ili.
proposes the surprisar of Ticona	i, 404		iii, roga and Crown Point,	i. 404	made major-general, presented with a horse by Con-		01 aspires to the command,	i. 404	gress,	iii	52 serves as volunteer, lesires to command Ticonderoga		declines the command of the Hud-		-
	i, 406	son,	iii.	6
is disappointed and protests,	i. 407	business with Congress,		68 commands armed schooner,	i. 407	commands Philadelphia,	iii.
surprises St. Johu's,	1. 404	Communes i misaccipinas		• volunteers to relieve Fort Schuyler	, iii. 160	address to the inhabitants of encourages Gansevoort,	iii. 171	America, iv. 141 reinforced,	iii. 172	proclamation to the American army, iv. 147 to Gates, determination,	iil. 172	letter from his mother (note), iv. 151 success of his stratagem,	iii. 173	subsequent fortunes, iv. 151 selects a camping ground,	iii. 209	commands British detachment, iv. 192

	iii. 212
skirmishes with the enemy,	222 014	arrives in the Chesapeake, iv. 205 impetuous attack,	iii. 214	bnecancering ravages, Iv. 206 takes post at Portsmonth, iv. 207 quarrel with Gates,	iil. 217	takes post at Portsmouth, iv. 207 indignant letter to Gates,	iii. 219	returns to New York, iv. 287 tries to goad Gates on,	iii. 234	commands expedition against New rushes to the fight,	iil. 238	London, iv. 312 desperate valor,	iii. 238	attacks New London, iv. 313 storms Burgoyne's camp,	iii. 239	ravages the town, iv. 314 wounded,	iii. 239	Arnold, Mrs., hears of Arnold's ruin, iv. 121 to take command of Philadelphia, unsettled accounts,		ordered to leave the State, iv. 150 command of Philadelphia,	iv. 10	her fortunes, iv. 150 issues proclamation,	iv. 11	Asgill, Captain Charles, iv. 365 style of living,	iv. 12	Asgill, Lady, to the Count de Ver-disputes,	iv. 12	Agenes, iv. 366
attachment to Miss Shippen,	iv. 12	Assistance, Writs of, i. 301 projects a settlement in New York		ATLEE, Colonel, retires before General charges against,	iv. 14	Grant, ii. 301
	iv. 14
sets out for Albany,		forms an ambush and falls back on address to the public,		Lord Stirling, ii. 301 appeal to Congress,	iv. 15	taken prisoner, ii. 305 exculpated by Congress,	iv. 16	Augusta ship of war burned, iii. 274
resigns his command,	iv. 16
dissatisfaction with Congress,	iv. 16 to Washington on the court-martial		B. marries Miss Shippen,	iv. 17	2.
application for a guard,	iv. 17	BARCOCK Colonal to Covernor Cooks BABCOCK, Colonel, to Governor Cooke, tried by court-martial,		on the agitations in New York, ii. 332 sentenced to be reprimanded,	iv. 19	operations of the enemy, ii. 333 reprimanded by Washington,	iv. 20	Bache's Aurora, v. 239 reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition,	iv. 20 iv. 21	Operations of the enemy, ii. 333 BACHE'S AUTOTA, v. 239 BAIED, Sir James, iii. 443 reprimanded by Washington,	iv. 20	BACHE'S Aurora, v. 239 BAIRD, Sir James, iii. 443 reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36	BACHE'S AUTOTA, v. 239 BAIRD, Sir James, iii. 443 BAKER, Remember, Ethan Allen's
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37	BACELES AUFORA, V. 239 BAIRD, Sir James, iii. 448 BAKER, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant, i. 403
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Balcakers, Lord, commands light
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of Wes	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant, i. 403 Balcarras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of Wes Point,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t	Bacine's Aurora, v. 239 Banen, Sir James, Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant, Balcarras, Lord, commands light infantry, defends the intrenchments, iii, 237
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Foint, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant, i. 403 Balcarras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hos-
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of Wes Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96	Bacile's Aufora, v. 239 Baied, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's licutenant, i. 403 Balcarras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Licutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96 v	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Heutenant, i. 403 Balearas, Lord, commands light infantry, defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbourk, Major, carries message to
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Foint, appointed to the command of West Foint, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's licutenant, i. 403 Balcarras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Licutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 347
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96 v	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Heutenant, i. 403 Balearas, Lord, commands light infantry, defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbourk, Major, carries message to
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Foint, appointed to the command of West Foint, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 97	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baher, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Balcarras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, Bard, Dr. Sant'l, attends Washington, v. 20
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96 v iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Heutenant, i. 403 Balearas, Lord, commands light infantry, defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, lile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barborra, Major, carries message to Barborra, Major, carries message to Bard, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Barras, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96 v iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant. Balearras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Bale, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 347 Bard, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Barras, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96 v iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Bellettenant, i. 403 Balcareas, Lord, commands light infantry, defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barboure, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, Baron de Viomenil, Baron de Viomenil, Saro, San'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Bareas, Count de arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 76 iv. 96 v iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baren, Sir James, iii. 443 Barer, Remember, Ethan Allen's licutenant, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Licutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 347 Bard, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Bareas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barron, Colonel, captures General
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery, attempted interview with André,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 96 v iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 99 iv. 103	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baher, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Balcarras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, v. 347 Bard, Dr. Sant'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Barras, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 113
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery, attempted interview with André, accompanies Washington,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 74 tt. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Heutenant, i. 403 Balear, Lord, commands light infantry, defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 347 Bard, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Barras, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henr-Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, nesssage to Colonel Robinson,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 26 iv. 37 iv. 74 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Bahen, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant.  Balcareas, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Balt, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Earon de Viomenil, v. 275 Bareas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, vioted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, v. 71
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery, attempted interview with André, accompanies Washington, message to Colonel Robinson, interview with André,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 74 iv. 76 iv. 96 v. 97 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Belletenant, i. 403 Balcareas, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, sir, 347 Bard, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Bareas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sul-
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henr-Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, nesssage to Colonel Robinson,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 26 iv. 37 iv. 74 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Bahen, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant.  Balcareas, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Balt, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Earon de Viomenil, v. 275 Bareas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, vioted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, v. 71
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, accompanies Washington, message to Colonel Robinson, interview with André, the bargain completed,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 74 iv. 76 iv. 96 v. 97 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105	Bacie's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant.  Baleaker, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Baleaker, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barback, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 247 Barb, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, Battis Hill, occupied by General Sul- liyan, iii. 426
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery, attempted interview with André, accompanies Washington, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 74 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 106	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baher, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Bieutenant.  Balcarbas, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, Baron de Viomenil, v. 347 Bard, Dr. San'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Barbas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Baron, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, Bastille, key of, livan, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, accompanies Washington, interview with André, accompanies Washington, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 74 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 106 iv. 106 iv. 107 iv. 107	Bacie's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant.  Baleaker, Lord, commands light infantry, defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 347 Bard, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sullivan, iii. 426 Baum, Lieutenant, commands expe-
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henr-Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of Andrés capture,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 74 t iv. 79 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 105 iv. 107 iv. 107 iv. 107	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baher, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Balcareant, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 347 Bard, Dr. San'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Barras, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, v. 71 Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sullivan, iii. 426 action at, Bau, Lieutenant, commands expedition against Bennington, iii. 161
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, accompanies Washington, nessage to Colonel Robinson, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of André's capture, flight,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 76 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 106 iv. 107 iv. 120 iv. 120	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Belletenant, i. 403 Balcareas, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, w. 347 Bardon, Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Bareas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, v. 71 Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sullivan, action at, iii. 426 Baum, Lieutenant, commands expedition against Bennington, iii. 161 sets out from camp, iii. 161
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henr-Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of André's capture, flight, cesapes to the Vulture,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 74 t iv. 74 t iv. 79 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 105 iv. 107 iv. 107 iv. 107	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant.  Balcarras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Balt, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 347 Bard, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Barras, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 126 Battlle, key of, Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sullivan, iii. 426 Baum, Lieutenant, commands expedition against Bennington, iii. 161 sets out from camp, iii. 163 slow march, iii. 163
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery, attempted interview with André, accompanies Washington, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of Andrés capture, flight, escapes to the Vulture, gives up his crew as prisoners of gives up his crew as prisoners of	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 105 iv. 106 iv. 109 iv. 120 iv. 121 iv. 123	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Bieutenant.  Baleas, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 Balla, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Barbour, Major, carries message to Barbour, Sant', attends Washington, v. 20 Barbas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Baroo, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, v. 71 Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sullivan, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426 Ball, Leitenant, commands expedition against Bennington, iii. 163 slow march, iii. 163 slow march, iii. 163 slow march, iii. 163 slow march, iii. 163 intrenches himself, iii. 163
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery, attempted interview with André, accompanies Washington, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of André's capture, flight, escapes to the Vulture, gives up his crew as prisoners of war,	iv. 20 iv. 20 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 105 iv. 105 iv. 107 iv. 107 iv. 120 iv. 123 iv. 123	Bacie's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant.  Balearras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Balearras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Balearras, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 275 Barron, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 205 Barras, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sulvant, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426 defented, iii. 161 intrenches himself, iii. 163 intrenches himself, iii. 163 intrenches himself, iii. 167
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henr-Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on sceret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery, attempted interview with André, accompanies Washington, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of Andrés capture, flight, escapes to the Vulture, gives up his crew as prisoners of war, to Washington concerning his wife,	iv. 20 iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 26 iv. 37 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 106 iv. 107 iv. 120 iv. 120 iv. 121 iv. 123 iv. 123 iv. 123	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 448 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Bieutenant.  Baleas, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 Balla, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Barbour, Major, carries message to Barbour, Sant', attends Washington, v. 20 Barbas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Baroo, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, v. 71 Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sullivan, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426 Ball, Leitenant, commands expedition against Bennington, iii. 163 slow march, iii. 163 slow march, iii. 163 slow march, iii. 163 slow march, iii. 163 intrenches himself, iii. 163
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henr-Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on sceret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery, attempted interview with André, accompanies Washington, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of Andrés capture, flight, escapes to the Vulture, gives up his crew as prisoners of war, to Washington concerning his wife,	iv. 20 iv. 20 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 105 iv. 105 iv. 107 iv. 107 iv. 120 iv. 123 iv. 123	Bacie's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's lieutenant.  Balearras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Balearras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Balearras, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 275 Barron, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 205 Barras, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 113 Bastille, key of, Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sulvant, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426 defented, iii. 161 intrenches himself, iii. 163 intrenches himself, iii. 163 intrenches himself, iii. 167
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henr-Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on sceret correspondence with André, scheme of treachery, attempted interview with André, accompanies Washington, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of Andrés capture, flight, escapes to the Vulture, gives up his crew as prisoners of war, to Washington concerning his wife,	iv. 20 iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 26 iv. 37 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 106 iv. 107 iv. 120 iv. 120 iv. 121 iv. 123 iv. 123 iv. 123	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baher, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Balcarras, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barboth, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, v. 347 Bard, Dr. Sant', attends Washington, v. 20 Barras, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 113 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 13 Bastille, key of, v. 71 Batt's Hill, occupied by General Sullivan, iii. 426 action at, Bavm, Lieutenant, commands expedition against Bennington, iii. 161 sets out from camp, iii. 163 intrenches himself, iii. 165 defeated, iii. 167 Baydor, Lieutenant Colonel, at Old
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, accompanies Washington, message to Colonel Robinson, interview with André, accompanies Washington, interview with André, accompanies Washington, hears of Andrés capture, flight, escapes to the Vulture, gives up his crew as prisoners of war, to Washington concerning his wife, certificate in behalf of André,	iv. 20 iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 26 iv. 37 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 106 iv. 107 iv. 120 iv. 120 iv. 121 iv. 123 iv. 123 iv. 123	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Balears, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barboth, Major, carries message to Barboth, Dr. Sant'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Barbas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barbon, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 118 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 118 satille, key of, Battille, key of, Battille, key of, Battill, in coupied by General Sullivan, action at, iii. 426 Bayn, Lieutenant, commands expedition against Bennington, iii. 161 sets out from camp, iii. 163 intrenelhes himself, iii. 163 intrenelhes himself, iii. 165 defeated, iii. 167 Baylor, Lieutenant Colonel, at Old Tappan, surprised by Major General Grey, iii. 437
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, actomatic with André, attempted interview with André, accompanies Washington, message to Colonel Robinson, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of Andrés capture, flight, escapes to the Vulture, gives up his crew as prisoners of war, to Washington concerning his wife, certificate in behalf of André, to Washington concerning his wife, certificate in behalf of André, to Washington, threatening retailation for André,	iv. 20 iv. 21 iv. 21 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 106 iv. 106 iv. 109 iv. 121 iv. 123 iv. 123 iv. 123 iv. 123 iv. 123 iv. 124 iv. 124 iv. 124	Bacie's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's licutenant, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Licutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barbour, Major, carries message to Baron de Viomenil, iv. 347 Bard, Dr. Sam'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Bareas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barton, Colonel, captures General Prescott, v. 71 Battille, key of, v. 71 Battille, key of, v. 71 Battilli, occupied by General Sullivan, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426 action at, iii. 426 action at, iii. 163 iii. 437 suprised by Major General Grey, iii. 437 Baylor, Licutenant Colonel, at Old Tappan, iii. 437 Bayrrised by Major General Grey, iii. 437 Bayrrise, Colonel, at Fort Washington, ii. 385
reprimanded by Washington, projects an expedition, and the French minister, applies to rejoin the army, seeks the command of West Point, appointed to the command of West Point, treason of correspondence with Sir Henry Clinton, desperate state of affairs, takes command of West Point, head-quarters at Robinson House, carries on secret correspondence with André, accompanies Washington, message to Colonel Robinson, interview with André, the bargain completed, returns to head-quarters, arrival of Washington, hears of Andrés capture, flight, escapes to the Vulture, gives up his crew as prisoners of war, to Washington encerning his wife, certificate in behalf of André, to Washington encerning his wife, certificate in behalf of André, to Washington concerning his wife, certificate in behalf of André, to Washington, threatening r-staliation for André.	iv. 20 iv. 20 iv. 36 iv. 37 iv. 37 iv. 76 iv. 96 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 97 iv. 98 iv. 98 iv. 103 iv. 103 iv. 104 iv. 105 iv. 107 iv. 120 iv. 120 iv. 121 iv. 123 iv. 123 iv. 123	Bache's Aufora, v. 239 Baker, Sir James, iii. 443 Baker, Remember, Ethan Allen's Balears, Lord, commands light infantry, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 237 defends the intrenchments, iii. 239 Ball, Lieutenant Colonel, takes hostile message to Gates, iii. 34 Barboth, Major, carries message to Barboth, Dr. Sant'l, attends Washington, v. 20 Barbas, Count de, arrives at Boston, iv. 275 address to Mr. Monroe, v. 265 Barren Hill, Lafayette stationed on, iii. 375 Barbon, Colonel, captures General Prescott, iii. 118 voted a sword and promoted, iii. 118 satille, key of, Battille, key of, Battille, key of, Battill, in coupied by General Sullivan, action at, iii. 426 Bayn, Lieutenant, commands expedition against Bennington, iii. 161 sets out from camp, iii. 163 intrenelhes himself, iii. 163 intrenelhes himself, iii. 165 defeated, iii. 167 Baylor, Lieutenant Colonel, at Old Tappan, surprised by Major General Grey, iii. 437

	315
	. 315
town meeting against the right of 315
refuses to quarter the troops, i.	816 massacre, 1.	325
arrival of tea,	347
	347
	347
	. 375
ganaral laggia magammandad at	353
	351
Port Bill carried into effect	851
	853
	361
	361
	418
	418
	. 6
in a state of siege, ii.	22
	75
preparations in the harbor, ii.	133
	166
	192
British prepare to evacuate, ii.	179
	180
	181
occupied by the Americans, ii.	183 184
	471
	411
	171
	328
Boston Port Bill	347
	347
	•
ginia. i.	321
his manners, i.	321
his promptness, i.	321 321 his promptness, i. his style and equipage, i.	$\begin{array}{c} 321 \\ 322 \end{array}$ his promptness, i. his style and equipage, opening of the session, i.	$\begin{array}{c} 321 \\ 322 \\ 322 \end{array}$
his promptness, i. his style and equipage, i. opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, i.	321 322 322 323
his promptness, i. his style and equipage, i. opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, eoneiliatory conduct, i.	321 322 322 323 324
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, i. conciliatory conduct, his death, i.	321 322 322 323 324 329 his promptness, his style and equipage, topening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, eoneiliatory conduct, his death, bettle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii.	321 322 322 323 324 329 5
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, his death, bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, ii. alarm post, iii.	$\begin{array}{c} 321 \\ 322 \\ 322 \\ 323 \\ 324 \\ 329 \\ 5 \\ 445 \end{array}$
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, i. conciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. alarm post, Boudnor, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii.	$\begin{array}{c} 321 \\ 322 \\ 322 \\ 323 \\ 324 \\ 329 \\ 5 \\ 445 \end{array}$
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, he conciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Boudney, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. Boudney, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. Boudney, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii.	321 322 322 323 324 329 5 445 304
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, his death, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. alarm post, lalarm post, BOUDINOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, BUGAINVILLE, DE, detached to watch Wolfe's movements,	321 322 322 323 324 329 5 445 304 273
his promptness, his style and equipage, i, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, i. conciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. alarm post, BOUDNOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. BOUDNOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, watch Wolfe's movements, arrives too late, i.	321 322 322 323 324 329 5 445 304 273 277
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, he conciliatory conduct, his death, bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. alarm post, lading post, BOUDINOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, BUGGAINVILLE, DE, detached to watch Wolfe's movements, arrives too late, retires, i.	321 322 322 323 324 329 5 445 304 273
his promptness, his style and equipage, i, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, i. conciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Boudnor, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. Boudainville, De, detached to watch Wolfe's movements, arrives too late, retires, Bouquet, Colonel, stationed at Rays-	321 322 323 324 329 5 445 304 273 277 277
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, he conciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Boudanyor, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, Bugganyulle, De, detached to watch Wolfe's movements, retires, Bouquer, Colonel, stationed at Raystown,	321 322 322 323 324 329 5 445 304 273 277
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, heoneiliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Boudnor, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. Boudnor, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, watch Wolfe's movements, arrives too late, retires, Bouquer, Colonel, stationed at Raystown, town, tattaches an officer and men to In-	321 322 323 324 329 5 445 304 273 277 277
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, he conciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, lialarm post, lalarm post, BOUDINOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, BUGDINAVILLE, DE, detached to watch Wolfe's movements, arrives too late, retires, BOUQUET, Colonel, stationed at Raystown, attaches an officer and men to Indian scouting parties, halt at Loyal Hannan, i.	321 322 323 324 329 5 445 304 277 277 251 255 259
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, conciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. BOUDINOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. BOUGUNOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. BOUGUNOT, Colonel, stationed at retires, BOUGUET, Colonel, stationed at Raystown, attaches an officer and men to Indian scouting parties, halt at Loyal Hannan, sends ont a reconnoitring party, i.	321 322 322 323 324 329 5 445 304 273 277 277 251
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, econciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii, laarm post, liboudness, to Pres. Wharton, liboudness, to Pres. Wharton, liboudness, to Pres. Wharton, liboudness, to Pres. Wharton, liboudness, to present the first private to late, arrives too late, retires, louguer, Colonel, stationed at Raystown, attaches an officer and men to Indian sconting parties, halt at Loyal Hannan, sends ont a reconnotitring party, Bourelamarage dismantles Ticondo-	821 822 822 823 824 829 5 445 804 273 277 251 255 259
his promptness, his style and equipage, i, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, econciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Boudder, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. Boudder, Elias, to Pres. iii. Boudder, Elias, to Pres. iii. Boudder, Iii. iii. Iii. Iii. Iii. Iii. Iii. Iii.	821 822 822 823 824 829 5 445 804 273 277 251 255 259 259
his promptness, his style and eqnipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, eoneiliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. alarm post, iii. BOUDINOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. BOUDINOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. BOUDINOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. BOUGAINVILLE, DE, detached to watch Wolfe's movements, retires, BOUQUET, Colonel, stationed at Raystown, attaehes an officer and men to Indian sconting parties, halt at Loyal Hannan, sends ont a reconnoitring party, BOURLAMARQUE dismantles Ticonderga and Crown Point, makes a stand at the Isle aux Noix, i.	821 822 822 823 824 829 5 445 804 273 277 251 255 259 259
his promptness, his style and equipage, i, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, conciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Boudnow, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. Boudnow, Elias, to Watched to watch Wolfe's movements, i. Bouquet, Colonel, stationed at Raystown, town, i. attaches an officer and men to Indian sconting parties, halt at Loyal Hannan, sends ont a reconnoitring party, Eutlamarque dismantles Ticonde- roga and Crown Point, makes a stand at the Isle aux Noix, Braam, Van. (See Van Braam.)	821 822 822 823 824 829 5 445 804 273 277 251 255 259 259
his promptness, his style and equipage, i, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, eoneiliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. alarm post, BOUGHINYILLE, DE, detached to watch Wolfe's movements, retires, BOUQUET, Colonel, stationed at Raystown, attaches an officer and men to Indian sconting parties, halt at Loyal Hannan, sends ont a reconnoitring party, BOURLAMARGEE dismantles Ticonderga and Crown Point, makes a stand at the Isle aux Noix, i. BRAAM, Van. (See Van Braam.) BRADDOCK, Major General Edward,	821 822 822 823 824 829 5 445 804 273 277 251 255 259 259
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, econciliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii, laarm post, liboudness, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, liboudness, Elias, to Pres. Loudness, Elias, to Pres. Loudness, Elias, to Pres. Loudness, Individual to watch Wolfe's movements, liboudness, Individual to watch Wolfe's movements, liboudness, Individual to watch Wolfe's movements, liboudness, Individual to the liboudness, liboudness, Individual to Individual	$21 322 322 323 323 324 329 5 445 304 273 277 251 255 259 268 268
his promptness, his style and equipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, econeiliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. BOUDINOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. BOUDINOT, Elias, to Pres. Wharton, iii. BOUGAINVILLE, DE, detached to watch Wolfe's movements, retires, BOUQUET, Colonel, stationed at Raystown, attaches an officer and men to Indian scouting parties, halt at Loyal Hannan, sends ont a reconnoitring party, BOURLAMBRUE dismantles Ticonderoga and Crown Point, makes a stand at the Isle aux Noix, i. BRAAM, Van. (See Van Braam.) BRADDOCK, Major General Edward, appointed generalissimo of the co- lonial forces,	$21 $22 $22 $23 $23 $24 $27 $277 $277 $251 $255 $259 $268 $268 $268 $27 $277 $2
his promptness, his style and eqnipage, opening of the session, dissolves the House of Burgesses, econeiliatory conduct, his death, Bottle Hill, Americans encamped at, iii. alarm post, licential and before the conduct of the conduc	$21 322 322 323 323 324 329 5 445 304 273 277 251 255 259 268 268 town meeting against the right of the king to send troops, refuses to quarter the troops, in massacre, and troops in destruction of tea, in destruction of tea, in destruction of tea, in the send of lands at Hampton,	i. 140	evacuate the Jerseys,	414	80 proceeds to Alexandria,	i. 142

				86
invites Washington to join his staff,		fleet leaves New York,	iii.	119 holds a council,	i. 145	enters the Delaware,	íii.	121 sets out from Alexandria,	i. 151			121
	i. 151			135
interesting with Countries,		P. Citers the Chesapeake,	,11,	100
	i. 153	Brodnead, Col., expedition sgainst
	i. 153	the Indians,	iii.	457 arrives at Fort Cumberland.	i. 154	Bromfield, Major, attack on Fort
	i. 156			314
	i. 158			OLI
		BROOKE, Judge, on Washington's
	i. 159		v	459
his impatience and obstinacy,	i. 160	Brooke, General, meets Washing-
	i. 162	ton at Cambridge,	٧.	40
[See end of the Index.	7
			11.	292
	r. 183	Brooks, Lieutenant General, attacks
death of,	r. 229	Burgoyne's camp, i	íi. '	239
BRADETREET, Lieutenant Colonel, se-		joins Prescott,		424
enres a Seminole,	i. 249	Brown, Dr., attends Washington, Days I in accords Washington,	٠.,	294 expedition against Fort Frontenae,		Brown, Lieutenant, brings flag of
	i. 250	truce,	ii. '	252
Brandywine (battle of the) cannon-		recognition of Washington's rank,	ii. '	252
	i. 188	Brown, Major John, despatched into
	i. 189			11
				41
	i. 193		ij.	54
description of the retreat, ii	i, 193	projects with Allen an aftack on
	i. 156		ii.	60
	. 182	and Major Livingston take Fort		00
Param M. bomb Code attribute		and Major Livingston take Fort
	i. 448		ii.	83
	i. 432	drives Colonel Maclean back,	ii.	87 depredations of, iv	. 157		ii.
	. 425	Brown, Colonel, surprises Ticonde-
	. 425			110
			ii. 2
	i. 426	threatens Diamond Island, i	11. :	218
under the enemy's fire,	i. 430	Brown, Lieutenant Colonel, com-
Breton Club, v	. 34		v.	5.1
BEEYMAN, Colonel, to the relief of			••	01
	. 40= 1	BRUDENELL, Mr., accompanies Lady
	i. 165		ii. S
arrives, and renews the battle, iii	i. 167	Brunswick troops hired by England, :	ii. 1	196 mortally wounded, iii	i. 240	Buford, Colonel, pursued by Tarle-
BRIDDORT, Lord, death of Washington, v	000			5.1
Priest Liebtning	150		٧.
	. 159		v.
British ministry, efforts to suppress	i	defeated by Tarleton, i	v.	53 smuggling, i	302	Bunker's Hill to be fortified,	i. 4	123 manufactures, resolutions not to	- 1		i. 4
	. 303	works thrown up	2 6	193
		works thrown up,	i. 4
	. 421		i. 4
troops at Boston, ii	. 4	effect of the American fire,	i. 4	134 attack the court, ii	. 67		i. 4	134 plan of operations, ii	. 132		i, 4
	. 166		i. 4
move against Dorchester Heights, ii		British again retreat,	i. 4	136 postponed by a storm, ii	. 177	spectators,	i. 4	136
	. 177	third attack,	i. 4
			1. 4	OU
preparations for retreat from Bos-	100	Americans driven from the breast-
	. 180	work on the left,	i. 4	37 embarkation from Boston, ii	. 181	British advance with the bayonet,	i. 4	37
	. 228		i, 4
plans for the attack on Long Island, ii			i. 4 American natural
	. 332	American retreat,	i. 4	1.55
land at New York, ii	. 338	American retreat, Stark, Reed, and Knowlton main-repulse Americans, ii	. 883	tain their ground,	i. 4	38 land at Throg's Neck, ii	856	Putnam endeavors to rally the		- ships move up to Bourdett's Ferry, ii				20
			i. 4
	. 403		1, 4
	. 420	resumé,	i. 4	39
	. 471	relative merits of the American
	. 10		i. 4	10

occupied by the British, ii Burgesses, (Va.) House of, convened, i	i. 5	meeting with Gates, ii	i. 252
Burgesses, (Va.) House of, convened, i vote thanks to Washington and his	. 92		i. 256 i. 352 officers,	i. 124	BURKE, Judge, denounces the Cincin-	1. 002
grant £20,000 for the public service, i	i. 13I	nati, iv	. 419
	i. 351   i. 260	Burke, Edmund, on the employment promoted to Major,	i. 261	of men-of-war as custom-house officers,	i. 302
BURGOYNE, General, arrives at Boston, i		on the state of affairs in America, ii	i. 1
	1. 418		i. 53
cannonading at Bunker's Hill, is described,	i. 435   i. 3		i. 144 i. 186 history of,			i. 402
accused by Junius, ii	i. 4	BURTON, Lieutenant Colonel, ordered
"The Maid of the Oaks," ii			i. 176
Walpole's witticism, ii "The Heiress" praised by Walpole, ii	. 4	the detachments fall back upon him in confusion,	i. 176
correspondence with Lee, ii	$. \ \ 2\hat{5}$		i. 179 proposes an interview with Lee, ii		Bushnell's submarine battery, i	i. 347
	. 224		i. 475
pursues Sullivan, ii reported arrival at Quebec, iii	i. 226 i. 77	Butler, Colonel, accompanies Wayne, iv	. 197 plan of campaign, iii		Butler, General, reinforces Greene, iv leaves St. Johns, iii		at Guilford Court House, iv	r. 245 on Lake Champlain, iii arrives at Crown Point, iii		Butler, Major General, with Gene-	. 97 advancing, iii		ral St. Clair, v killed.	. 99 issues proclamation, iii	i. 94	BUTLER, Lieutenant Colonel, to in-101	tercept Colonel Simcoe, iv	7. 290
	i. 105 i. 140	BUTLER, Colonel, at Oriskany, ii: BUTLER, Colonel John, commands	i. 153
	. 141	expedition against Wyoming, iii	. 4 33 feeling towards the Indians, 1ii	i. 142	at Wintermoot's Fort, ii	i. 433
	143		i. 43 t
	i. 145 i. 148	Butler, Colonel Richard, surprises a party of Hessians, iii	i. 440 opposite Saratoga, iii	i. 163	BUTLER, Colonel Zebulon, in com-	. 110
	. 168	mand of Forty Fort, ii	i. 433
correspondence with Gates, iii	i. 176 . 205		i. 434 dubious position, iii to Lord Germain on his prospects, iii	. 206	BUTTERFIELD, Major, surrenders the	i. 418 silent preparations, iii	i. 209		. 212
	. 210	BRYANT, Lientenant, at Throg's Neck, i	i. 857
	i. 210 i. 212	Byrd, Colonel, Byrd, Mr., visits the garrison,	i. 243 i. 274 plan of battle.	i. 212	Byron, Admiral, arrives at New attacked by Arnold, iii	. 214	York, iii	i. 441 on the situation of the ladies, iii	i. 215 i. 216	tries to entrap D'Estaing, ii	i. 441 critical situation, iii news from Clinton, iii	i. 217 sends word to Clinton, iii	i. 217	€.
harassed by the Americans, iii	. 219	Construction Color 1 T.1
within intrenchments, iii movement against Gates, iii	i. 234 i. 235	CADWALADER, Colonel John, com- mands detachment of volunteers, i	1.10 prepares for battle, iii	i. 237	stationed at Bristol,	i. 440 retreats to his camp, in	ı. 259	prevented by the ice, i	i. 456
	i. 241 i. 242		i. 464
	i. 243		i, 464 i, 465
	i. 243		i. 467
oncerning Lady Ackland, ii	i. 244	at Crosswicks, i	i. 471
	i. 245	CADWALADER, Lambert, i	i. 266
iestruction of Schuyler's property, iii alls a council of war,	i. 247		i. 361 i. 395 ortifies his camp, iii	i. 247	forced to retreat, i	i. 397 rapitulates, iii tanna of annitalation	i. 250	CALDWELL, Reverend James, the terms of capitulation, iii	i. 250	"rousing gospel preacher," iv	7. 6
terms of capitulation, iii		"rousing gospel preacher," iv

his return home,	iv. 60	reinforced,	11.	206 in the fight at Springfield,	iv. 63	makes a sortie,	ii.	200
CALDWELL, Mrs., killed by the Britis	h, iv. 59	Americans retreat,	ii.	201 popular excitement.	iv. 61	treatment of Americans,		201
CALLBECK, Mr., taken prisoner,	ii, 103	plan of campaign,		355 to Washington,	ii. 103	armament completed,		356
CALVERT, Benedict,	i. 842	takes possession of Crown Point,	ii	390
Cambridge, assembling of patriots,	i. 975	returns to Canada,		391
Camden, battle of,	Iv. 87	to remain in Canada,	iii.
flight of American militia,	iv. 85	arrives at New York,	iv.
	iv. 297
burnt by the British,			iv.	003
CAMPBELL, Colonel William, pursue	15 174	to Washington on negotiations for		071
Major Ferguson,	iv. 174		iv.
in the battle of King's Mountain,	IV. 1(5)	to Washington on peace, preparation to evacuate New York,	ıv.	853 at Guilford Court House,	iv. 245	preparation to evacuate New York,	iv.	891 at Eutaw Springs,	iv. 335		iv.
charges the British,	iv. 337		iv.	406
his death,	iv. 339	Carleton, Major, captures Forts
Campbell, Colonel, orders a retreat	i, ii. 1-IS	Anne and George,	iv.	157
CAMPBELL, Licutenant Colonel, to a	t-	Carlisle, Earl of, commissioner from	1
tack Fort Montgomery,	iii. 225	Great Britain,	iii.	379 checked by the Americans	iii. 227	state of Philadelphia,	iii.
killed,	iii. 229	to George Selwyn,	iii.
thrown into jail,	iii. 17	CARNES, Captain, discovers Champo's	2	002 appeals to Washington,	iii. 17		iv.	159 exchanged for Ethan Allen,	iii. 377			100 to comprise Your Target		Carpenter, Captain, joins Lord Stir	21	000 to surprise New Tappan,	iii. 457	ling,	11.	302 sails for Georgia,	iii. 442	Carrington, Lieutenant, at Quimly's	3.
lands his troops,	iii, 443	Creek,	iv.	502 defeats the Americans,	iii, 443	CARROLL, of Carrollton, and Miss Cus-	- takes Savannah,	iii. 443	tis,		262 moderate conduct,	iii. 443	Caswell, General, on the road to	) detached against Augusta,	iii. 411	Camden,	ív.	81
CAMPBELL, Lord, wounded at Sul	li-	at the battle of Camden,	iv.	57
van's Island,	ii. 276	Cedars, affair at,	ii.	212
Campbell, Major, takes Ethan Alle	211	Chadd's Ford,	iii.
prisoner,	ii. 6I	CHAMBERLAYNE, Mr., asks Washing
Campbell, Major, killed,	iv. 346	ton to dinner,	i	252
Canada, campaign against,	i. 229	CHAMPE, John, scheme to entrap Ar project of invasion,	ii. 38	nold,	iv.	139 defences and disposition,	ii. 43	pretended desertion,	iv.
force of the enemy in,	ii. 224 arradition against annicated		enlists in Arnold's corps,	iv.	100 expedition against projected,	iii. 322	failure of his plan,	iv.
found impracticable,	iii. 334	rewarded,	iv.	199 suspended by Congress,	iii. 836	Champlain, Lake, engagement,		387
Lafayette's scheme against,	iii. 446	killed and wounded,		39
Washington's opposition to,	iii, 447	Charman, Colonel,	i.	163 abandoned,	iii. 418	Charleston fortified,	ii.	$\frac{272}{278}$
Cape Breton to be reduced,	i. 241	joy at General Lee's arrival,	i:.	278
Caramie, Lieutenant Governor, a	D-	expedition against,	iii.	45 prised of Arnold's designs,	ii. 118	defences of,	iv.	26
CARLETON, Colonel Guy, comman		reinforced,	iv.
the grenadiers,	i. 268	strength of garrison,	iv.
commands the battery at the Is		summoned to surrender,	iv.
of Orleans,	i. 269	British batteries opened on,	iv.
persuades Indians to war again		capitulates,	iv.
the Americans,	ii. 46	loss in the siege,	11.	50
	ii. 84
amount of forces,		Charlestown, arsenal sacked,	1.	375 embarks from Montreal,	ii. 85	burned,	1.	43. 16.
attacked by Colonel Warner, retreats to Montreal,	ii. 85	alarm during the play,	и.	100 retreats to Montreal,	ii. 85	Charlestown Neck, to be seized by	٧.
flies from Montreal,	ii. 91	the Americans,		422 escapes in disguise,	ii. 91	reconnoitred,		423 arrives at Quebec,	ii. 122	described,		424 strength of force,	ii. 129	Charlottesville. Tarleton enters,	iv.	288 treatment of Montgomery's mo		Chastellex, Marquis de, arrives a	t sengers.	ii. 142	Newport,	iv.	69 captures Dearborn and party,	ii. 150			168

description of his visit,
	iv. 163	commands the Highland forts,	iii. 64
reconnoissance,	iv. 282	promoted,	iii. 64
at Mount Vernon,	iv. 320	his patriotism,	iii. 64 anecdote of Mr. Secretary Nelson,		to Washington on his defences,	iii. 65
CHATHAM, Lord, on the opposition of		governor of New York,	iii. 123
the colonists to the mutiny act,	i. 314	on the alert,	iii. 131 opinion of the General Congress,	i. 370	at Kingston,	iii, 222 vain efforts in behalf of America,	i. 389		iii. 223 conciliatory bill,	i. 390	hastens to the Highlands,
	ii. 367	prepares for an attack,	iii. 226
Chatterton's Hill, military position,		escape,	iii. 223 attack of the British,	ii. 369	measures to oppose the British,	iii. 231 killed and wounded,	ii. 870	intercepts a letter from Burgoyn	000
CHEESEMAN, Captain, before Quebec		to Clinton,	iii. 232 death,	ii. 147	reaches Kingston too late,	iii, 233
Cherry Valley, atrocities at.	iii. 452	wishes to strengthen the defence
Chesapeake, expedition against,	iii. 458	of the Hudson,	iii. 290
Chestnut Hill, British encamped on,		finds money for Hamilton,	iii. 291
Chesterfield Court House, British		takes the field,	iv. 157
marand,	iv. 267	tour with Washington,	iv. 400
Chestnut Neck, village destroyed by	У	summons state council at East the British,	iii. 438	Chester,	iv. 405
Chew, Benjamin, mansion of,	iii. 260	at Harlem,	iv. 405
CHEW'S House, fortified by Musgrave.		enters New York,	iv. 406
Cheyney, Thomas,	iii. 189	receives Washington at New York	iv. 471
Choiseul. Duke de, prediction,	i. 327	Clinton, General James,	ii. 209
Choisy, General M. de, arrives with	h	Clinton, James, at the Highlands,	ii. 209 troops,	iv. 321	descent and career,	ii. 209 crosses York river,	iv. 330	appointed to command Forts Mont skirmish with Tarleton,	iv. 331	gomery and Constitution,	ii. 218
Chouln, Major, at the American head		the conspiracy in New York,	ii. 234 quarters,	iif. 416	put on the alert,	ii. 351
Christopher, Washington's servant, Church, Dr. Benjamin, treasonabl	, v . 295	in command of Fort Clinton,	iii. 223
Church, Dr. Benjamin, treasonabl	e	narrow escape,	iii. 228 letter,	fi. 69	joins Sullivan,	iii. 456 sentence,	ii. 69	in command of the Northern de	- mitigation of sentence —death,	ii. 70	partment,	iv. 158
Cincinnati, Society of, formed,	iv. 392	CLINTON, Sir Henry, arrives at Boston	i, i, 413 popular jealousy of,	iv. 419	joins Howe at Bunker's Hill,	i. 456 modification of its constitution,	iv. 420	described,	ii. 3
Cincinnati, Society of Massachuse'.ts
Cincinnati, bociety of Massachas .cs	s,	arrives at New York harbor,	ii. 157 address to Washington,	v. 43	arrives at New York harbor,	ii. 157 ii. 157 arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, address to Washington,	v. 43 iv. 152	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure,	ii. 157
address to Washington, Clark, Colonel, joing Marion	v. 43 iv. 152	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South,	ii. 157 ii. 158 address to Washington, CLAEK, Colonel, joing Marian CLAEKE, Colonel Elijah, on the re- treat,	v. 43 iv. 152 iv. 171	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure,	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 address to Washington, Clark, Colonel, joins Marion Clarke, Colonel Elijah, on the re-	v. 43 iv. 152 iv. 171	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries,	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 address to Washington, Clark, Colonel, joins Marica Clarke, Colonel Elijah, on the re- treat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Wash ington,	v. 43 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the Sonth, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Mari'sp CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the re- treat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Wash ington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of	v. 43 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt,	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 , ii. 276 address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel Edjah, on the re- treat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Wash ington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain,	v. 43 iv. 182 iv. 171 iv. 188	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York,	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 ii. 277
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the re- treat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Wash ington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles,	v. 48 iv. 182 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island,	ii. 157 ii. 159 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 ii. 277 ii. 252 ii. 294
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the re- treat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Wash ington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with	v. 48 iv. 182 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands,	ii. 157 ii. 159 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 ii. 277 ii. 252 ii. 294 ii. 298
address to Washington, CLAEK, Colonel, joins Marian CLAEKE, Colonel Elijah, on the retreat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands,	ii. 157 ii. 159 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 ii. 277 ii. 252 ii. 294 address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the re- treat, Clement, exploit of Colonel Wash ington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and carrer,	v. 48 iv. 182 iv. 171 iv. 188 iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the Sonth, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass,	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 277 ii. 277 ii. 252 ii. 294 ii. 299 ii. 300 address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marion CLARK, Colonel, bijns, on the retreat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British,	v. 48 iv. 182 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 209	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the Sonth, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island,	ii. 157 ii. 159 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 ii. 277 ii. 252 ii. 294 ii. 298 ii. 299
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Mari'sp CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the re- treat, Cleyeland, exploit of Colonel Wash ington, CLEYELAND, Colonel, in the batt's of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, prompthess in raising levies,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 246 ii. 247	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marchos from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains,	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 277 ii. 277 ii. 252 ii. 294 ii. 299 ii. 300 ii. 363 ii. 369
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the re- treat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Wash ington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, prompthess in raising levies, sagacious measures,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 209 ii. 246 ii. 247 ii. 263	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements,	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 277 ii. 277 ii. 277 ii. 294 ii. 299 ii. 800 ii. 833 ii. 369 iii. 222
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, Joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the retreat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 246 iii. 247 ii. 263	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson.	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 274 ii. 277 ii. 282 ii. 294 ii. 293 ii. 290 ii. 303 ii. 360 iii. 223
address to Washington, CLAEK, Colonel, joins Marian CLAEKE, Colonel Elijah, on the retreat, Cleymont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEYELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, ou the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 246 ii. 247 ii. 263	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the Sonth, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point,	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 iii. 276 iii. 252 ii. 294 ii. 293 ii. 300 ii. 303 ii. 360 iii. 222 iii. 224
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Mari'dd CLARK, Colonel, joins Mari'dd CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the retreat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the batt's of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arriyai of reinforcement,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 iii. 209 iii. 209 iii. 247 iii. 243 iii. 247 iii. 243	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations,	ii. 157 ii. 153 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 277 ii. 277 ii. 282 ii. 294 ii. 299 ii. 800 ii. 800 ii. 833 ii. 922 iii. 923 iii. 924 iii. 924 address to Washington, CLAEK, Colonel, joins Marian CLAEKE, Colonel Elijah, on the retreat, Clement, exploit of Colonel Wash ington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arrival of reinforcement, to Washington on the patri tism of	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 158 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 209 ii. 247 ii. 247 ii. 268	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations, crosses to Stony Point,	ii. 157 ii. 158 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 277 ii. 277 ii. 277 ii. 289 ii. 290 ii. 300 ii. 333 ii. 360 ii. 223 iii. 224 iii. 224 iii. 225
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARK, Colonel, in the retreat, Clemont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, prompthess in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arrival of reinforcement, to Washington on the patritism of the country people,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 240 ii. 243 ii. 243 ii. 243 ii. 248 iii. 248	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the Sonth, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations, crosses to Stony Point, marches round the Dunderberg,	ii. 157 ii. 153 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 277 ii. 252 ii. 293 ii. 299 ii. 303 ii. 300 iii. 293 iii. 293 iii. 223 iii. 223 iii. 223 iii. 224 iii. 224 iii. 225 iii. 225 iii. 225
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARK, Colonel, Elijah, on the retreat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arrival of reinforcement, to Washington on the patri tism of the country people, precautions against Brit'r's ships,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 158 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 209 ii. 247 ii. 247 ii. 268	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations, crosses to Stony Point, marches round the Dunderberg, divides his force,	ii, 167 ii, 157 iii, 273 ii, 273 ii, 273 ii, 277 ii, 277 ii, 293 ii, 290 ii, 300 ii, 303 ii, 302 iii, 223 iii, 223 iii, 224 iii, 225
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARK, Colonel, in the retreat, Clemont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, prompthess in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arrival of reinforcement, to Washington on the patritism of the country people,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 240 ii. 243 ii. 243 ii. 243 ii. 248 iii. 248	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the Sonth, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations, crosses to Stony Point, marches round the Dunderberg, divides his force, meets with opposition,	ii. 157 ii. 153 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 277 ii. 252 ii. 293 ii. 299 ii. 303 ii. 300 iii. 293 iii. 293 iii. 223 iii. 223 iii. 223 iii. 224 iii. 224 iii. 225 iii. 225 iii. 225
address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the retreat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arrival of reinforcement, to Washington on the patri tism of the country people, precautions against British, contemplates descent on Long Island.	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 ii. 209 ii. 247 ii. 243 ii. 243 ii. 248 ii. 248 ii. 257	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations, crosses to Stony Point, marches round the Dunderberg, divides his force, meets with opposition, letter to Burgoyne intercepted,	ii. 167 ii. 157 iii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 277 ii. 282 iii. 297 ii. 298 ii. 299 ii. 299 ii. 360 ii. 363 ii. 362 iii. 222 iii. 223 iii. 224 iii. 224 iii. 225 iii. 225 iii. 225 iii. 225 iii. 225 iii. 225 iii. 227
address to Washington, CLAEK, Colonel, joins Marito CLAEKE, Colonel Elijah, on the retreat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, ou the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious incasures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arrival of reinforcement, to Washington on the patritism of the country people, precautions against Briton dips.	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 185 of iv. 175 ii. 209 h ii. 209 ii. 246 ii. 247 ii. 248 ii. 248 ii. 248 ii. 248 ii. 257 ii. 344	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations, crosses to Stony Point, marches round the Dunderberg, divides his force, meets with opposition, letter to Burgoyne intercepted, project to capture,	ii. 157 ii. 153 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 ii. 277 ii. 297 ii. 298 ii. 299 ii. 800 iii. 929 iii. 924 iii. 924 iii. 925 iii. 927 iii. 927 address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the retreat, Cleymont, exploit of Colonel Wash ington, CLEYELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and carrer, on the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arrival of reinforcement, to Washington on the patt tism of the country people, precautions against Brit': drips, contemplates descent on Long Island, on military exigencies	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 ii. 209 ii. 246 ii. 247 ii. 248 ii. 2	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the Sonth, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations, crosses to Stony Point, marches round the Dunderberg, divides his force, meets with opposition, letter to Burgoyne intercepted, project to capture, plan to entrap Lafayette,	ii. 157 ii. 153 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 ii. 277 ii. 277 ii. 294 ii. 299 ii. 800 ii. 860 iii. 222 iii. 223 iii. 224 iii. 225 iii. 225 iii. 225 iii. 233 iii. 333 iii. 333 address to Washington, CLARK, Colonel, joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel, Joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel Elijah, on the retreat, Clermont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arrival of reinforcement, to Washington on the patritism of the country people, precautions against British, contemplates descent on Long Island, on military exigencies stationed in the Ilighiands, safety of the Hudgen,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 185 if. 175 ii. 209 ii. 209 ii. 209 ii. 246 ii. 247 ii. 248 ii. 248 ii. 248 ii. 257 ii. 313 ii. 379 ii. 412 d	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations, crosses to Stony Point, marches round the Dunderberg, divides his force, meets with opposition, letter to Burgoyne intercepted, project to capture, plan to entrap Lafayette, ordered to evacuate Philadelphia, informs Washington of the arrive	ii. 157 ii. 157 iii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 ii. 277 ii. 298 ii. 299 ii. 800 ii. 800 ii. 923 ii. 924 iii. 923 iii. 924 iii. 923 iii. 923 iii. 923 iii. 923 iii. 931 address to Washington, CLARKE, Colonel, joins Marian CLARKE, Colonel, in the retreat, Clemont, exploit of Colonel Washington, CLEVELAND, Colonel, in the battle of King's Mountain, CLINTON, Charles, CLINTON, George, conferences with Washington, descent and career, on the alert for the British, promptness in raising levies, sagacious measures, visits Forts Constitution and Mont gomery, arrival of reinforcement, to Washington on the patrician of the country people, precautions against British, contemplates descent on Long Island, on military exigencies stationed in the Highlands,	v. 48 iv. 152 iv. 171 iv. 188 of iv. 175 ii. 209 ii. 209 ii. 247 ii. 243 ii. 247 ii. 248 of ii. 248 ii. 257 ii. 373 ii. 373 ii. 379 ii. 412	arrives at New York harbor, interview with the mayor, departure, expedition to the South, lands at Long Island, S. C., constructs batteries, attempts to cross from Long Island repulsed in another attempt, arrival at New York, lands on Long Island, at Flatlands, marches from Flatlands, secures the Bedford Pass, crosses from Long Island, advances against White Plains, awaits reinforcements, moves up the Hudson, lands at Verplanck's Point, plan of operations, crosses to Stony Point, marches round the Dunderberg, divides his force, meets with opposition, letter to Burgoyne intercepted, project to capture, plan to entrap Lafayette, ordered to evacuate Philadelphia, informs Washington of the arrive	ii. 157 ii. 157 iii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 273 ii. 276 ii. 277 ii. 298 ii. 299 ii. 800 ii. 800 ii. 923 ii. 924 iii. 923 iii. 924 iii. 923 iii. 923 iii. 923 iii. 923 iii. 931

•
evacuates Philadelphia,	iii, 388	bold stand,	Iv. 303 dilatory movements,	iii. 0-9	Cobble Hill, fortified by Putnam,	ii. 107 at Allentown.	iii, 390	Cochran, Major, expedition agains changes plan of route,	iii. 590	the Onondagas,	iii. 456 changes the line of march,	iii. 392	Cochrane, Major, march from Savar	nencamps near Monmouth Co-	urt	nah,	iv. 44
House,	Iii. 392	Coffin, Major, put to flight,	iv. 335
			11.000
battle of Monmouth Court Hous		Colburn, Colonel, watches the falls back,	III, 899	enciny,	iii. 20 9 silent retreat.	iji. 409	Colden, Lientenant Governor, re	- arrives at Sandy Hook,	iii, 403	tires into the fort,	1. 310 arrives at Newport,	iii. 428	assailed by the mob,	i. 310
notines to Your York	iii, 428 returns to New York,		burned in effigy,	i. 310 sends troops into the Jerseys		Cole, Colonel,	i. 202
Westchester County,	iii. 436	Collier, Admiral Sir George, con	- sets on foot a naval expedit	ion	voys expedition to the Chesa	- against St. Lucia,	iii. 442	peake,	iii. 459
	iii. 458
confined to predatory warfare,		expedition up the Hudson,	iii. 460 expedition up the Hudson,	iii. 460	convoys expedition against Connec	3-takes Stony Point,	iii. 469	tieut,	iii, 462 captures Fort Latayette,	iii, 460	conters with Sir Henry Clinton,	iii. 464 returns to New York,	iii, 461	arrives at the Penobscot,
			iii. 472
desolating expedition against C	on-	relieves the fort,	iii. 473
nectiont,	iii. 461	Commissariat, changes in,	iii. 127 capture of Stony Point by Ways	ie, iii. 469	Commissioners, arrive from Great	t hastens up the Hudson,	iii. 470	Britain,	iii. 379
fortifies and garrisons Stony Poi		land at Philadelphia,	iii. 880 fortines and garrisons atony 1 or returns to Philipsburg,	iii, 470	letter to Congress,	iii. 382 concentrates his forces at N. Yor	K, III. 479	unsuccessful attempts at negotia-expedition to South Carolina,	iii. 453	tion,	iii. 333 damage during the voyage,	iv. 25	embark for England,	iii. 381
	iv. 25
at Tybee bay,		Committee of Arrangement, appoint	0 disembarks at St. John's Island,		ed by Congress,	iii. 347 advance to Charleston,	iv. 26	report on the sufferings of the army	, iii. 349 on Charleston Neck,	iv. 27	Committee of Conference with Lor	d reinforced,	iv. 49	Howe,	ii. 325
fall of Charleston,	iv. 50	conference,	ii. $26
		Comercial and Toronton and the A	11. 0.0
sends expeditions into the interior		Committee of Inquiry visit Arnold, garrisons South Carolina,	iv. 55	their instructions,	ii. 37 issues a proclamation.	iv. 51	Committee of Safety,	i. 353 embarks for New York,	iv. 55	suspect a design on the magazin arrives at New York,	iv. 61	at Concord,	i. 391
antives at New Tork, project against Rhode Island,		urge the enlistment of froops,	i. 401 changes his plan,	iv. 75	appoint Arnold Colonel,	i. 404
correspondence with Arnold,	iv. 97	Conciliatory bills sent to America,	iii. 363 releases Arnold's crew,	iv. 124	effect of,	iii. 371 to Washington claiming the rele		Concord, military stores collected at,	1. 354
	iv. 133	overedition essinst	1. 002
of Andre,		expedition against,	i. 392 rejects exchange of Arnold f		alarm of the people,	i. 393
André,	iv. 137	exertions to remove and concea	.1 sends commission relative to And		the stores,	i. 393
detaches Arnold to Virginia,	iv. 192	advance of the British,	i. 394 proceedings on the revoit of Per		take possession of the town,	1. 394 sylvania line,	lv. 198	destroy the stores,	i. 344 on the destruction of Cornwall	is'	British attacked, British retreat harassed by the	i. 394 baggage,	iv. 225	British retreat harassed by the	3 to Cornwallis for troops,	iv. 254	Americans,	i. 395
nears of the Virginia expedition,		Confederacy, ratification of the,	iv. 204 promised relief to Cornwallis,	iv. 328	Congress (General) recommended by tardy movements,	iv. 355	the Virginia House of Burgesses, refuses to deliver the murderer	of	first meeting fixed upon,	i. 350
Captain Huddy,	iv. 364	assembled,	i, 363
	iv. 368
recalled at his own request,		prayers,	i. 365
Closter Dock, landing of British,	ii. 401	rumors that Boston had been can
CLoven, Major, killed,	iii. 438	nonaded,	i. 365
COATES, Lieutenant Colonel, at Mon	nk's	opening speeches,	i. 367
Corner,	iv. 299	declaration of colonial rights,	i. 867
decamps in silence,	iv. 303	rosolutions,	1. 369
	000		1. 000

state papers,	i. 369 †	refuse to treat with Great Britain,	iii.	369 held at New York,	i. 309	recommend the pardoning of To-denounces the acts of Parliament,	i. 309		iii.	369
address to the king and petition to	)			270 Parliament,	i, 309	reception of the despatches of the its discussion.	i. 369	British commissioners,	iii.	389 masterly state papers,	i. 369			389
the second general,	i. 408	refuse to negotiate with Johnstone,	iii.	859 petition to the king moved,	i. 408	approves the sentence of Lee,	iii.	409 federal union formed,	i. 409	informs Washington of the arrival		-0.
council of twelve,	i. 409			413
exercise their federated powers,	i. 409			430 retaliating decree,	i. 409	approve Lafayette's Canada scheme, declare Massachusetts absolved from		deterioration of,	::: .	419
the crown,	i. 409	vote a gold medal to Major Henry		71.
adopt the army,	i. 413		:::	470
elect Washington commander-in-	1. 419
	i. 413		iv.
other military appointments,	i. 414		iv.
	ii. 2		iv.
on the English generals,		confirms sentence against Arnold, on General Howe,			iv.	38 accept Ticonderoga,	ii. 34	appoint a committee to confer with determine to invade Canada,	ii. 39		iν.	30 committee from, confer with Wash-		appoint Gates to the southern deington,	ii. 74		iv.
order formation of a new army,	ii, 95		iv.
to Schuyler on his proposed resigna-				140
tion,	ii. 96	order a court of inquiry into the order Schuyler to Tryon county,	ii. 154	conduct of Gates,	i۷.	150
appland Schuyler's conduct,	ii, 155	new system for the organization divide the middle and southern colo-	- [	and support of the army,	iv.	159 nies into two departments,	ii. 187	send Colonel Laurens to France,	iv.	195 enlistment act,	ii. 208	committee to meet Pennsylvania establish a war office,	ii. 209	insurgents,	iv.	200 declare the United States free and		appoints heads of departments,	iv.	208 independent,	ii, 241	rejoicings at the surrender of York-adopt the Declaration of Independ-		town,	iv.	25(
ence,	11. 241			360
settle dispute between Schuyler and				864
Gates.	ii. 263			385
action on Lord Howe's overtures,	ii. 824	resolution concerning the service		00.
appoint a committee to confer with			iv	391
Lord Howe,	ii. 325			39
leave the question of the abandon-				40:
ment of New York to Washing-	.			410
ton's discretion,	ii. 831	its composition,	٧.
forbid the destruction of New York,		reassembles,	v.	50
reorganizes the army,	ii. 343	assumption of State debts discussed,		- 60 requests Washington to obstruct			v.	68
the Hudson,	ii. 359	adopted, clothe Washington with additional		discords in,	Ŷ.	65
	ii. 439	reassembles at Philadelphia,	ý.
powers.		impost and excise bill,	٧.
invests Washington with dictatorial		assembling of the second,	v,	9:
powers,	ii. 468	apportionment bill,		104
refuse to comply with Lee's request,		assembles December, 1793,		178
	iii. 16	does justice to Washington,		180 declines the resignation of Schuyler,		bill to increase naval force,	v,	187
	iii. 37	Washington's denunciation of secret
	iii. 51	societies.		206
	iii. 52	response to Washington,		233 refuse to admit Gates to the floor,		reply to Washington's last address,	v.	264
	iii. 125	authorizes the enlistment of a pro-appoint Gates to the command of		visional army,		264
	iii. 126	Congress (Massachusetts) at Boston,		38 proceedings of, at the battle of		adjourn to Concord,		389
	iii. 195 [	assume supreme authority,		385
anonymous letter to, against Wash-		remonstrate with Governor Gage,		383
ington,	iii. 321	system and order.	i.	383 nominate general officers, i. 383	CORNWALLIS, Lord, arrival at New Connecticut abets the opposition of	York,	11. 282

Massachusetts, i. 362	lands on Long Island.
people march towards Boston, i. 378		ii. 295
sends volunteers, i. 401	advances against Hand,	ii. 295
Legislature of, favor the surprisal of	posts for the night at Flatbush,	ii. 295
Ticonderoga and Crown Point, i, 402	leaves Flatbush with the rear-guard	, 11. 300 committee appointed, i. 402	crosses the Hadson above Fort Lee Massachusetts and Rhode Island fit	marches against Washington,	ii. 426 at the Delaware,	ii. 426
	gives up the pursuit,	ii. 427
troops desert, ii. 101	at New York,	ii. 441 reception at home, ii. 102	resumes command in the Jerseys,	ii. 470 troops described by Graydon, ii. 267	approaches the American forces,	ii. 472
by Washington, ii. 268	enters Trenton,	ii. 473
dingy regimentals, ii. 268	repulsed by Washington,	ii. 473 their composition, ii. 270	alarm at the escape of Washington	. ii. 48I
British expedition against, iii. 461	pushes forward to Princeton,	ii. 462
Connecticut Farms, sacked by the	arrives at Brunswick,	ii. 452 enemy, iv. 58	irksome position,	ii. 455
Conspiracy in New York, ii. 229	to Washington, concerning Hessian letter relative to, (note,) ii. 232		iii. 2 its ramifications, ii. 234		iii. 190 Constitution of the United States, formation of, iv. 458		iii. 192
opposition to, v. 2	narenes into i madeinna,	iii, 203
Continental Army. (See American	pursues the Americans,	iii. 265
Army.)		iii. 294
Contreceur, Captain, surprises the		iii. 436 in the expedition against South Car-
		iii. 483
Contributions for the Continental	completes the investment of
Army, Convention of Virginia at William		iv. 50
Convention of Virginia, at William burg.	ry ver against Colonel Buford,	iv. 51
		iv. 54
at Richmond, i. 388	head-quarters at Charleston,	iv. SI for considering and revising the	at Camden,	iv. 86 federal system, iv. 457		iv. 86
CONWAY'S Cabal, iii. 278		iv. 90
Conway, General, appointed briga-	vigorous measures,	iv. 168
dier general, iii. 42		iv. 170
character of, iii. 42	returns to South Carolina,	iv. 178
in Washington's eamp, iii. 182	takes post at Winnsborough,	iv. 179 gallant conduct, iii. 195	plan for invading North Carolina,	iv. 215 pretensions of, iii. 276	pursues Morgan,	iv. 223 joinsfaction opposed to Washington, iii. 277		iv. 224
correspondence with Gates, iii. 280	destroys his baggage,	iv. 225 attempts at explanation, iii. 281		iv. 280 sends in his resignation, iii. 251		iv. 233 promoted, iii, 305		iv. 233
to Washington on his letter, iii. 829	march to the Don	iv. 234 remains at Albany, iii. 336	retrograde movement,	iv. 237 to be appointed to the Canada ex-	takes post at Hillsborough,	iv. 238
pedition, iii. 923		iv. 238
Lafayette's opinion of, iii. 324 downfall of, iii. 366		iv. 241 resignation accepted, iii. 366	attacks the Americans at Wetzell's Mill,	0.13 fails to get reinstated, iii. 866	hottle of Cullend Court II.	v. 242
		v. 245
anel with Cadwalader, (note,) iii. 367		rv. 250
penitential letter to Washington,	number of troops,	v. 243
(note,) iii. 367		v. 245
subsequent history, (note,) iii. 367		v. 254
Oook, James, in the expedition against	perplexities,	v. 254
Quebec, i. 269	sets off for Virginia,	r. 256 sounds the river, i. 271	arrives at Petersburg, i	v. 270
Copp's Hill, British battery on, i. 424	amount of force,	v. 270
Corbie's Tavern, ii. 229	renewed hope, 1	v. 271 rendezvous of conspirators, ii. 230		v. 286
CORNPLANTER, at the scat of govern-		v. 287
ment, v. 82	pursues Lafayette,	v. 257 retrograde march,	iv. 290	commands at Ninety Six, iv. 297

at Williamsburg,	iv. 290	Custis, John Parke his estate, i. 283 sets out for Portsmouth,	iv. 291	Custis, John Parke, Washington's takes post at Yorktown,	iv. 317	eonduct towards, i. 308 feeling of security,	iv. 317	character and education, i. 342 arrival of De Grasse,	iv. 321	in love, i. 342 retreat cut off,	iv. 321	murriage, i. 343 to Clinton on promised relief,	iv. 328	death of, Iv. 358 draws within the town,	iv. 329	Custis, George W. P., accompanies to Clinton, eritical situation,	iv. 349	Mrs. Washington, v. 14 plan of escape,	iv. 350	Custis, Mrs. Martha, meeting with Washington. i. 253 proposes a capitulation,	iv. 351
capitulates,	iv. 352	Custis, Miss, death of, i. 341 humiliation,	iv. 855 iv. 855	Custis, Eleanor, accompanies Mrs. Washington. v. 14 treatment by the captors, sails for New York on parole,	iv. 358 sails for New Tork on parole,	i. 340
Corresponding Committees,		described, v. 261 halcyon days, ancedote, v. 262
CORTLANDT, Van. (See Van Cortlands Coryell's Ferry, Washington at,	iii. 120	marries Lawrence Lewis, v. 285
Conneil at Alexandria,	i. 145	CUYLER, Yan Yost, iii. 171
Council of Indians at Logstown,	i. 64	in St. Leger's camp, iii. 173
COURTNEY, Captain, killed in action,		Currency, derangement of, iv. 2
Cow Boys,	iv. 109	depreciation of, iv. 31
Cowpens, situation of,	iv. 218	Cushing, Mrs., to her husband, i. 376 battle of,	iv. 220	Cushing, Mr., i. 410 Cushing, William, judge of Supreme killed and wounded,	iv. 221	Cushing, William, judge of Supreme spoils taken,	iv. 222	Court, v. 28
Cox, Colonel, dispute with General		administers the oath of office to Herkimer,	iii. 152	Washington, v. 136 shot down,	iii. 155
CRAGIE, Andrew, (note,)	ii. 12 ii. 11
Cragie House, (note,)		D.
CRAIR, Dr. James, advises Washington to retire to	1, 111	25. advises washington to retire to Mount Vernon.	i. 239	Dagworthy, Captain. 1, 206
Mount Vernon.	1. 239	DAGWORTHY, Captain, i. 206 DALLAS, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon,	i. 239 i. 285 i. 331	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon,	i. 239 i. 285 i. 331 i. 385	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon,	i. 239 i. 285 i. 881 i. 385 t-	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 48 Darke, Colonel, with General St.
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment,	i. 239 i. 285 i. 331 i. 385 t- iii. 69	Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Danke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar	1. 239 i. 285 i. 331 i. 385 t- iii. 69	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, destroyed by the British, Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, t. Y. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 97
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mics,	i. 289 i. 285 i. 381 i. 385 t- iii. 69	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 48 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 382
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret enc mics, application to Washington	1. 239 i. 285 i. 331 i. 385 t- iii. 69 iv. 415	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Auber, attempts to relieve Fort
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington,	i. 239 i. 285 i. 881 i. 385 t- iii. 69 iv. 415 iv. 421	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 48 Daeke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Daethouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Aubey, attempts to relievo Fort Niagara, i. 266
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret enc mics, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington,	i. 239 i. 285 i. 381 i. 385 t- iii. 69 iii. 819 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Darmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Aubry, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 is defeated, i. 266
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington,	i. 239 i. 285 i. 381 i. 385 t- iii. 69 iii. 819 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darge, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Auber, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mics, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, CRAWFORD, Hugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes,	i. 239 i. 285 i. 881 i. 385 t- iii. 69 iii. 819 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 ge i. 48	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darks, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Darmouth, Lord, to General Gaze, i. 282 D'Aubry, attempts to relievo Fort Niagara, i. 266 is defeated, Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mics, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, forawroan, Hugh, brings a messay from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with,	1. 239 i. 285 i. 861 i. 385 t- iii. 69 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 ge i. 48 v. 68	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Aubre, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 267 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, CRAWFORD, Hugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, CROGNAN, George, sent from Pennsy	1. 239 i. 285 i. 861 i. 385 t- iii. 69 iii. 319 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 ge i. 48 v. 63	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darks, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Darmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'AUBEY, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, is defeated, Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 230
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, GRAWFORD, Hugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes, Greeks, treaty with, GROGIAN, Georgo, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians,	1. 239 i. 285 i. 861 i. 385 t- iii. 69 iii. 319 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 ge i. 48 v. 63	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Atbery, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 Davig, General, and Greene, iv. 296
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, Chawford, Hugh, brings a messag fron the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Croonan, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses,	1. 239 1. 2855 1. 3814 1. 3855 t- iii. 69 iv. 4215 iv. 4214 v. 294 ge i. 48 v. 63 d- i. 49 i. 140 i. 140	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Darmouth, Lord, to General Gaze, i. 282 D'Aubry, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 Davie, William Richardson, on mission of France, v. 305
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, appliention to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washi	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 381 i. 385 t. 385 t. 385 t. 385 iii. 69 iv. 4415 iv. 421 v. 294 se i. 48 v. 63 l. 49 i. 140 i. 140 i. 140	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 382 D'Aubers, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 is defeated, i. 267 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, William Richardson, on mission to France, Davis, Charles Augustus, on Wert-
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Croonan, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters,	1. 239 1. 285 1. 881 1. 385 1. 385 1. 385 1. 385 1. 381 1. 49 1. 49 1. 140 1. 140 1. 140 1. 140 1. 140	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 97 Darmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Aubex, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara. i. 266 Bayloson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 David, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, William Richardson, on mission to France, Davis, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington,
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, appliention to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, CRAWTORD, Hugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, CROGIAN, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter,	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 3811 i. 3855 t. 385 iii. 69 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 v. 68 d. 49 i. 140 i. 146 i. 148 i. 149 i. 148 i. 149	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Atbry, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 death of, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, William Richardson, on mission to France, Davis, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) i. 455
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mics, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, to Faraman and Manni tribes, Crawrord, Hugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Creeks, treaty with, Creeks treaty with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp with	1. 239 1. 2855 1. 881 1. 3855 1. 881 1. 385 1. 385 1. 381 1. 49 1. 421 1. 49 1. 140 1. 148 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 97 Darthouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'AUBEY, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davibsen, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davibson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 230 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, v. 305 Davie, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix.) Davis, Reyerend Samuel, apprecia-
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, CRAWFORD, Hugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, CROGNAN, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians,	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 831 i. 1855 i. 831 i. 1855 ii. 369 iii. 819 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 se i. 48 v. 63 il. 140 i. 146 i. 149 i. 148 i. 149 i. 149 h	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Darmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Aubry, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 death of, iv. 230 Davie, William Richardson, on mission to France, Davis, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Samuel, appreciation of Washington, i. 194
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Deparment, to Washington on his secret endings, appliention to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, endemore, Ilugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Crocillan, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes,	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 881 ii. 385 t. 385 iii. 69 iv. 421 iv. 421 v. 294 v. 63 d. 140 i. 140 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 148 i. 149 i. 149 i. 148 i. 149 i. 148 i. 148 i. 149 i. 148 i. 148 i. 149 i. 148 i.	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 382 D'Aubre, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Bavidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, William Richardson, on mission to France, Davis, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Samuel, appreciation of Washington, i. 194 Davior, Colonel Elias, takes John-
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, actends Washington, GRAWFORD, Hugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes, Greeks, treaty with, GROGHAN, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Groton River,	1. 239 1. 2855 1. 831 1. 385 1. 385 1. 381 1. 385 1. 481 1. 491 1. 491 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 149 1. 148 1. 148 1. 1832 1. 2832	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 98 D'Aurnoutri, Lord, to General Gaze, i. 282 D'Aubry, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 267 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 220 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, Charles Augustus, on Wertnuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Samuel, appreciation of Washington, i. 194 Davior, Colonel Elias, takes Johnson Itall, ii. 216
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Depar ment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, creak, treaty with, Crocanan, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Croton River, Crown Point, preparations against,	1. 239 1. 2855 i. 881 i. 3855 iiii. 69 iii. 819 iv. 421 v. 294 v. 63 d. 140 i. 140	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Aubery, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 death of, iv. 230 Davie, William Richardson, on mission to France, Davie, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Samnel, appreciation of Washington, son Hall, Davion, Colonel Elias, takes Johnson Hall, retires before Knyphausen, iv. 57
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Deparment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, Crawrorap, Hugh, brings a messay from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Creeks, treaty with, Croonax, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Croton River, Crown Point, preparations against, to be reduced,	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 881 i. 385 ii. 385 ii. 385 iii. 385 iii. 69 iii. 819 iv. 421 v. 294 gs v. 68 dd. i. 149 i	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 97 Darnsouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Aubex, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, is defeated, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 Davidson, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, William Richardson, on mission to France, Davis, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Samnel, appreciation of Washington, Santa Reverend Samnel, appreciation of Washington, Indix of Was
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Deparment, to Washington on his secret end mies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, Crawrorap, Hugh, brings a messay from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Creeks, treaty with, Croonax, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Croton River, Crown Point, preparations against, to be reduced,	1. 239 1. 2855 i. 881 i. 3855 iiii. 69 iii. 819 iv. 421 v. 294 v. 63 d. 140 i. 140	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Aubry, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 dath of, iv. 230 Davie, William Richardson, on mission to France, Davis, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Samuel, appreciation of Washington, i. 194 Davton, Colonel Elias, takes Johnson Hall, retires before Knyphausen, iv. 57 falls in with General Maxwell, iv. 58 fight at Springfield, iv. 63
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Deparment, to Washington on his secret endies, application to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, Crawrord, Hugh, brings a messag fron the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Croonan, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Croton River, Crown Point, preparations against, to be reduced, expedition against, surprised by Seth Warner, abandoned,	1. 239 1. 2855 1. 881 1. 3855 1. 881 1. 3856 1. 1. 491 1. 421 1. 420 1. 148 1. 149 1.	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Darmouth, Lord, to General Gaze, i. 282 D'Aubry, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 230 Davie, William Richardson, on mission to France, Davis, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Samuel, appreciation of Washington, i. 194 Davids, Reverend Samuel, appreciation of Washington, i. 194 Davids, General Maxwell, iv. 57 falls in with General Maxwell, iv. 57 falls in with General Maxwell, iv. 63 Deane, Mr., and French officers, iii. 415 Deane, Silas, returns to America, iii. 415
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Deparment, to Washington on his secret end mies, appliention to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, accompanies Maint tribes, Crawroran, Hugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Crocalan, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Croton River, Crown Point, preparations against, to be reduced, expedition against, surprised by Seth Warner, abandoned, shandoned by the Americans,	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 881 i. 3855 iiii. 69 iii. 810 iv. 421 v. 294 se v. 68 i. 49 i. 140 i. 140 i. 140 i. 140 h. 1. 1832 iv. 273 i. 406 ii. 262 ii. 390 i. 406 ii. 262 ii. 390	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darks, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 97 Darthoutru, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'AUBEY, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara. i. 266 is defeated, i. 267 Davisoon, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davisoon, General, at MeGowan's Ford, iv. 230 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix.) Davis, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, i. 455 Davis, Reverend Samuel, appreciation of Washington, i. 194 Davion, Colonel Elius, takes Johnson Hall, retires before Knyphausen, iv. 57 falls in with General Maxwell, iv. 58 fight at Springfield, iv. 58 flent at Springfield, iv. 58 Deane, Mr., and French officers, iii. 415 Deane, Silas, returns to America, iii. 415 Deanen, Captain, captured by
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Deparment, to Washington on his secret end mies, applieation to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, Grawforn, Hugh, brings a messaffron the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Croonax, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Croton River, Crown Point, preparations against, to be reduced, expedition against, surprised by Seth Warner, abandoned, abandoned by the Americans, Crucer, Lieutenant Colonel, col	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 881 ii. 69 iii. 69 iii. 819 iii. 819 iii. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 i. 140 i. 140 i. 148 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 158 i. 832 t. 273 i. 402 i. 241 i. 200 ii. 262 ii. 390 n.	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Darmouth, Lord, to General Gaze, i. 282 D'Aubry, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davider, defeated, iv. 220 Davider, death of, iv. 220 Davider, death of, iv. 220 Davider, death of, iv. 220 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 296 Davie, Charles Augustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix) Davis, Reverend Samuel, appreciation of Washington, i. 455 Davis, Reverend Samuel, appreciation of Washington, i. 194 Davider, General Maxwell, iv. 57 falls in with General Maxwell, iv. 63 Deane, Mr., and French officers, iii. 415 Deane, Silas, returns to America, Deanon, Captain, captured by General Carleton, ii. 150
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Deparment, to Washington on his secret end mies, appliention to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, are with the Manni tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Crocnan, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Croton River, arrives the services, crown Point, preparations against, to be reduced, expedition against, surprised by Seth Warner, abandoned, abandoned, abandoned by the Americans, Cavorae, Lieutenant Colonel, commands expedition to the distri	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 881 i. 3855 iiii. 69 iii. 819 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 sv. 63 i. 49 i. 140 i. 140 i. 140 h. 1. 158 i. 492 i. 48 i. 140 2. 1241 i. 200 ii. 262 ii. 390 net	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Atbrough, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 death of, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 305 Davie, General Magustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Sammel, appreciation of Washington, iv. 57 falls in with General Maxwell, iv. 53 fight at Springfield, iv. 63 Deane, Mr., and French officers, iii. 41 Deane, Silas, returns to America, Deane, Mr., and French officers, iii. 41 Deaneson, Captain, captured by General Carleton, Dearborn, Major, receives Lady
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Deparment, to Washington on his secret end mies, appliention to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, accompanies Washington, CRAWFORD, Hugh, brings a messag from the Miami tribes, Creeks, treaty with, CROGHAN, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Croton River, Crown Point, preparations against, to be reduced, expedition against, surprised by Seth Warner, abandoned, abandoned by the Americans, Cruer, Lieutenant Colonel, commands expedition to the distript of Ninety Six	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 881 ii. 69 iii. 69 iii. 819 iii. 819 iii. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 i. 140 i. 140 i. 148 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 149 i. 158 i. 832 t. 273 i. 402 i. 241 i. 200 ii. 262 ii. 390 n.	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Atbrough, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 death of, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 305 Davie, General Magustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Sammel, appreciation of Washington, iv. 57 falls in with General Maxwell, iv. 53 fight at Springfield, iv. 63 Deane, Mr., and French officers, iii. 41 Deane, Silas, returns to America, Deane, Mr., and French officers, iii. 41 Deaneson, Captain, captured by General Carleton, Dearborn, Major, receives Lady
Mount Vernon, a visitor at Mount Vernon, accompanies Washington, at Mount Vernon, appointed to the Hospital Deparment, to Washington on his secret end mies, appliention to Washington, accompanies Washington, accompanies Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, attends Washington, are with the Manni tribes, Creeks, treaty with, Crocnan, George, sent from Pennsy vania to treat with the Indians, appointed commissioner, his reverses, to Governor Morris, enlists Indians and hunters, letter, arrives at Braddock's camp wit Indians, dangers and escapes, Croton River, arrives the services, crown Point, preparations against, to be reduced, expedition against, surprised by Seth Warner, abandoned, abandoned, abandoned by the Americans, Cavorae, Lieutenant Colonel, commands expedition to the distri	1. 239 i. 2855 i. 881 i. 3855 iiii. 69 iii. 819 iv. 415 iv. 421 v. 294 sv. 63 i. 49 i. 140 i. 140 i. 140 h. 1. 158 i. 492 i. 48 i. 140 2. 1241 i. 200 ii. 262 ii. 390 net	Dallas, Mr., interview with Genet, v. 160 Danbury, expedition against, iii. 47 destroyed by the British, iii. 43 Darke, Colonel, with General St. Clair, v. 97 at St. Clair's defeat, v. 99 Dartmouth, Lord, to General Gage, i. 282 D'Atbrough, attempts to relieve Fort Niagara, i. 266 Davidson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 69 Davidson, General, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 229 death of, iv. 229 death of, iv. 296 Davie, General, and Greene, iv. 305 Davie, General Magustus, on Wertmuller's portrait of Washington, (Appendix,) Davis, Reverend Sammel, appreciation of Washington, iv. 57 falls in with General Maxwell, iv. 53 fight at Springfield, iv. 63 Deane, Mr., and French officers, iii. 41 Deane, Silas, returns to America, Deane, Mr., and French officers, iii. 41 Deaneson, Captain, captured by General Carleton, Dearborn, Major, receives Lady

DE BARRAS, arrival at the Chesa	to Washington on his arrival, ill. 416
peake, tv. 323	correspondence with Washington, iii 410
noble conduct, iv. 321	plan of operations, iii. 417
DE BERDT, Dennis, on the mission of	off Point Judith, iii. 419
Lord Howe, ii. 251	opposite Newport, iii. 420
Deborre, General, iii 182	arrival of Lord Howe's fleet, lii. 420 resignation, iii, 196	stands out to sea, iii. 421
Debt of the United States, v. 54	manœuvres of the fleets, iii. 421
DE BUYSSON, aide-de-camp to De	return to Newport, iii. 42:
Kalb, iv. 89	to Sullivan on his intention of pro-
De Fermois, at Ticonderoga, iii. 88	ceeding to Boston, iii. 429
DE GRASSE, Count de, bound for the	protest of American officers, iii, 42-
Chesapeake, iv. 308	proceeds to Boston. iii. 424 arrives in the Chesapeake, iv. 318	to Congress, explanatory of his con-urges Lafayette to attack York-	duct, iii. 430 town, iv. 322	considerate letter from Washington, iii. 439 action with British fleet, iv. 323	sails for the West Indies, iii. 442 junction with De Barras, iv. 323	proclamation to the French Canareceives Washington, iv. 325	dians, iii. 449 arrival of Admiral Digby, iv. 326	arrival on the coast of Georgia, iii. 479 consents to remain, iv. 327	unsuccessful siege of Savannah, iii. 451 departure, iv. 358	wounded, iii. 4%
DE Heister, Lieutenant General, on	sails for France, iii. 48
Long Island, ii. 298	Destouches, Chevalier, to send ships reaches Flatbush, ii. 298	to the Chesapeake, iv. 257
cannonades Colonel Hand, ii. 302	encounters the British fleet, iv. 269 advances against Whiteplains, ii. 369	DEUXPONTS, Count de, wounded, iv. 34 treatment of Lord Stirling, ii. 459	DE VAUDREUIL, fortifies himself at DE KALB, Baron, at Philadelphia, iii. 133	Montreal, i. 280 appointed major general, iii. 276	threatened by General Amherst, i. 280 appointed to the Canada expedition, iii. 324	eapitulates, i. 281 sent to reinforce Lincoln, iv. 30	Dick, Dr., attends Washington, v. 313 advance retarded, iv. 83	Dickinson, drafts a petition to the halts at Deep River, iv. 81	king and an address to the peo-applications for aid, iv. 81	ple of Canada, i. 369 meeting with Gates, iv. 84	Dickinson, General Philemon, galat the battle of Camden, iv. 87	lant exploit of, lil. ( death of, iv. 89	to watch the enemy, iii. 399
De la Croix, M., complaints against	alarm signals, iii. 44.
the American government, v. 42	Dickinson, Major, slain at Monmouth
Delancev, Lieutenant Governor, i. 145	Court House, iii. 401
De Lancey, Oliver, recruiting on	Dieskau, Baron de, takes post at Long Island, ii. 344	Crown Point, i. 201
DELANCEY, Colonel, loyalists, iv. 273	mortally wounded, i. 20.
surprises Colonel Greene, 1v. 211	Digby, Admiral, on negotiations for
DELAPLACE, Captain, surprised by	peace, iv. 371
Ethan Allen, i. 435	Digges, Mr., i. 298 sent prisoner to Hartford, i. 406	Dinwiddle, Governor, i. 67
Delawares, Shawnees, and Mingoes in	calls upon the governors of the council at Logstown, i. 64	other provinces to make common
DE LEVI, takes post at Oswegatchie, i. 267	cause against the foe, i. 99 rallies the French forces, i. 278	convenes the House of Burgesses, i. 9. approaches Quebee, i. 278	to Washington, about Captain lands at Point-au-Tremble, i. 278	Mackay, i. 11-is attacked by Murray, i. 279	orders Washington to Will's Creek, i. 130
repulses him, i. 279	his perplexities, i. 130 opens trenches before Quebec, i. 279	refuses to give up the French pris-retreat, i. 279	oners, i. 133
Democratic Society, formation of, v. 164	efforts to seeure Indian allies, i. 141 Democratic Societies, Washington	convenes the Assembly, i. 19:
concerning, v. 199	conduct to Washington, i. 198
Democrats, party formed, v. 82	unsatisfactory relations with Wash-
Denison, Colonel, at the battle of	ington, i. 220
Wyoming, iii, 434	his interference with Washington, i. 22
De Ramsey, commands the garrison	pique against Washington, i. 229
at Quebec, i. 278	ungracious reply to Washington, i. 233
D'Estaing, Count, arrival with French	prejudice against Washington, i. 233 fleet iii. 415	conduct towards Washington i 23

sails for England, 1, 239	Du l'ortail, General, arges me evaccharacter, i. 239	uation of Charleston, iv. 49
Dismal Swamp, i. 295	recommittee, iv. 282
Dismal Swamp Company, i. 296	Durham, Bishop of, his state and
District of Columbia ceded to the	splender, i. 2
United States, v. 63	DURKEE, Captain, joins Putnam, i. 402
Dobb's Ferry, British at, ii. 377	, , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , works thrown up, iv. 75 Donop, Count, at Long Island, il. 295 Ε.
	2.4
	East India Company, affected by the decey out any other attacks Fort Mercer, iii. 272	ships large quantities to the colonies, i. 346 repulsed, iii. 272	ships sent back unladen, i. 347 death of, iii. 273	Easton, James, in the expedition
Donop's Yagers surprised, iii. 440	against Ticonderoga, i. 404
Dorchester Heights, to be fortified, i. 423	Easton, Colonel, at Ticonderoga, ii. 38 preparations to occupy, ii. 171	EATON, General, reinforces Greene, iv. 243 letters relative to, ii. 172	at Guilford Court House, iv. 245 fortification of, ii. 173	Eden, William, commissioner from effect on the British, ii. 175	Great Britain, iii. 379 cannonaded by the British, ii. 174	disposition towards America, iii. 380
DRUCOUR, Chevalier, in command of	Edmonson, Captain, in command of Louisburg, i. 245	Fort Pitt, i. 331 defence and surrender, i. 245	Elizabethtown, Livingston's account of, ii. 240 surprised by the British, iv. 6
DUANE, Mr., controversy with Gates, iii. 62
Duché, Mr., chaplain to the General	Elizabethtown Point, descent of Brit- ish. iv. 57
Congress, i. 365
officiates, i. 365	Elliot, Lieutenant Governor, en effect of prayer, i. 366	commission concerning André, iv. 139
DUCOUDRAY, Monsieur, iii. 41	ELLSWORTH, in the mission to France, v. 257
DUER, William, to Schuyler, iii. 124	EMERSON, Rev. William, description
Dumas, Count Matthew, accom-	of American camp, ii. 7
panies Washington, iv. 118	on the labors of the army, ii. 17
Washington's reception by the peo-	discipline in camp, ii. 18
ple, iv. 118	England prepares for military opera-on the French camp, iv. 250	tions in America, i. 137 to Washington with pamphlet, v. 268	plan of campaign, i. 137
DUNDAR, Colonel, i. 165	detains vessels bound for France, v. 176
his terror, i. 186	impressment of American seamen, v. 177
Dundas, Colonel, accompanies Ar-	her infatuation, i. 389
nold, iv. 192	restrictive policy, i, 299 commands at Gloucester Point, iv. 328	English claims to the Ohio Valley, i. 44 foraging, iv. 831	English officers and Indian squaws, i. 159 capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 252	luxurious habits, i. 164
DUNLAP, William, portrait of Wash-	their baggage and camp equipage, i. 165 brayery, i. 179
ington, (appendix.)  Dunmore, Earl of, Governor of Vir-	Exos, Colonel, leaves Arnold with his command, ii. 88
	EESKINE, General Sir William, on Long Island, ii. 295
haughty bearing, i. 339 friendly relations with Washington, i. 340 social position, i. 348	in the expedition against Dan-dissolves the House of Burgesses, i. 349	bury, iii. 47
seizes the military munitions of	drives back the Americans, iii. 51
Virginia, i. 399	Eutaw Springs, battle of, iv. 335 timely concession, i. 399	Evans, Rev. Mr., anecdote of, iv. 330 proclaims martial law, ii. 78	EVERETT, Edward, Washington on exercises martial law, ii. 110	Dorchester Heights, ii. 174 to Howe, proposing a servile war, ii. 124	Ewing, Colonel, passage of British Washington's opinion of, ii. 124	ships up the Hudson, il. 348
DUNMORE, Lady, ball in honor of, i. 350	EWING, General, prevented by the ice, ii. 456
Duplessis, Captain Mauduit, at Fort	EYRE, Lieutenant Colonel, at New Mercer, iii. 271	London, iv. 813 attentions to Count Donop, iii. 273 1 1101

F.	takes post on Kir g's Mountain, defeated, iv. 17
¥ •	defeated, iv. 17 Fermois, Brigadier General, accom-
FAIRFAX, Bryan, fox hunting, 3, 217	panies Gates, iii. 3 to Washington, advising a petition, i, 355	FERSEN, Count, to hurry on the to Washington, on the resolutions, i. 356	French troops, iv. 32 to Washington, in reply, i. 859	Fire-ships, sent to destroy Wolfe's effect of the battle of Lexington, i. 399	ileet, i. 26 visits Washington, iii, 353	Fishburn, Benjamin, nomination of, v. 2 Washington's reasons for, v. 2 to Washington on his courtesy, iii. 354	Washington's reasons for, v. 2 subsequent history, (note,) iii. 354	Fishing in Virginia, i. 29
FAIRFAX, Colonel, to Washington, i. 216 FAIRFAX, George William, fox hunt-	Fishing Creek, defeat of Sumter, iv. 9
	FITZGERALD, Colonel, at Princeton, il. 47 FITZHUGH, Colonel, i. 13 departs for England, i. 373	Fing, Major, killed, iv. 27
in England, iv. 418	FLEURY, Louis, iii. 18
(note,) iv. 442	presented with a horse by Congress, iii. 19
FAIRFAX, Thomas, Lord, his character	Col., at Fort Millin, iii. 28 and history, i. 30	promoted, iii. 25
his style of living, i. 41	inspector, iil. 85 organizes a troop of horse, i. 195	at the storming of Stony Point, iii. 46 calls out the militia to defend Win-	Fontainebleau, treaty of, i. 323 chester, i. 195	Fornes, Brigadier General, to reduce menaced by Indians, i. 213	Fort Duquesne, i. 24 decides to remain, i. 214 occupations, fox hunting, i. 291	detained at Philadelphia, i. 25 respect for Washington, i. 25 occupations, fox hunting, i. 291 hunting, i. 317	FORDES, Gilbert, conspirator, 1. 25:
his last days, iv. 419	paid for arms, ii. 231
FAIRFAX, William, i. 21	Foreign others, applicants for admis-his counsels to Washington, i, 116	sion to the patriot army, iii. 40
Fairfield destroyed by the British, iii. 463	embarrassments about, iii. 41
Fair Haven ravaged by the British, iii. 428	Forest, Captain, il. 451
Fairlie, Major, anecdote, iv. 439	Forster, Captain, besieges the Ce-
Falls of Montmoreney, i. 271	dars, li. 219
Falmouth destroyed by the British, ii. 71	eaptures the post, ii. 219
Fancuil Hall, British troops quartered in, i. 817	Fort Anne captured, iv. 157 in, i. 817 meetings at, i. 361	Fort Chamblee taken by Majors Brown and Livingston, ii. 83
FAUCHET, Mr., succeeds Genet, v. 189	Fort Clinton, its strength, iii. 228 intercepted despatch, v. 221	attack of the British, iii. 227
exonerates Randolph, v. 224	captured, iii, 229
FAULKNER, Captain, with General St.	Fort Constitution, ii. 217
Clair, v. 97	its garrison, fi. 217, 323
FAUQUIER, Francis, appointed to suc-	commanded by West Point, ii. 381
ceed Dinwiddie, i. 241	evacuated, iii. 230
FAUQUIER, Lieutenant Governor, dissolves the assembly, i. 306	Fort Cumberland, i. 128
Federalist, The, 1. 306 Solves the assembly, 1. 306 v. 5	Fort Defiance, iii. 103 erected by Wayno, v. 207
Federalists spring up, v. 82	Fort Duquesne, its site, i. 70
Fellows, General, opposite Saratoga	completed, i. 117
Ford, iii, 242	Washington advises a rapid attack, i. 164 opens fire on the British, iii. 246	report of scouts, i. 170
Felton, Professor, correction of error,	to be reduced, i. 242
(note,) ii. 11	abandoned by the French, i. 263
Fenno's Gazette, Adams' papers, v. 91	name changed to Fort Pitt, i. 263
FERGUSON, Dr. Adam, secretary to	Fort Edward, i. 200 commissioners from Great Britain, iii. 879	Fort Frontenae captured, i. 250
ain, iii. 879 Fenguson, Major Patrick, commands	Fort George captured by Carleton, iv. 157 Fort George at Coram taken, iv. 182 expedition to Little Egg Harbor, iii. 438	Fort George at Coram taken, iv. 182 Fort Griswold taken by the British, iv. 314 massacres American infantry, iii. 439	Fort Independence, ii. 218 march from Savannah, iv. 44	abandoned, ii. 877 described, iv. 47	evacuated by the Americans, iii, 230 on violence to women, iv. 48	evacuated by the British, iii. 256 detached to North Carolina, iv. 168	Fort Johnson, ii. 272 takes post at Gilbertown, iv. 171	Fort Lafayette, cannonaded, iii. 460 issues an address, iv. 173	eapitulates, iii. 460 retreats, iv. 173	Fort Lee, ii. 361

menaced,	ii. 378 j	indignities towards America,		26 6 preparations to abanden,	ii. 403	threatened war with,	v.	271 retreat from,	ii. 430	Francis, Colonel,	iii.	104
Fort Loudoun,	i. 224			108
	iii. 259			109
Fort Mercer,	iii. 270	FRANKLIN, Benjamin, arrives at	*	100 garrison of,				150
Washington on importance of,	iii. 270	Fredericktown,		152 attacked by Count Donop,	iii. 272	opinion of Braddock and the expe-garrisen increased,	iii. 285	dition,		152
taken by Cernwallis,	iii. 294	departs for Laneaster,		153
Fort Mifflin,	iii. 259	sends conveyances to Braddock,	i.	182 garrison of,	iii. 270	observation on Braddock's defeat,	i.	189
repulses naval attack,	iii. 273	in London, as American agent,	i.	304
	iii. 285	before the House of Commons,		312 garrison increased,	iii. 285 attacked by Howe,	1117 200	en committee to confer with Wash		7.4
evacuated,	iii. 287	ington,		74
Fort Montgomery,	ii. 217	on committee to confer with Lord	ı	00.
its garrison,	11. 214	Howe,		825
the chevaux-de-frise,	iii. 223	acquaintance with Howe,	ii.	325 stormed by the British,	iii. 228	to Howe, referring to past acquaint	-
Fort Moultrie surrendered,	iv. 50	ance,		325
Fort Motte, taken by Marion :		and Lord Howe, anecdote,		327
	iv. 297			86I
Lee,
	i. 114, 120	anecdote,	IV.	456
capitulation of,	i, 122	Fraser, General, in the invasion
Fort Niagara, besieged,	i. 262	from Canada.		87
surrenders,	i. 267	at Three Mile Point,	iii.	94
Fort Ninety Six, siege of,	iv. 297	in Ticonderoga,	iii.	105
Fort Pitt,	i. 263	pursues the Americans,	iii.	105 blockaded by Indians,	i. 298, 881	overtakes and attacks St. Clair's Fort Schuyler, invested by Col-	onal	rear-gnard,	111	108
	iii. 149			235
St. Leger,				237
its strength and garrison,	iii. 150 summoned to surrender,	iii. 150			239
news of relief,	iii. 15I			241 expedition against the Onondag	as, iii. 4 56	death,	iii.	24I
Fort Stanwix, invested by Col-	onel	burial of,	iii.	242
St. Leger,	iii. 149	FRAZER, General, at Three Rivers,	ii.	224
Fort Washington,	ii. 218	captures General Thompson,		225 chevaux-de-frise sunk near by,		Frazier, John, an Indian trader,		51
	ii. 360	at Turtle Creek,		69
strongly garrisoned, cannonade at,	ii. 366	at Venango,	i.
menaced,	ii. 877	Washington with,	i.	83 question of evacuating,	ii. 378	FRAUNCES, Samuel, steward of the summoned to surrender,	ii. 394	Presidential household,	v.	16 amount of garrison,	ii, 395	Freemasons' Tavern, Washington'	9
British attack,	ii. 396	head-quarters,	iii.	. 5 surrendered,	ii. 399	French claim the Ohio Valley,	i.
number of prisoners, (note,)	ii. 401	prepare for hostilities,	i.
Fort Watson, taken by Lee and		lannch an armed vessel on Lake		00
	iv. 296	Erie,		ro.
rion,			i.
Fort William Henry, attacked	ру	influence with Indians increasing,	i.
Montealm,	i. 236	deserters,	i.
captured and destroyed,	i. 236	Creek,	i.
Forty Fort, Colonel Zebulon Bu	tler	surprised by Washington,	j.	106
in command of	iii. 433	relax their vigilance,	i.	128
Fox, opinion of George Johnston	e. iii. 380	bravado, i.		169
Fox-hunting in Virginia,	i. 53, 290	attack Braddock's advance guard,		177
Fox, Captain, secretary to Earl	of	defeat Braddock,		176
			1.	100
Dunmore,	i. 340	force engaged,		188
France, treaty with the Uni		attack General Johnson's camp,		202
States,	iii. 368	menace Forts Ontario and Oswego	, 1.	229 ratified by Congress,	iii. 370	fire their camp and retreat,	i.	217 rejoicing in United States,	iii. 370	defeated by regulars and Ir dians,	i.	267 declares war against England,	v. 144	during the war,	i.	301
searcity in,	v. 176	fleet, arrival of,	iii.	415 violates treaty with the Un		off Sandy Hook,		416
States,	v. 243	off Peint Judith,		419
	10		***

return to Newport, iii. 422	correspondence with Washington scattered by a storm, iii. 423		2 arrive at Ehode Island, iv. 69	connection with the burning of sail from Newport, iv. 261	Falmouth, ii.	7 officers, their camp, iv. 250	sails for England, ii.
reception of Washington, iv. 280	to Lord Dartmouth, ii.	7 troops cross to Stony Point, iv. 311	GALL, Brigadier General, commands move toward Virginia, iv. 311		23 pass through Philadelphia, iv. 316	GAMBIER, Admiral, commands the revolution, v. 35	British fleet, iii.	12
FRENEAU, Philip, edits the National	Gamele, Captain, fii.
Gazette, v. 106	GANSEVOORT, Colonel, commands and Hamilton, v. 125	Fort Schuyler, iii.	15
FRESTEL, M., arrives with George	sends for succor, iii.
Washington Lafayette, v. 229	Garth, Brigadier General, expedition departs from New York, v. 264	against Connecticut, iii.	46
FROTHINGHAM, Richard, jr., history of		15
the siege of Boston, (note,) i. 411	before Fort Duquesne, i.	17
FRY, Colonel, makes a treaty with the		35
Delawares, Shawnees, and Min-	birth, i.	35 goes, on behalf of Virginia, i. 64		38
Fry, Colonel Joshua, i. 94	serves under Cornwallis, i.	38 death of, i. 113	captain of an independent company 38
	in Braddock's campaign, i.	35
G.	with General Monckton in the West
G G		38
Gabrouski, Count, in the expedition		35 to Fort Montgomery, iii. 226		38
his death, iii. 229	promotion, i.	88
Gadsben, Colonel, commands Fort		38
Johnson, ii. 272 Gadsden, Lieutenant Governor, in		35
Charleston, iv. 46		35
GAGE, General Thomas, i. 173		35 crosses the Monongahela with tho		40 advance, i. 173		1.
wounded, i. 173	services, ii.
to take command of the siege of	estrangement from Washington, ii.
Fort Niagara, i. 266	sent to Congress with Canadian military commander of Massachu-	despatches, ii.	20
setts, 1, 352		20
history of, i. 352	appointed to the command in Can-	- erroneous opinion of Americans, i. 350	ada, ii.	225 issues a proclamation, i. 353	question of command with Schuyperplexities, i. 361		26
at a loss how to act, i. 861		26
on the feeling in Berkshire County, i. 362	at Ticonderoga, ii.	26:
on the General Congress, i. 362	question of command settled, ii.	26 military measures, i. 374	strengthens his works, ii.	390 orders all munitions of war to Bos-	in New Jersey with reinforcements, it.
ton, i. 375	joins Washington, ii.	44( fortifies Boston Neek, i. 375	declines to co-operate with Wash-to Dartmonth, i. 375		11
issues writs for a general election, i. 382		44 countermands the writs, i. 382	question of command, iii.
enters into explanations with the	to Mr. Lovell on the command, iii.
Assembly, i. 383	petulant letter to Washington, iii.	5 critical situation, i. 383	to Mr. Lovell, charging Washington	7.4
resolves to destroy the magazine at	with sectional partialities, iii.
Concord, i. 390	sets out for Philadelphia, iii.
astonishment, i. 397 Issues a proclamation, i. 419	before Congress, iii.
astonishment at the fortifications	ordered to withdraw, iii. commands at Ticonderoga, iii.	3 on Breed's Hill, i. 427		3 determines to carry the works, i. 428	disappointment, iii. tendered the office of adjutant gen-	ο.
calls a council of war i. 428	eral, iii.	3
In Boston, li. 5	rejects the proposal, iii.	8 committee appointed to confer wit	h	change of feeling toward Greene,	iv.	186 him,	iii. 37	reception by the General Assembly to command at Ticonderoga,	iii. 37	of Virginia,	iv.	186 arrives at Albany,	iii. 38	presides over committee of offi-

	iii. 123	cers,	iv	380
on the alert for a command,				050 urged for command of Northern		GENET, Edmund Charles, minister to	٠	* * * *
Department,	iii. 126	the United States,		146 appointed by Congress,	iii. 126	lands at Charleston,		147 to Washington, in high spirits,	iii. 175	issues commissions for privateers,	v.	147 conduct to Schuyler,	iii. 176	journey to Philadelphia,	v.	147
correspondence with Burgoyne,	iii. 176	described,		148 torrespondence with Burgoyne,	iii. 177	reception at Philadelphia,		149
anecdote, (note,) at Bemis' Heights,	333 001 at Bemis' Heights,	iii. 251	presents his letter of credence,		152 provokes Arnold,	iii. 215	diplomatic speech,	v.	$15^{\circ}$ jealousy of Arnold,	iii. 217	takes umbrage,	v.	155 quarrel with Arnold,	iii. 217	dissatisfaction with government,	v.	150 bides his time,	iii. 235	demands the release of two Amer-
	iii. 236		37	157
begins the battle,		icans, plan of attack.	iii. 236	case of the Little Sarah,		160
sends to recall Arnold,	iii. 238	at New York,	v.	172
in Burgoyne's camp,	iii. 241	grievances of,	v.	178 measures to insure a surrender,	iii, 242	complains of Jefferson,	v.	178 terms of Burgoyne's capitulation,	iii. 250	appeal to the people,		17-
	iii, 251			158
number of troops.		to Jefferson on enlistments, humanity and forbearance,	iii. 252	his recall,		189 meeting with Burgoyne,	iii, 252	Gentlemen Associators,		220 appearance of his camp,	iii. 252	George II., anecdote,	i.	111 elation at his success,	iii, 278	on Lord Howe,	ii.	189 disrespect to Washington,	iii. 278			86
indianate waintawa Washing		Coordin joing the lengue		409 indisposition to reinforce Washing	222 000	Georgia joins the league, ton,	iii, 289			442
president of the Board of War,	iii. 301			445
in the ascendant,	iii, 315	Gerard, Monsieur, arrival of,	iii.	415
the Conway letter,	iii. 315	Germain, Lord George, plan of invaperplexities,	iii. 316		iii.	S( to Washington on the Conway let				356
	iii, 317
ter,		Germantown, Washington's camp at,
projects an invasion of Canada,	iii. 322			259
correspondence with Washington,	111. 323			262
at Yorktown,	iii, 323	Wayne's attack,	iii.	26:
on Stark,	iii. 324			264
to Washington on the Conway cor		panie in the American army,		264
	iii. 326			26
respondence,
to Washington concerning Con				266
way,	iii. 331			260
to Wilkinson about the Conway let	- [	Wayne on,	iii.	-260
ter,	iii. 340		iii.	26
reconciliation with Wilkinson,	iii. 841			26 to resume command of the Northe				268
	iii. 365
Department,				268
sent to Danbury,	iii. 436	Gerry, Elbridge, anecdote of War-to command the Southern Depart		ren,		439
ment,	iv. 69	suggested to accompany Gen. Lee,	ii.	26 meeting with De Kalb,	iv. 84	envoy to France,	v.	268
march to Camden,	iv. 85	GIBBON, Lieutenant, leads forlors amount of force under,	iv. 86			467 40
encounters Cornwallis,	iv. 87	GILES, Mr., moves resolutions con-	- council of war,	iv. 87	cerning Hamilton,		135 battle of Camden,	iv. 87	speech concerning Washington's	3 retreats,	iv. 88	administration,	v.	249 proceeds towards Charlotte,	iv. 90	GIMAT, Lieutenant Colonel, to lead makes a stand at Hillsborough,	iv. 92	the advance	iv	346
		the advance,		010
to Washington on his defeat,		Gist, Christopher, despatched to ex-altered fortunes,	iv. 156	plore the Ohio,	i.
collects his army at Hillsborough,	1v. 183	threatened by traders,	i.
advances to Charlotte,	iv. 184	visits the Shawners on the Scioto,	i,	5 sympathizing letter from Washing	-	his reception at Muskingum,	i.
ton,	iv. 184		i.	5.
•		1 7		٠.

forms an alliance with two Miami	to Lee on crossing the Hudson, il. 405
Tribes, 1. 52	GREAT TREE, at the seat of govern-returns to the Shawnee town, i. 53	nient, v. 82 is deterred from descending to	Great Britain, aggressive measures
Great Falls, i. 53	towards the United States, v. 196 returns across Kentucky, i. 54	excitement on account of, v. 190 arrives at his home on the banks of	treaty with ratified, v. 236
the Yadkin, i. 55	Great Meadows, i. 105, 120 his home has been desolated by In-	affair of the, i. 121, 126 dians, but his family are saved, i. 55	GREENE, Colonel Christopher, comrejoins them, i. 55	mands Fort Mercer, iii. 270 proceeds to survey the lands of the	repulses Count Donop, iii. 272
Ohio Company, i. 57	receives thanks of Congress, ili. 275 builds a fort at Shurtce's Creek, i. 65	surprised by Delancey, iv. 274 commences a settlement near Lau-	death and history of, iv. 274
rel Hill, i. 65	GREENE, Nathaniel, appointed brigaaccompanies Washington, i. 69	dier general, i. 414
at Murdering Town, i. 84	commanding Rhode Island troops, ii. 7 crosses the Allegany River, i. 87	birth and parentage, ii. 7 hands and feet frozen, i. 88	early education, ii. 8 joins Washington, i. 105	military taste, ii. 8 addresses Washington, ii. S under Major General Lee, ii. 18 to co-operate with Rodney, iii. 181	on the destruction of Falmouth, ii. 72 skirmishes, iii. 304	respect for Franklin, ii. 74
Gloncester Point fortified, iv. 527	veneration for Washington, ii. Si
GLOVER, General, with Massachu-	sympathizes with Washington, ii. 128
setts regiment, ii. 311	to Henry Ward on the disposition harasses the British, ii. 363	to disband, ii. 128 crosses the Delaware, ii. 449	cheerfulness, ii. 128 to reinforce Schuyler, iii. 117	stationed on Long Island, ii. 193 to move to Red Bank, iii. 294	pushes the works, ii. 219
Goodi, Captain, takes a message to	meets Alexander Hamilton, ii. 237
Magaw, ii. 809	becomes acquainted, ii. 239
Gouvion, Colonel, reconnoitres the	at Brooklyn, ii. 292
British posts, iv. 162	illness, ii, 293
Grafton, Duke of, resigns, i. 327	a soldier's yearnings for home, ii. 322
Graham, Sergeant, employed by	relative to abandoning New York, ii. 830
Governor Tryon, ii. 230	on the retreat from New York,
Granby captured by Lee, iv. 297	(note,) ii. 334
Grant, Major, foothardiness, i. 259	to Washington offering aid, ii. 357 defeated, i. 260	promoted, ii. 347 misrepresentations of America, i. 389	attack on the Brilish frigates, ii. 366 his braggart speech, i. 390	precautions against the enemy, ii. 377
Grant, General, on Long Island, ii. 295	to Washington against abandoning drives in the picket, ii. 801	Fort Washington, ii, 378 pushes Stirling, ii. 305	reinforces Fort Washington, ii. 392 warns Rahl of the attack, ii. 450	reinforces Magaw, ii. 394 commands expedition against St.	on the movements of Lee, ii. 425
Lucia, iii. 442	arder for the attack on Trenton, ii. 418 commands the right wing, iii. 260	harasses the enemy's advance, ii. 472
Graves, Admiral, connection with	at Morristown, iii. 4
the burning of Falmouth, ii. 73	despatched to Philadelphia, iii. 28 arrives at New York, iv. 73	to repair to Red Bank, iii. 294 off the capes of Virginia, iv. 322	inspects the Highland forts, iii. 66 action with De Grasse, iv. 823	advances to the relief, iii. 192 bears away for New York. iv. 324	desperate conflict, iii. 193
Gray's Elegy, anecdote of Wolfe, i. 274	at the battle of Germantown, iii. 264
GRAYDON, Alexander, at New York, ii. 266	on exploit of Lafayette, iii. 299 characterizes Mifflin, ii. 266	appointed quartermaster-general, iii. 360 appearance of Maryland troops, ii. 267	detached to flank the enemy, iii. 394
Pennsylvania troops, Ii. 267	repulses the enemy, iii. 398
Connecticut light horse, ii. 267	detached to the expedition against at the American camp. iii. 82	Rhode Island, iii. 418 account of Wayne, iii. 84 account of Wayne, iii. 84 shabby clothing of the troops, iii. 84	interview with D'Estaing, iii. 423
Grayson, Colonel, reconnoitring. ii. 311	in command at Short Hills, iv. 62

		1 777 1
fight at Springfield.	iv. 64	to Washington on the battle of Eu-difficulty with Congress,	iv. 76	taw Springs, iv. 3: resignation accepted,	iv. 76	Washington in the dance, iv. 45 death of, iv. 44 presides over board of general o	iv. 134 mosts the British commissioners		Green Mountain Boys, i. 46 fresh corps to be raised, ii. 8
meets the British commissioners, ordered to West Point,	iv. 152	elect Warner lieutenant colonel, ii.
appointed to command the south		arrival at camp, ii. 5	56
ern army,	iv. 156	arrival at camp, ii. 5 Greenway Court, i. 4	11 arrives at Charlotte,	iv. 154	menaced by Indians, i. 21	13 delicacy to Gates,	iv. 185	Greeg, Colonel, in quest of Indians, iii. 16	ŝί to Washington on Gates,	iv. 185	Grenville, George, advises Ameri-	• number of troops,	iv. 156	ean taxation, i. 30	03 military aphorisms,	iv. 187	dismissed from the Cabinet, i. 31 state of the country,	iv. 157	explanation of British measures, v. 19 reorganizes the army,	iv. 188	GREY, Major General Sir Charles, at Cheraw Hills,	iv. 189	sent to surprise Wayne, iii. 20	00 to Washington on the state of th		presses the American troops, iii. 26 army,	iv. 189	on a ravaging expedition, iii. 42	28 to Washington on the battle of th	e	surprises Baylor's dragoons, iii, 42
Cowpens,	iv. 226	raised to the peerage, iii. 44
hastens to Morgan's camp,	iv. 227	Gridley, Colonel, commanding ar-to Huger on Cornwallis's move	•	tillery, i. 42	20
ments,	iv. 227	reconnoitres Charlestown Neck, i. 4:	23
his Fabian policy,	iv. 228	accompanies detachment for Bun-disposition of his troops,	iv. 228	ker's Hill, i. 46	24
Mrs. Steele, anecdote,	in 929	plans fortifications, i. 4:	25 at Guilford Court House,	iv. 233	superintends fortification of Dorsummons a council of war,	17, 250	chester Heights, ii. 17	74 amount of force,	iv. 233	Gridley, Captain Samuel, commands pushes for the Dan,	iv. 233	artillery, i. 49	23 masterly retreat,	iv. 235	Geiffin, Colonel, co-operates with
	iv. 235	Washington, ii. 44
to Jefferson on his retreat,	iv. 236	decoys Donop, ii. 46	53 to Washington on the same,	iv. 236	Griffith, Colonel, joins Washington recrosses the Dan,	iv. 236 iv. 239	Griffith, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii. 22 at Troublesome Creek,	iv. 242	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii. 25 Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24	45 at Troublesome Creek, reinforced,	iv. 242 iv. 243	Griffith, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, il. 2? Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24	45 48 at Troublesome Creck, reinforced, number of troops,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii. 25 Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24	45 48 at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Guilford,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243	Griffith, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, il. 2? Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24	45 48 at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Guilford, disposition of troops,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides, iv. 24	45 48 at Tronblesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Guilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House,	iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245	Griffith, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, il. 2? Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24	45 48
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii. 2: Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 2: after the battle, iv. 2: loss on both sides, iv. 2:  H.	45 48 48
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 249	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides, iv. 2-  H.  Hackensack, American army at, ii. 46	45 48 48
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 249 iv. 251	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii. 2: Guilford Conrt House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides, iv. 2: Wh.  H.  Hackensack, American army at, li. 4: HAFF, James, confession, ii. 2:	45 48 48 48
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Guilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 249 iv. 251 iv. 251	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides, iv. 2s  H.  Hackensack, American army at, llaff, James, confession, llaff, James, confession, llaff, James, way, llaff, james, confession, llaff, james, confe	45 48 48 77 34 03
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Guilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 249 iv. 251 iv. 251	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Conrt House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, HALE, Colonel, gives way, death, iii. 18	45 48 43 7 7 7 10 10
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, reduction of force, thange of plans to Washington,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides, iv. 24  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, death, HALE, Nathau, sketch of, (note,)	45 48 43 7 7 7 10 10
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lañayette on Cornwallis,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Conrt House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, HALE, Colonel, gives way, death, HALE, Nathau, sketch of, (note,) HALE, Town, at the seat of govern-	45 48 48 48 07 34 03 10 81
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, discharges his milltal,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court Honse, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HALE, Colonel, gives way, death, HALE, Sathan, sketch of, (note,) HALE, Town, at the seat of government, ment, v. S.	45 48 48 48 77 44 03 10 81
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Guilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, sets out for Camden,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, death, HALE, Colonel, gives way, HALE, Colonel, seat of, (note,) HALE, Nathan, sketch of, (note,) HALE, Town, at the seat of government, Halffax intrenched by Koseiuszko, iv. 25	45 48 48 48 48 67 63 48 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60 60
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, discharges his millita, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill,	iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Conrt House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, HALE, Colonel, gives way, death, HALE, Nathau, sketch of, (note,) ment, Halifax intrenched by Kosciuszko, HALKET, Sir Peter, L. 2018.	45 48 48 7 48 10 31 82 87 63
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, discharges his millful, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York. Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24 loss on both sides, iv. 24  Hackensack, American army at, ii. 46 HAFF, James, confession, ii. 25 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 10 death, HALE, Nathan, sketch of, (note,) iv. 18 HALE Town, at the seat of government, v. 5 HALKET, Sir Peter, HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 25 HALLE, Olonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 25 HALLE, Olonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 25 HALLE, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 25	45 48 48 7 7 34 03 10 81 92 83 80
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lañyette on Cornwallis, discharges his militta, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Conrt House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, death, HALE, Colonel, gives way, HALE, Nathan, sketch of, (note,) HALF Town, at the seat of government, HAIFA intrenched by Kosciuszko, HALE, Sir Peter, HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, HAMILTAN, Governor, LAMILTAN, LAMILTAN, LAMILTAN, Governor, LAMILTAN, Governor, LAMILTAN, LAMILTAN, LAMILTAN, LAMILTAN, GOVERNOR, LAMILTAN,	45 48 48 7 7 34 03 10 81 92 83 80
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects,	iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 246 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 296	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York. Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24 loss on both sides, iv. 24  Hackensack, American army at, ii. 46 HAFF, James, confession, ii. 25 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. If death, HALE, Nathau, sketch of, (note,) iv. 18 HALE, Town, at the seat of government, HAIKET, Sir Peter, HAIKAT, Sir Peter, HALLAL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 25 HAMLION, Brigadier General, in the	45 45 45 45 7 34 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, disposition of force, thing the first of the firs	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 244 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 296	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  II.  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, ii. 26 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 11 death, HALE, Nathan, sketch of, (note,) HALE, Nathan, sketch of, (note,) HALE, Town, at the seat of government, Halffax intrenched by Kosciuszko, HALKET, Sir Peter, HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 27 HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 27 HALLION, Governor, HALLION, Governor, HALLION, Brigadier General, in the invasion from Canada, iii. 27	45 45 45 45 7 46 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lahyette on Cornwallis, at sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 254 iv. 254 iv. 255 iv. 255 iv. 255 iv. 255 iv. 255 iv. 255 iv. 257 iv. 257 iv. 258 iv. 296 iv. 296	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court House, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HALE, Colonel, gives way, death, HALE, Nathan, sketch of, (note,) HALE, Town, at the seat of government, HAIRAT, Sir Peter, HAIRAT, Sir Peter, HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 29 HALL, Colonel, at McGowan'	45 45 45 45 7 46 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40 40
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, at 50 th for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gleonwy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington on cavalry,	iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 258 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 297 iv. 297 iv. 297 iv. 298	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York. Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 2s after the battle, iv. 2s loss on both sides, iv. 2s  H.  Hackensack, American army at, ii. 4s HAFF, James, confession, ii. 2s HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 1s death, HALE, Kathau, sketch of, (note,) iv. 1s HALE, Town, at the seat of government, ii. 1s HALE, Town, at the seat of government, ii. 1s HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 2s HALKET, Sir Peter, HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 2s HAMLTON, Brigadier General, in the invasion from Canada, iii. 5s command of Burgoyne's camp, iii. 2s RAMLTON, Alexander, commands a	45 45 45 45 45 45 45 46 46 46 46 46 46 46 46 46 46 46 46 46
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, discharges his millita, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington, on cavalry, pursued by Rawdon,	iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 297 iv. 297 iv. 298 iv. 298	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court Honse, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, ii. 25 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 10 death, HALE, Nathan, sketch of, (note,) HALE, Town, at the seat of government, ment, Halifax intrenched by Koseiuszko, HALE, Sir Peter, HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 25 HAMILTON, Governor, HAMILTON, Governor, LOGON Canada, iii. 10 HAMILTON, Governor, II. 11 LAMILTON, Governor, II. 11 LAMILTON, Governor, II. 12 LAMILTON, Governor, II. 13 LAMILTON, Halexander, commands a provincial company, II. 21	45 48 48 7 34 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington on cavalry, pursued by Rawdon, on the Waterce,	iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 256 iv. 296 iv. 297 iv. 298 iv. 298 iv. 298 iv. 298	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York. Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24 loss on both sides, iv. 24  Ha.  Hackensack, American army at, ii. 46 HAFF, James, confession, ii. 25 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 10 death, HALE, Nathan, sketch of, (note,) iv. 18 HALE, Town, at the seat of government, the se	45 48 48 7 34 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30 30
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, discharges his militia, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington on cavalry, pursued by Rawdon, on the Waterce, to Smiter urging active measures	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 246 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 297 iv. 297 iv. 298 iv. 298	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court Honse, battle of, after the battle, loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, HALE, Colonel, gives way, death, HALE, Wathan, sketch of, (note,) HALE, Town, at the seat of government, ment, Halffax intrenched by Koseinszko, HALE, Sir Peter, HAILL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, HAMLTON, Governor, HAMLTON, Governor, Lamitton, Governor, Ramitton, Governor, Ramitton, Governor, HAMLTON, Governor, Lossian Granda,	45 48 48 7 48 30 10 31 52 53 63 63 63 7 83 83 83 83 83 83 83 83 83 83 83 83 83
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford. disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, discharges his milltid, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Wateree, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington on cavalry, pursued by Rawdon, on the Wateree, to Sumter urging active measures from Washington concerning refir	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 297 iv. 298 iv. 298 iv. 298	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York. Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24 loss on both sides, iv. 24  H.  Hackensack, American army at, ii. 46 HAFF, James, confession, ii. 25 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. In death, HALE, Nathau, sketch of, (note,) iv. 18 HALE, Town, at the seat of government, HALE, There, Halfax intrenched by Kosciuszko, iv. 25 HAMLTON, Brigadier General, in the invasion from Canada, iii. 18 LAMILTON, Brigadier General, in the invasion from Canada, iii. 25 HAMILTON, Brigadier General, in the invasion from Canada, iii. 25 LAMILTON, Brigadier General, in the provincial company, iii. 25 LAMILTON, Alexander, commands a provincial company, iii. 25 birth and early days, ii. 25 education, addresses a public meeting, ii. 25	45 48 48 7 7 34 30 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, discharges his militia, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington on cavalry, pursued by Rawdon, on the Waterce, to Sunter urging active measures from Washington on concerning refrorcements,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 246 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 297 iv. 297 iv. 299 iv. 299	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York. Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24 loss on both sides, iv. 24  H.  Hackensack, American army at, ii. 46 HAFF, James, confession, ii. 25 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 11 death, iii. 11 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 11 HALE, Kathan, sketch of, (note,) iv. 18 HALE, Town, at the seat of government, HALE, Sathan, sketch of, (note,) iv. 18 HALE, Town, at the seat of government, HALE, Sir Peter, ii. 18 HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 25 HAMILTON, Governor, ii. 21 HAMILTON, Brigadier General, in the invasion from Canada, iii. 20 command of Burgoyne's camp, iii. 21 AMILTON, Alexander, commands a provincial company, iii. 25 birth and early days, iii. 25 education, addresses a public meeting, ii. 22 captain of artillery, iii. 21	45 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, att Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, asts out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington on cavalry, pursued by Rawdon, on the Waterce, consunter urging active measures from Washington concerning rein forcements, on the hills of Santee,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 247 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 297 iv. 298 iv. 298 iv. 298 iv. 298 iv. 299 iv. 299 iv. 299	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York. Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24 loss on both sides, iv. 24 loss on both sides, iv. 24  H.  Hackensack, American army at, ii. 44 HAFF, James, confession, ii. 25 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 10 death, HALE, Nathau, sketch of, (note,) iv. 18 HALE, Town, at the seat of government, the seat of government, that its remainder of the seat of government, ii. 21 HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 22 HALLE, Sir Peter, i. 14 HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 22 HAMILTON, Governor, i. 21 HAMILTON, Brigadier General, in the invasion from Canada, iii. 25 command of Burgoyne's camp, iii. 27 HAMILTON, Alexander, commands a provincial company, ii. 25 birth and early days, ii. 25 education, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 21 acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 21	45 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, discharges his millita, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington on cavalry, pursued by Rawdon, on the Waterce, to Sunter urging active measures from Washington concerning rein forcements, on the hills of Santee, marches against Colonel Stuart,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 246 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 297 iv. 299 iv. 299 iv. 299 iv. 299 iv. 299 iv. 383	GRIFFTH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York. Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24 loss on both sides, iv. 24  Haller, James, confession, ii. 25 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 14 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 16 HALE, Wathau, sketch of, (note,) iv. 18 HALE, Sathau, sketch of, (note,) iv. 19 HALE, Colonel, at MeGowan's Ford, iv. 25 HAMLTON, Brigadier General, in the invasion from Canada, iii. 25 enommand of Burgoyne's eamp, iii. 25 enommand of Burgoyne's eamp, iii. 25 enommand of Burgoyne's eamp, iii. 25 education, addresses a public meeting, ii. 25 eaptain of artillery, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 enormand of artillery, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 enormand of artillery, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 enormand of artillery, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 enormand of artillery, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 enormand of artillery, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 enormand of artillery, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 enormand of artillery, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 enormand of artillery, acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 enormand of greener in the retreat, ii. 31	45 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48 48
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Guilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Ladiyette on Cornwallis, discharges his milltla, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington on cavalry, pursued by Rawdon, on the Waterce, to Smiter urging active measures from Washington concerning rein forcements, on the hills of Santee, marches against Colonel Stuart, battle of Eutaw Springs,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 244 iv. 245 iv. 225 iv. 251 iv. 252 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 296 iv. 298 iv. 333	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Guilford Court Honse, battle of, after the battle, iv. 24 loss on both sides,  H.  Hackensack, American army at, HAFF, James, confession, ii. 25 HALE, Colonel, gives way, iii. 16 death, HALE, Nathan, sketch of, (note,) HALE, Town, at the seat of government, ment, Halfax intrenched by Koseiuszko, HALE, Sir Peter, HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 25 HAMILTON, Governor, I. 31 HAMILTON, Governor, I. 31 HAMILTON, Governor, I. 31 HAMILTON, Governor, I. 31 HAMILTON, Governor, I. 32 HAMILTON, Governor, I. 33 JPOVINCEL COMMAND JOINT AND TOM JOINT AND JOINT AND JOINT AND JOINT AND	45 45 45 45 47 46 46 47 47 47 47 47 47 47 47 47 47 47 47 47
at Troublesome Creek, reinforced, number of troops, at Gnilford, disposition of troops, battle of Gnilford Court House, orders a retreat, to Washington on Cornwallis, pursues Cornwallis, at Deep River, reduction of force, chauge of plans to Washington, to Lafayette on Cornwallis, discharges his millita, sets out for Camden, at Hobkirk's Hill, retreats before Lord Rawdon, on the Waterce, gloomy prospects, before the fortress of Ninety Six, retreats across the Saluda, to Washington on cavalry, pursued by Rawdon, on the Waterce, to Sunter urging active measures from Washington concerning rein forcements, on the hills of Santee, marches against Colonel Stuart,	iv. 242 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 243 iv. 245 iv. 245 iv. 246 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 251 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 253 iv. 296 iv. 297 iv. 299 iv. 299 iv. 299 iv. 299 iv. 299 iv. 383	GRIFFITH, Colonel, joins Washington at New York. Guilford Court House, battle of, iv. 24 after the battle, iv. 24 loss on both sides, iv. 24  H.  Hackensack, American army at, ii. 46 HAFF, James, confession, ii. 25 HAFF, James, confession, iii. 26 HAFF, James, confession, iii. 26 HAFF, James, confession, iii. 27 HAFF, Sir Peter, iii. 11 HAFF, Town, at the seat of governoment, v. confession, iii. 27 HAFF, Sir Peter, iii. 11 HALL, Colonel, at McGowan's Ford, iv. 22 HAMILTON, Brigadier General, in the invasion from Canada, iii. 25 HAMILTON, Brigadier General, iii. 25 command of Burgoyne's camp, iii. 25 command company, iii. 25 command carlidery, iii. 25 captain of artillery, iii. 25 acquaintance with General Greene, ii. 25 brings up the rear in the retreat, ii. 31 interview with Washington, ii. 41	45 45 45 74 30 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10 10

rapid rise, iii. 83	before Charleston, iv. 80 despatched to Congress iii. 135	at Eutaw Springs, iv. 33 mission to Gates, fii. 279, 288	rallies the eavalry, iv. 38 concludes his mission, iii. 259	Hamtranck, Major, sent after deand Putnam's hobby-horse, iii. 290	serters, v. 9 emphatical letter to Putnam, iii. 291	Hancock, John, president of the on the reluctance of the troops, iii. 291	provincial Congress, 1. 38 reasons against the abduction of	apprised of the movements of Sir Henry Clinton, iii. 363	troops, i. 39 on the decision of council of war, iii, 389	president of Congress, i. 40 boards the French fleet, iii. 416	ambition to be commander-in-chief, i. 41 mortification, i. 41
to Washington on the enemy, iv. 60 breakfasts with Arnold, iv. 120	excepted from proffered pardon, i. 41 invites We kington to be his learns of Arnold's treason, 1v. 122	invites Washington to be his sent in pursuit of Arnold, iv. 122	guest, ii. 20 return to Washington with letters, iv. 124	ordering Gates to the command of describes interview between Wash-	the northern department, iii. 8 ington and Mrs. Arnold, iv. 127	invitation to Washington, v. 8 account of Arnold's conduct, iv. 135	observance of etiquette, v. 3 at dinner with Chastellux, iv. 165	reception of Washington, point of eulogium of Washington, iv. 208	etiquette, v. 4 misunderstanding with Washing-	waives the point, v. 4 ton, iv. 209	visit to Washington, v. 4 dislike of the office of aide-de-camp, iv. 211	Hand, Colonel, retreats before the ambitious for distinction, iv. 212	enemy at Gravesend, ii. 29 reconciliation with Washington, iv. 213	prepared for defence, ii. 29 leads the advance on the redoubts, iv. 346	watches the central road, ii. 29 enters the redoubts, iv. 316	holds the bridge at Throg's Neck, il. 35 at Washington's inauguration, iv. 475	intercepts the Hessians, ii. 45 and the new constitution, v. 5	society of the Cincinnati, iv. 39 on presidential etiquette, v. 10	Hanging Rock successfully attacked on the French revolution, v. 37	by Sumter, iv. S report on the national debt, v. 58	HARCOURT, Colonel, joins Howe, ii. 36 plan for its liquidation, v. 54	captures General Lee, ii. 43 opposition to, v. 54	HARDIN, Col., scouring the country, iv. 33 monarchical views, v. 59 conversation with Jefferson, v. 61	battle with Indians, v. 7 urges a national bank, v. 79	Harmer, Brigadier General, leads an on the British constitution, v. 109	expedition against the Indians, v. 7.
on monarchy and stock gambling, v. 118	destroys Miami village, v. 7 urges Washington to serve another	expedition reported to Congress, v. 8 term, v. 121	HARNAGE, Major, iii. 21 attack on Jefferson, v. 121	Harrison, Benjamin, delegated to to Washington on dissension with	the General Congress, i. 35
Jefferson, v. 126	on committee to confer with Wash-on the French revolution, v. 150	ington, ii. 7 concerning French prizes, v. 155	on the bombardment of Boston, ii. 7 ease of the Little Sarah, v. 162	member of the board of war and intention to resign, v. 168	ordnance, ii. 20 on war with Great Britain, v. 192	HARRISON, Colonel Robert II., secrerecommends Jay, v. 193	tary to Washington, ii. 7 plan for the redemption of the pub-	characterized, iii.
lie debt, v. 208	referee for exchange of prisoners, iii. 1 sends in his resignation, v. 209	to Congress predicting the enemy's to Washington on his resignation, v. 210	repulse, iii. 18 on Rufus King, v. 23s	appointment of, v. 2 to Washington, his farewell address, v. 245 to Washington on threatened war	Hartshorn, Ensign, decoyed into an ambush, v. 7 with France, v. 271
	Hasler, Colonel John, joins Lord Stirling's brigade, il. 29 to Washington on his appointment	Stirling's brigade, il. 29
as commander-in-chief, v. 274	statement of, ii. 30-second in command, v, 275	attempt to take Rogers the ren-lammond, Mr., British minister, and	egade, ii. 36-
Genet, v. 148	publicly thanked, ii. 36
LAMPTON, Colonel, iii. 200	detached to Chatterton's Hill, ii. 36
IAMPTON, Colonel Henry, to watch	killed at Princeton, li. 47
Orangeburg, iv. 800	HAY, Colonel, to Washington on the fampton, Col. Wade, at Dorchester, iv. 300	protection of the Highlands, ii. 25

HAVILAND, Colonel, crosses Lake	HERRICK, Colonel, at Bennington, i	ii. 166
Champlain, i. 280	HERTBURN, William de, progenitor
HAZARD, postmaster, to Gates con-	of the Washingtons,	i. 8
cerning Lee, ii. 354		ii. 196
on the Hessians, (note,) iii. 3		ii. 197
Hazelwood, Commodore, in the		ii. 289
Delaware, iii. 270		ii, 30-receives thanks of Congress, iii. 275		ii. 365
HEATH, General, takes command of the minute men. i, 396		ii. 441 ii. 449 stationed at Trenton, captured by Washington,	ii. 450 brings them to a halt i. 397 in appointed brigadier general, i. 414		ii. 459 to fortify Lechmere Point, ii. 105		ii. 40 despatched to New York, ii. 191		ii. 8 on the discipline of Mifflin's troops, ii. 291		ii. 16 preparations to receive the enemy, ii. 291	HETH, Captain, on the battle of Ger-retreat from Long Island, ii. 315	niantown,	ii. 260 to keep guard on New York island, ii. 331		ii. 268 landing of the British at Throg's	Hickey, Thomas, Washington's body Neck, ii. 356		ii. 230
skilful distribution of his troops, ii. 357		ii, 23:
appearance of the enemy at White Plains, ii, 369		ii. 22:
	Colonel Long	ii. 107
the two armies at White Plains, ii. 371 American defences, ii. 271	Colonel Long, Hinman, Colonel, to reinforce Ticon-	111. 10 to secure the Highlands, ii. 379		ii. 3-in command at the Highlands, ii. 853		ii. 36 described, ii, 353		ii. 37 refuses to obey Lee, ii. 411	in command of Ticonderoga,	ii. 40 to Washington for instructions, ii. 412	Hітсисоск, Colonel, reinforces Cadrefuses to order troops for Lee, ii. 423	walader,	ii. 440 military punctilio. ii. 424		iv. 295 on the conduct of Lee, ii. 424	Holnourne, Admiral, demonstration to march into the Jerseys, ii. 466	against Louisburg,	i. 237 advances towards New York, ii. 455	Holmes, Rear-Admiral, i. 27 Hoop, Commodore, on the troubles	72, 278 pempous summons to Fort Inde- pendence, ii. 485	in Boston,	i. 315
pendence, il. 485 rebuked by Washington, il. 485	to Grenville on the sedition	i. 323 stationed in the Highlands, iii. 482	Иотнам, Commodore, convoys expe-	1. 020 charmed with the French officers, iv. 72		ii. 449 commands West Point, iv. 309	Houpon's bust of Washington, (ap-HENDERSON, Lieutenant Colonel, joins	pendix,)	i. 459
Greene, iv. 334	takes a model of Washington,	iv. 431 at Entaw Springs, iv. 335	House of Representatives on the severely wounded, iv. 337		v. 25
Henduick, Mohawk warrior, slain, i. 203	opposition to Washington,	v. 236
HENFIELD, Gideon, case of, v. 164	make provision for the treaty	v. 237
Henry, Patrick, introduces his resolu- tions.	reply to Washington's last address,	v. 243 tions, i. 305 speech on his resolutions, i. 306		iv. 189 ancedote, i, 306	at the battle of the Cowpens,	v. 219 delegate to the General Congress, i. 359	Howe, Lord, in the expedition sets out for Philadelphia, i. 363	against Tieonderoga,	i. 246 sectional distinctions, i. 364	dies while leading the van,	i. 247 speech at the opening of the General	Howe, Admiral Lord, fondness for Congress, i. 367	business.	ii. 199
Congress, i. 367 opinion of Washington, i. 370	character and services,	ii. 18 speech before the convention at	arrives at New York,	ii. 249
Richmond, i. 388	proclamation of,	ii. 25 letter to against Washington, iii. 320	comes as a mediator,	ii. 25 declines appointment, v. 257		ii. 252
HERKIMER, General, commands in Tryon County, iii. 95	sends General Sullivan on parole to Congress with overtures,	ii, 32
at Oriskany, iii. 151	plan of compromise,	ii. 32 dispute with his officers, iii. 152	to Franklin on e-union of Great	04 attacked by the enemy, iii. 153	Britain and America,	ii, 325 wounded, iii, 153	conference with Commissioners,	ii. 320 death, iii. 155	and Franklin, anecdote,	ii. 82

connagration in New York,	It. 342	lands from the Reet,	111, 178 issues proclamation,	ii. 419	issues proclamation,	lii. 181 to Washington on the treatmen	t of	at Elkton,	iii. 185 prisoners,	iii. 20	battle of Brandywine,	iii. 155 gets his fleet into the Delaware,	iii. 25s	neglects to pursue his advantage.
at Sandy Hook,	iii. 403	pushes for Philadelphia,	iii. 202 brings his fleet to the relief of R.		halts at Germantown,	iii. 208 datashas a farms perinat Dillin manoeuvres of the fleets,	iii. 421	detaches a force against Billing	55- ::: 050
bears away to New York.	iii, 423	port,	iii. 259 return to England,	iii. 429	head-quarters,	iii. 260
Iowe, General Robert, at Savann	alı, iii. 4 43	constructing redoubts on Proving	ice defeated by the British,	iii, 443	Island,	iii. 284
łowe, Major General, quells muti	ny, Iv. 203	attacks Fort Mifflin.	iii, 285 despatched to quell a mutiny,	iv. 398	expedition against Fort Mercer,	iii. 294
lowe, Sir William, in the expedit		preparing to drive Washington 1 against Quebec,	i. 268	youd the mountains,	iii. 302 ascends the heights of Abraham meditates attack on the Americ	iii, 302
arrives at Boston,	i. 418	eamp, lands with troops at Moulton's P		manœuvres,	iii, 308
reconnoitres the American work		retires to Philadelphia,	iii. 304 sends for reinforcements,	i. 431	excesses of foraging parties,	iii. 364 prepares for the assault,	i. 433	resignation accepted,	iii. 372 iii. 372 advances against the fence.	i. 434	the Mischianza,	iii. 372 troops thrown into confusion,	i. 434	HUBBARD, Colonel, at Bennington,	iii. 166 makes a feint of attacking the fe		HUDDY, Captain Joseph, murdered wounded,	i. 457	revenge for Philip White,	iv. 364
		The least Division Laboratory description of,	ii. 2	Hudson River, defences of,	ii, 15t reproached by Congress,	ii. 3	strategetical position,	ii. 255
iutrenched,	ii. 5	defences,	ii. 347 measures taken,	ii. 77	British ships move up,	ii. 347 issues proclamation,	ii. 78	new obstructions,	ii, 349 to Washington concerning Et	han	opened for the British,	iii. 230
Allen,	ii, 105	HUGER, Brigadier General, at Mon measures to repress excesses,	ii. 166	Corner,	iv. 40 perplexed,	ii. 177	surprised by Tarleton,	in .15
			iv. 45
declines attacking Dorchester Hei		in command on the Pedec,	000 045 retreat from Boston,	ii. 181		. 233, 240 steers for Halifax,	ii, 186	Hugnes, Colonel, ordered to impre	ess indolent disposition,	ii. 186	water-craft,	ii. 312 arrives at New York,	ii. 235	Humphreys, Colonel, on preparati	on to his government on the state	e of	for attacking the British posts.	, iv. 162 affairs,	ii. 235	accompanies Washington to Mou	int plans for the battle of Long Isla		Vernon,	iv. $20 accompanies division from F		to Washington on the troubles lands,	ii. 300	Massachusetts,	iv. 459
at Throg's Neck,	ii. 363	meets Washington,	iv. 457 lands on Pell's Point,	ii. 863	inauguration of Washington,	iv. 478 at New Rochelle,	ii. 864	Washington's first levee, ancedo	te, v. 19 postpones the assault,	ii. 272	Huntingdon, Colonel, hangs on t plan of attack on Fort Washingt	ion, ii, 895	enemy's rear,	iii. 50
the attack,	ii. 396-	HUNTINGTON, Major,	ii, 428 conduct of the seamen,	ii. 404	HUNTINGTON, General, to join V.
	the	num,	iii. 294
Hessians,	ii. 470	on the destitution of the troops,	iii. Sos on the march,	ii. 472		iv. 399
consense with Washington		society of the Cincinnati,	11.002 contrasted with Washington, to Washington concerning Lee,	iii. 14
to Lord Germaine, relative to 1	ee,iii. 11	I.
to Lord Germaine, relative to I prepares to attack Peckskill, crosses to the Jerseys,	iii. 71	Independence, dawning spirit of,	i. 197
sallies from Brunswick,	iii. 72	Indian council at Logstown,	i. 64, 71 endeavors to draw Washing		Indian traders, described,	1. 43 out,	iii. 76	Indian warfare,	iil. 43:
another attempt,	iii. 78	Indian war dance,	i. 38
			I, 16
evacuates the Jerseys,			i. 19
leaves New York,	iii, 119	retreat,	i. 213 enters the Delaware,	iii, 121	outrages of, sails out of the capes,	fii. 121	troubles with,	i. 83.

visit Washington at Cambridge, ii. 45	on titles, v. 31 visit Washington at Cambridge, ii. 45 with Burgoyne iii. 111	Washington's election to the Presideney, v. 32
	on French politics, v. 32 and the leading patriots, v. 33
1100011001101	to Painc on the National Assembly, v. 34 oblige St. Leger to decamp, iii. 173 difficulties with, v. 74 hostilities north of the Ohio, v. 177 treaty with Wayne, v. 231	arrives at New York, v. 57
INNES, Colonel, at Winchester, i. 114	impressions concerning the politiconcerning the Indians, i. 161	cal tone of society, v. 57
IREDELL, James, judge of supreme	conversation with Hamilton, v. 61 court. v. 26	remonstrates with Washington on Iroqueis, stand aloof, i. 249	ceremonials, v. 61
IRVINE, Colonel, taken prisoner, ii. 225	discords in Congress, v. 65
IRVINE, James, Brigadier General,	concerning Hamilton, v. 66 accompanies Washington to Rhode taken prisoner, m. 303	Island, v. 73
-	opposed to a National Bank, v. 50
J.	rivalry with Hamilton, v. 81 sympathy with the French revolu-
JACK. Captain, commands hunters, i. 149	tion, at Little Meadows, i. 165	hatred of royalty, v. 92
departs with his band, i. 166	intention of retirement, v. 106
Jackson, Andrew, v. 250	concerning Hamilton, v. 108
Jackson, Major, accompanies Wash-	appreciation of Hamilton, v. 109 ington, v. 38	conversation between Hamilton and Washington's reception at Boston, v. 40	Adams, v. 109
Jacobin Club, v. 48	urging Washington not to retire, v. 114
JACOBS, Captain, Indian sachem, i. 221	to Lafayette, suspicions, v. 117 killed, i. 228	conversation with Washington on political matters, v. 119
Jameson, Lieutenant Colonel, sends	to Washington on dissensions with papers found on André to Wash- ington. iv. 114	Hamilton, v. 128 concerning Gonverneur Morris, v. 137 informs Arnold of the capture of	on the atrocities of the French rev-André, iv. 114
JAY, John, drafts address to the people of Great Britain, i. 369	to Madison, on the war between and the conspiracy in New York, ii. 229	England and France, v. 148 to Rutledge, ii. 351	to Madison on Genet's speech, v. 152 to Gouvernenr Morris, on the de-	conversation with Washington on fence of New York, ii. 352	attacks of the press, v. 153 to Rutledge, concerning Lee, ii. 354	on Freneau's paper, v. 154 on the opposition to Washington,	concerning French prizes, v. 155
(note,) iii. 346	relative to Washington's illness, V. 151 approves of Arnold's plan of settle-	case of the Little Sarah, v. 160
ment in New York, iv. 13	concerning recall of Genet, v. 165
correspondence with Washington, iv. 449	intention to resign, v. 168 at the head of affairs, v. 4	interview with Washington, v. 169 appointed chief justice, v. 26	to Genet, announcing application for his recall, v. 172 report on the state of trade, v. 181 rehnke to Genet, v. 182 retirement from office, v. 183 his treaty with France, v. 213 return to America, v. 214 elected Governor of New York, v. 214 Jefferson, Thomas, Arnold's invasion, iv. 205	to Menroe, on Washington's influcorrespondence with Washington, iv. 207	ence, v. 239 escapes to Carter's Mountain, iv. 289	on breach of official trust, v. 239 on Know and Humphreys V. 12	elected vice-president, v. 252
ancedotes related by, v. 12	takes the oath of office, v. 254 sketch of character and opinions, v. 28	Jeskakake, Shannoah sachem, i. 73
In Paris, v. 29	Johnson Family, power in New York, 1. 447 opinions on the new constitution, v. 30	style of living, 1. 448
re-eligibility of the President, v. 30	adherents, i. 448 horror of kingly rule, v. 31
	•

Jounson, Colone, Guy, supports the	KEPPEL, Commodore, arives with his	ŝ royal cause, i. 418	squadron,	i.	140
fortifies Guy's Park, i. 445	furnishes cannon,		14 holds an Indian council, i. 448	Kiashuta, a Seneca sachem,		. 33:
doubtful intentions, i. 449	King, Rufus, concerning Genet,		173
at Montreal, ii. 43	character of,		23
contemplates hostilities, ii. 215	minister to Great Britain,		23
Johnson, Sir John, supports the royal	King's Bridge to be fortified,		161 cause, i. 448 fortifies the family hall, i. 448	reconnoitred by Washington,		21:
fortifies Johnson Hall, ii. 154	works at, fortified camp at,		33 prepares for hostilities, ii. 154	demonstration at,		35:
surrenders to General Schuyler, ii. 155	relinquished by the British,		40.
contemplates hostilities, ii. 216	King's County committee, accusing		100 retreats among the Indians, ii. 216	Schuyler,	ii.	203 rumoured to be in the field, ii. 216	disaffected.		250 contemplated inroad of, iii. 77	King's Mountain, situation,	iv.	173 on his way to attack Fort Schuy-	battle of,	iv.	173
ler, iii. 91	its effect,		177
depredations, iv. 157	Kingston burnt by the British,		23.
Jounson, Sir William, i. 146	Kingston, Lieutenant, bears a note expedition against Crown Point, i. 200	to Gates,		250 defeats the French, i. 202	KINLOCK, Captain, takes summons to	· crects Fort William Henry, i. 204	Colonel Buford,	15.	- 55
inade baronet and superintendent of Indian affairs, i. 204	Kip's Bay, landing of British,		33; 33;
	anecdote of Washington, joins Abercrombie, i. 248 to attack Fort Niagara, i. 266	Kirkwood, at Eutaw Springs, Kitchel, Anna, (note,)	iv.	33 conducts the siege, i. 266	Kittanning, taken and burned,	* i	20
eaptures the fort, i. 267	Knowlton, Captain, joins Putnam,		40 before Montreal, i, 280	leads a fatigue party,		425 influence with the Six Nations, i. 298	puts up a rampart,	i.	43 concern at the difficulties, i. 447	repulses General Howe,	i.	43 death, i. 448	maintains his position,		4,3
Jounson, of Maryland, nominates	promoted to major,		18
Washington commander-in-chief, i. 413	captures a British guard,		167
Johnstone, George, commissioner,	to attack Staten Island,		25 from Great Britain, iii. 379 Fox's opinion of, iii. 880	gallant affair at an outpost, wounded,		339 341
Fox's opinion of, iii. 880 on the state of Philadelphia, iii. 381	death,		311 attempt to bribe General Reed, iii. 382	Knox, Henry, offers to obtain artil-		011 to Robert Morris, attempts at cor-	lery and ordnance stores,	ii.	79 ruption, iii. SS3	account of,	ii.
Joncaire, Captain, i. 55	instruction,	ii.	- 80 his history, i. 55	sets off on his errand,	ii.	80 appears at Logstown, i. 56	to Washington concerning artillery addresses the chiefs, i. 56	and stores,	ii.	132 writes to the Governor of Pennsyl-	arrival at camp,		16
vania, i, 57	stentorian lungs,		449 interview with Washington, i. 74		iii.
entertains Washington at supper, i. 75 his diplomacy with the Indians, i. 76	sent to Massachusetts, inspects the forts of the Highlands,	iii.
his diplomacy with the Indians, i. 76 Jones, David, Lientenant, and Miss	objects to leave Chew's house gar-	111.	6
McCrea, iii. 142	risoned,	iii	26
Jones, Honorable Joseph, letter on	accompanies Washington,		11:
army grievances, iv. 383			16
JUMONVILLE, his death, i. 107	despatched to the eastern States,		19 instructions found upon him, i. 107			34
JUNIUS, description of Lord Bote-	moves patriotic resolutions,	iv.	88
tourt, i. 321	suggests the society of the Cincin-
			392
	at Harlem,		40
к.	enters New York,		401
United Major destroys buildes of			407
Kelly, Major, destroys bridge at Stony Brook, ii. 479	to Washington concerning Massa- chusetts insurgents,		451
Kene, Maj., letter to, intercepted, ii. 68			45
Kentucky admitted into the Union, v. 83	reception of Washington,	iv.	471

at Washington's inauguration, i	iv. 475	proceeds to Yorktown,	iii. 32 3 officiates as Secretary of War,	v. 4	toasts the commander-in-chief,	iii. 324 described,	v. 6	sets ont for Albany,	iii. 324 presidential etiquette,	v. 12	to Washington, anticipations,	iii. 324 appointed Secretary of War,	v. 34	perplexities,	iii. 334
in favor of a national bank,	v. 80		iii. 335 sides with Hamilton,	v. 81	to Washington on his troubles,	iii. 336 returns to Valley Forge, concerning French prizes,	v. 155	keeps watch in Philadelphia,	iii. 875 case of the Little Sarah,	v. 162	encamps on Barren Hill,	iii. 375 concerning recall of Genet,	v. 165	nearly surrounded,	iii. 377 and Washington, anecdote,	v. 166	extricates himself,	:ii. 377
to Washington resigning,	v. 210	commands the advance,	iii. 390 position assigned to,	v. 277	resigns command to Lee,	iti. 397 to Washington on his appointment,	v. 277	detached to the expedition agains	st to Washington on his reply,	v. 279	Rhode Island,	iii. 418
Knox, Lieutenant, leads forlorn hope	1	interview with D'Estaine.	iii, 423 at Stony Point,	ii. 467	sets out for Boston to see D'Estaing	iii. 425
KNYPHAUSEN, Gen., reinforces Howe,		returns to the American camp,	iii, 427
	ii. 377	brings off the pickets and coverin
	ii. 185		iii. 427
		parties,
	ii. 192	asks leave of absence,	iii. 446
moves with the British vanguard, i		project for the conquest of Canada	111, 440
	ii. 456	arrival at Boston,	iv. 34
	ii. 453	reaches the American camp,	iv. 35
	v. 5	reception by Congress,	iv. 35 sends expeditions against Newark		despatched to the French com	- and Elizabethtown, i	v. 6	manders,	iv. 72
plans doscent into the Jerseys, i	v. 57	accompanies Washington,	iv. 118 passes through Elizabethtown,	v. 57	proposes exchange of André fo	r
	v. 58	Arnold,	iv. 137
	v. 59	commands the advance guard,	iv. 160
	v. 59	attempted enterprise,	iv. 160
	v. 59	anxious for action,	iv. 161
	v. 61	in the camp of the Pennsylvani assailed for the murder of Mrs.	. V. UI
	- 01	mutineers,	iv. 199
	v. 61	to Washington on Hamilton,	iv. 213
	v. 62	in command of detachment,	iv. 253
	v. 63	instructions,	iv. 258
	v. 65	sets out on his march,	iv. 259
Kosciuszko, Thaddens, joins the		further instructions,	iv. 269
	ii. 43	forced marches for Virginia,	iv. 262
fortifies Bemis' Heights, i	ii. 209	at the Head of Elk,	iv. 263 advances to the Dan,	v. 234	arrives at York,	iv. 263
intrenches Halifax, i	v. 237	marches to join Greene,	iv. 266
,		saves Richmond,	iv. 268 to Washington on Lund Washing
L.		ton's compromise,	iv. 269
	1	refuses to correspond with Arnold.
LAFAYETTE, George Washington,	v. 142	retires from before Cornwallis,	iv. 287
	v. 229	assumes the aggressive,	iv. 289
	v. 256	joined by Steuben,	iv. 290
	v. 264
		follows Cornwallis,	iv. 291
	v. 264	retreats to Green Springs,	iv. 294
LAFAYETTE, Madame de,	v. 142	account of his campaign,	iv. 294
LAFAYETTE, Marquis de, at Philadel-		to Washington on the embarkation
	ii. 133	of the British,	iv. 307
	ii. 134	measures to cut off Cornwallis's
	ii. 134	retreat,	iv. 31 7 appointed major general, i	ii. 134	to Washington urging him to ec	m-
	ii. 134	mand,	iv. 318
description of American army i	ii. 136	prevails on De Grasse to remain,	iv. 327 modest reply to Washington, i	ii. 136	to storm a redoubt,	iv. 345
	ii, 137	carries the works,	iv. 347
	ii. 190	false statement concerning, (note,)	iv. 347
	ii. 192	concerning Hamilton,	iv. 348
	ii. 197	asks leave of absence,	iv. 358 to Washington, account of skirmish, i		to Congress with news of peace,	iv. 383
	ii. 300	at Mount Vernon,	iv. 420
		at allowing to though	- 1. XMV on the French revolution, v. 46	history, i. 37 to Washington on the same, v. 69	his birth, 1. 37 to Washington presenting the key	serves in America, i. 37 adopted by the Mohawks, i. 37 on affairs in France, v. 88	wounded at the battle of Ticondownfall of, v. 138	deroga, i. 37 prisoner at Rochefort, v. 139	at the siege of Fort Niagara, i. 37 on his way to Paris, v. 263 correspondence with Washington, v. 283	at the surrender of Montreal, i. 37

La Force, accompanies Washington, i. 77	in Portugal, i. 37 prowling about the country, i. 102	brave conduct, i. 37
in Washington's power, i. 107	received by Frederick the Great, i. 37 kept in prison, i. 134	at Warsaw, i. 37
his fortunes, i. 134	accompanies the Polish ambassador to Constantinonia 1 97
	to Constantinople, 1. 37
LAMB, Colonel, arrives before St.	dangers and escapes, i. 37
Johns with artillery, ii. 59	again in England, i. 37
before Quebec, ii. 143	reception, i. 37 effective fire from the ice battery, ii. 143	censured by a friend, i. 37 relative to Aaron Burr, ii. 144	embittered against the king and in the attack, ii. 148	ministers, i. 3% wounded, ii. 149
assists Arnold, iii. 50	hopes of active service, i. 35 wounded, iii. 51	major general in the Polish Army, i. 38 receives Washington at West	restless life, i. 35 wounded, iii. 51 receives Washington at West Point, iv. 121	affair of honor, i. 35
Lameth, Chevalier de, wounded in	attacks upon the ministry, i. 38
the attack, iv. 347	advocates the cause of the colonies, i. 38
Langdon, President, offers prayers, i. 424	visits America, i. 38
LANGLADE, commands the Indians, iii. 141	reputation, i. 35
LAURENS, Col., duel with Lee, iii. 410	to Edmard Burke, i. 38 boards the French fleet, iii. 416	at Mount Vernen, i. 38 earries a protest to D'Estaing, iii. 424	purchases an estate i. 38 informs Washington of affairs in	cultivates the acquainta, se of lead-Charleston to diam's in Charleston, iv. 28	ing men, i. 88 on André's fate. iv. 149	efficient in organizing the Maryla 1
special minister to France, iv. 193	militia, i. 28 visits the camp of the Pennsylvania	manners, 1. 38 fondness for dogs, i. 55 arrives from France with the loan, iv. 315	to Adams, i. 38 capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 351	at Philadelphia, i. 41
LAURENS, Mr., remits letter to Wash-	appointed major general, i. 41-ington, iii. 321	elected third in command, i. 41-
Lauzun, Duke de, at Newport, iv. 71	accepts appointment, i. 41:
to join the American Army, iv. 277	sets out from Philadelphia, i. 41
skirmish with Tarleton, iv. 331	anecdote, i. 44 description by Mrs. Adams, ii.
LAWRENCE, Colonel John, judge ad-	Washington's military counsellor, ii. 13
vocate general, iv. 134	commands left wing, ii. 13
Lawson, General, reinforces Greene, iv. 243	strict discipline, ii. 18 at Callford Count Hands
at Guilford Court House, iv. 245	profanity, ii. 1
Lear, Tobias, Washington's private	correspondence with Burgoyne, ii. 25 secretary, iv. 430	declines an interview with Bur-on Washington's character, iv. 434	goyne, ii. 20
at the inauguration of Washington, iv. 473 accompanies Washington, v. 38	and Mrs. Adams, ii. 115 Washington's state coach, v. 78	to Richard H. Lee, giving his concerning St. Clair's defeat, v. 101	policy, ii. 123 Washington's illness, v. 293 sets out for Rhode Island, ii. 126 last hours of Washington, v. 294	test oath, ii, 126
death of Washington, v. 296	legislative censures, ii. 127
LEARNED, Col., receives flag of truce, ii, 178	to Washington relative to the de-
Lechmere Point, fortified by Putnam, ii. 107	fence of New York, H. 193
I post up Colonal William defers
LEDYARD, Colonel William, defence	at New Haven, ii. 13.
of Fort Griswold, iv. 313	military notions, ii. 188
LEE, Arthur, in the treasury board, v. 4	reply to New York Committee of
LEE, General Charles, at Boston, i. 376	Safety, ii. 139

to Washington on recruiting suc-	. 1	treatment of,	iii.
cess,	ii. 140	to Congress from New York,	iii.	15 on the disposition of New York,	ii. 140	to Washington on the refusal of arrives at New York,	li. 156	Congress,	iii.
to Washington, on a resolve of Con-	ii. 156	actual treatment of, diminished importance,	iii.
gress, on the arrival of Sir Henry Clinton,		to Washington on his captivity,		352 characteristic menace,	ii. 157	exchanged for General Prescott,		377 plans of defence,	ii. 158	in command of a division,		356 ineasures against Tories,	ii. 159	to Washington on the enemy's defiance of Governor Tryon and		plans,	iii.	356
Captain Parker,	ii. 160	opposed to attack,		357 removal of cannon,	ii. 161	relinquishes the command of the strengthens New York,	ii. 161	advance to Lafayette,		390 ordered to Canada,	ii. 162	military punctilio,		$\frac{391}{392}$ to Washington on affairs in New York,	ii. 162	eommands the advance, encamps at Englishtown,		892 contempt for titles,	ii. 163	advances against the enemy,		393 appointed to command the south-		manœuvre,		893
ern department,	ii. 188	retreat,		395 to Washington on his appointment,		angry meeting with Washington,		396 sets out for the south,	ii. 159	battle of Monmouth Court House,		897 opinion of Washington,	ii. 189	conduct,		397 to Washington from the south,	ii. 189	cause of retreat,		399 to Washington on Clinton's expe-	0773	correspondence with Washington, dition,	ii. 272	charges against,		406
foils Clinton,	ii. 272 ii. 273	court-martialled, concerning Washington,	iii.	407 arrives at Charleston, to Washington on the condition of		sentenced,		403
Charleston,	ii, 273	sentence approved by Congress,		409
encamps on Haddrell's Point,	ii. 278	abuse of Washington,		409 describes the attack on Sullivan's		duel with Colonel Laurens,		410
Island,	ii. 274	retires to his estate,		410 receives thanks of Congress,	ii. 277	style of living,		410 to Washington for cavalry,	ii. 277	queries political and military,	iii.
expected in camp,	ii. 854	insolent note to Congress,		411 to President of Congress on the de-	ii. 354	dismissed the service,		411 signs of the British,	ii. 358	to Congress, apologetic,		412 arrives in camp, to Gates on the meddling of Con-		his character, his death,	iii.
gress,	ii. 358	his will,		412
arrives at White Plains,	ii. 367	burial,		413 commands at Northeastle,	ii. 380	his manuscripts,		413 to Washington on his position,	ii. 400	to Wayne applanding his capture of	ſ allusion to Greene,	ii. 400	Stony Point,		469 to Reed explaining his projects,	ii. 408	caution to Gates,		69 to Bowdoin, plans and schemes,	ii. 409	LEE, Charles, attorney general, LEE, Henry, "Light Horse Harry,"		229 to Washington on removing troops	ii. 410	repulses a surprise		$\frac{183}{350}$ across the Hudson, to Heath on his right to command,		repulses a surprise, promoted,		351 to Reed disparaging Washington,	ii. 415	surprises a party of Hessians,		440 to Washington on his delay,	ii. 422	proposes an attack on Paulus interview with General Heath,	ii. 423	Hook,		473 question of authority,	ii. 424	sets out for Paulus Hook,	iii.	475 changes his mind,	ii. 424	surprises the post,		475 crosses the Hudson, laggard march,		difficult retreat,		476
on military greatness,	ii. 426	rewarded with a gold medal by	y	470
at Morristown,	ii. 428	Congress,	iv.	476 to Congress on his plans, correspondence with Washington,	ii. 428 ii. 429	joins Washington, fight at Springfield,		63 to Heath to forward troops,	ii. 430	concerning Arnold's conspiracy,	iv.	152 tardiness of his march,	ii. 430	escape of Champe,		154 and the militia,	ii. 432	on the reception of Gates by th to Gates disparaging Washington,	ii. 433	General Assembly of Virginia,	iv.	186 captured by Colonel Harcourt,	ii. 433	crosses the Dan,		237 effect of his loss,	ii, 435	affair with Pyle's loyalists,		240 secret of his conduct,	ii. 435	on Tarleton's escape,		241
character of,	ii. 436	skirmish with Tarleton,	IV.	244

at Guilford Court House, iv.	215	or one the first parellal before Youls opens the first parallel before York-joins Marion, iv.	295		v. 84	13
	296	receives the submission of the royal
	297	army,	v. 85	58
captures Granby, iv.	297	returns north with the army,	iv. 33	ЭĠ
	300	LIPPENCOTT, Captain, hangs Captain
	801	Huddy,	v. 86	3.1
detached to operate with Sumter, iv.	0000		v. 80 30
	333	Liston, Mrs., at Washington's fare-	- 0"	-0 anecdote of Washington, iv.	440	well dinner,	v. 23 communicates the death of Greene, iv.		Little Egg Harbor, expedition against, to Washington on the presidency, iv.	463	Little Meadows,	i. 10 commands the army, v.	201	Braddock's expedition encamped,	i. 1	14 puts down the insurrection, v.	202 .	Little Sarah, case of,	v. 15	59
LEE Richard Henry, delegate to		LITTLE TURTLE decoys Colonel Har-
	859	din into an ambush,	v. 7	6 speech before the General Congress, i.		Lively ship of war fires on Breed's
			i. 42	00
drafts memorial to British colonics, i.	203	Hill,	1. 4.	. 4 urging Washington's presence in	0.4	Livingston, Brockholst, in corre-
	251		iii. 20	72
	314	to Schuyler on the prospect of a Leutch, Major, commands Virginia	- 1	battle, i	ii. 20	В
troops, ii.	266	Livingston, Major, and Major Brown
	340	take Fort Chamblee.	ii. 8	23
	340	drive Colonel Maelean back,	ii. 8
	342
		LIVINGSTON, Colonel, joins Schnyler, i
Lempriere's Point, works thrown up, iv.			iv. 10	Ju
Leslie, Captain, killed at Princeton, ii.	419	LIVINGSTON, Henry Brockholst, on
Leslie, General, attack on Chatter-		the state of affairs at Ticonde-
	369		ii. (
	473	Livingston, Peter R.,	ii. %	50 advancing to reinforce Cornwallis, iv.	215	LIVINGSTON, Peter Van Burgh, address to Washington, at Guilford Court House, iv.	246	dress to Washington.	4, 4,	50
	257	LIVINGSTON, Judge Robert R.,	ii. 4	1-1
	337	suggests Arnold as commander of
	193		v. 7	74
takan takanar
	261	at the inauguration of Washington,	IV. 4	1 +
Lewis, Major Geo., attends on Mercer, ii.	453	Livingston, Walter, in the treasury
Lewis, Lawrence, aide-de-camp to		board,		4
Morgan, v. invited to Mount Vernon, v.	200	LIVINGSTON, William, Brig. Gen.,	ii. 24	(1) invited to Mount Vernon, v.	259	sends word of the British plans,	ii. 25	93 affection for Miss Custis, v.	262	to Washington,	ii. 41	17
	255	Logstown, Council of Indians at, i. 64,	11. 3:	33
	93	London Chronicle, remarks on Gen-	,
Lexington, battle of, i.	892		ii. 16	86
	898	Long, Col., commands the batteaux, i
	361		ii. 10
Light House Point, surprised by Wolfe, i.	240		iii. 10
Lincoln, General, contemplates de-	015		ii. 29
	345	landing of the British,	ii. 25
at Bennington, iii.	133	British occupy Flatbush,	ii. 25
nt Manchester, iii.	145	reinforced by Hessians,	ii. 21
	169	De Heister reaches Flatbush,	ii. 2:	13
	218	plan of the British,	ii. 25
	241		ii. 30
commands the southern depart-	-11	occupy the Bedford pass,	ii. 3
	444	Gen. Grant engages Lord Stirling,	ii. 30
	414		11. 00	14
	481	Sir Henry Clinton turns the Amer-	00	١.
	25		ii. 30
strengthens Charleston, iv.	26	Sullivan's division defeated,	ii. 30 remains within the city, iv.	27		ii. 30 to Washington on the unwillingness		forbearance of the British,	ii. 30	)7 of troops to remain, iv.	44		ii. 30	17 replies to summons to surrender. iv.	46		ii. 80
in favor of evacuating Charleston, iv.	49		ii. 31
skirmish with the British, iv.	279		ii. 31
	252		ii. 31
	434	miunizitt 2011.	01

Long Island tradition, ii. 316 alarm of the British, ii. 316	British, iv. 405
in possession of the British, ii. 318	McHeney, Major James, breakfasts with Arnold, iv. 120
Lossing, Benson J., on portraits of Washington, (appendix,) i. 456	secretary of war, v. 229
Lordon, Earl of, i. 209	to Washington on the command of implied censure of Washington, i. 229	the army, v. 272 arrives at Albany, i. 230	McLane, Captain Allen, brings word in winter quarters, i. 231	of intended attack, iii. 302 reception of Washington, i. 234	attacks the enemy's van, iii. 302 routs the picket guard, iii. 362 sets sail for Halifax, i. 235 joins Admiral Holbourne at Halifax, i. 237	routs the picket guard, iii. 362 expedition against Paulus Hook, iii. 475 returns to New York, i. 237	McLeon, Captain, attempt to surprise relieved from command, i. 241
Louisburg to be attacked, i, 235	Jefferson, iv. 289 McPherson, Major, to intercept another attempt to be made, i. 241	Simcoe, iv. 291 invested, i. 245	skirmish with Captain Shank, iv. 290 Mackay, Captain, i. 114 captured, i. 245 Lovel, General, commands expedi-	MACKAY, Captain, 1. 114 arrives at Washington's eamp, i. 117
tion against Penobscot, iii. 472	MACKENZIE, Captain Robert, to Wash-at first repulsed, but effects a landing, iii. 472	ington, i. 370 besieges the fort, iii. 472	Maclean, Colonel, and his Highland sends for reinforcements, iii. 472	emigrants, ii. 84 disastrons retreat, iii. 473	driven back by Majors Brown and
Lovell, James, to Gates on the com-	Livingston, ii. 87 at Quebec, ii. 119
mand, iii. 56 to Gates on his position, iii. 60	at Quebec, ii. 119 loyalty, ii. 121 to Gates, iii. 293	Madison, James, member of Con-invocation to Gates, iii. 201	gress, v. 6
Lowantica Valley, iii. 5	ceremonials of the government, v. 60
Loyalists in the revolution, ii. 345	remonstrates with Washington on Luzerne, Chevalier de la, visits	his intention to retire, v. 110
Washington, iii. 479 and Arnold, iv. 36	prepares a valedictory address for Washington, v. 114 requests ships to oppose Arnold, iv. 257	debate on Jefferson's report, v. 186 banquet to the officers, iv. 319	Magaw, Colonel, ii. 266 to Washington on the position of	commands Fort Washington, ii. 361
Lafavette, v. 68	cannonades the British frigates. ii. 366
LYMAN, General, i. 200	in favor of holding Fort Washington, ii. 393
Lyncu, Thomas, on committee to confer with Washington, ii. 74	refuses to surrender, ii. 394 disposition for defence, ii. 395
on the bombardment of Boston, ii. 75	MAJORIBANKS, Major, at Entaw , ,,	Springs, iv. 836
	falls back, iv. 338
	Malmedy, Col., at Entaw Springs, iv. 835
PI.	Manchester, British maraud, iv. 268
McCall, Major, at the battle of the	Manchester, Duke of, compares the conduct of Clinton and Dunmore, ii. 158
Cowpens, iv. 219	remarks on siege of Boston, ii. 185
McCrea, Jane, iii. 142	Maxly, Captain, captures munitions murdered by Indians, iii. 143	of war, ii. 102 its effect, iii. 144	Marbois, Barbe, iii. 479
the story of her murder, (note,) iii. 145	Marion, Francis, his character, iv. 180
McDougall, General, strengthens Heath's position, ii. 357	bye names, iv. 181 pursued by Tarleton, iv. 181 in command at Chatterton's Hill, ii. 368	capture of Fort Watson, iv. 296 at Morristown, ii. 466	capture of Fort Motte, iv. 297 commands at Peekskill, iii. 29	attack on Colonel Coates, iv. 303 fires the barracks and retires, iii. 29	controls the lower Santee, iv. 333 commands at Peekskill, iii. 64	joins Greene, iv. 324 commands in the Highlands, iii. 362, 445 joins Gates, iii. 436	at Entaw Springs, iv. 395 Маккое, Capt., escorts Washington, i. 442 commands at West Point, iii. 461	MARSH, Rev. John, letter relative to death of, iv. 444	plot in New York, (note,) ii. 232
McDowell, Colonel, in the battle of	Marshall, Judge, on Lee's retreat, iii. 408
King's Mountain, iv. 175	envoy to France, v. 268
	Months's Financial managed by (2
McGillivray, represents the Creeks, v. 63 McGowan's Ford, affair at, iv. 230	Martha's Vineyard ravaged by the British, iii, 423

Martin, Colonel,	i. 214	MEADE, Colonel, Washington's aide	0-
Maryland, General Assembly, conf	ì-	de-camp,	iii. 4
dence in Washington,	v. 227	Mecklenburg, spirit of the inhabit	t-
Maryland troops described.	ii. 19	ants,	iv. 170
sharpshooting,	ii. 19		st described by Graydon,	ii. 267	Sag-Habor,	iii. 52
Mason, Mr., divulges terms of treaty
Mason, George, friend of Washing- ton,	i. 311	a mutiny,	iv. 38 to Washington on non-importation		MERCER, Captain George, Washing	· drafts plan of association for th	0		i. 207 non-importation and use of Brit		MERCER, George, declines to act a distributor of stamps,	i. S10
ish goods subject to duty,	i. 321	MERCER, Hugh, account of,	i. 155
Massachusetts General Court of, ad	-	arrives at Fort Cumberland wound	1. 100 vise a Congress,	i. 309	ed,	i. 157 petition the king for relief,	i. 314	with Colonel Armstrong,	i. 221 urge the other colonial Legislature		wounded,	i. 222 to join for redress,	i. 314		r refuse to rescind the resolution,	i. 314	of inspection,	i. 225 protest against military occupation	, i. 825	a visitor at Mount Vernon,	i. 255 refuse to transact business, transferred to Cambridge,	i. 326	disciplines militia,	i. 355 resolution against a standing army,	i. 326 i. 326	about marching to Williamsburg,	i. 399 refuse to provide for the troops,	i. 826	made brigadicr general,	ii. 239
prorogued,	i. 326	joins the army, appointed to a command,	ii. 239
Assembly recommend a Genera		on the abandonment of New York	ii, 240
Congress,	i. 350	conversation with Washington or	, 11, 000
general election,	i. 382	resistance,	ii, 421
semi-belligerent state of affairs,	i. 384	leads the advance on Princeton,	ii. 475
Congress of, raises troops,	i. 401	encounters Colonel Mawhood,	ii. 477 prepare to receive Washington,	i. 452	wounded,	ii. 477
send a deputation to meet Wash		death,	ii. 484
ington,	i. 452	character,	ii. 454
address of welcome to General Lee number of troops,		Middleton, Cornet, sent in pursuit o their destitution,	ii. 6	Champe,	iv. 154
Washington's apology,	ii. 9	Mifflin, General, urges Lee's ap-liberality,	ii. 13	pointment as second in command aide-de-camp to Washington,	ii. 414 asks for troops,	ii. 19	secretary to Washington,	ii. 76
Rhode Island and Connecticut fit		suggests a name for the captured	11. 10 out armed vessets,	ii. 70	mortar.	ii 103 passes an act for fitting out armed	l	Adjutant General, manners and en-	• vessels	ii. 72	tertainments,	ii. 114
	iv. 451	promoted,	ii. 206
quelled,	iv. 456	encamped near Kingsbridge,	ii. 218
Mathew, General, in the attack on Fort Washington,	11 907	characterized by Graydon,	ii. 266 expedition against the Chesapeake,	ii. 397	discipline of his troops,	ii. 291
	iii. 458	arrives with troops,	ii. S10 rayages the neighborhood.	iii. 459	observes movement among the British ships,	41 011
	iii. 265	premature retreat,	ii. 811 ii. 315
Mathews, John, on committee to con-		returns to the lines,	ii, 315
fer with Washington,	iv. 33	retreats in safety,	ii. 316
Maison's Ford, Lafayette posted on, i	iii. 377	sent to Philadelphia for aid,	ii. 408
Matthews, David, mayor of New		at Philadelphia,	ii. 428
York apprehended,	ii. 229	supports the claims of Conway,	iii. 277 detained for trial,	ii. 231	opposition to Washington.	iii. 277
Mawnoop, Colonel, at Princeton,	ii. 476	member of the Board of War,	iii. 301 attacks Mercer,	ii. 477		iii. 315
	ii. 479 ii. 466		iv. 456
commands light troops,	ii. 182		iv. 468
	ii. 185	case of the Little Sarah, Miles, Colonel, commands battalion,	v. 159
	ii. 188		ii. 296
	ii. 379	Militia system, its inefficiency,	i. 225 ordered to harass the enemy, i	ii. 388	organization of, in Massachusetts,	1. 354
MAYNARDS, Judge,	i. 60	Ministerial Army,	1 418

Minute men rally under Gen. Heath	a, i.	396	annoyances,	ii form a camp,		401	intention to resign,		. 90
Minepoix, Marquis de,		137	joins Arnold,		. 129
Mischianza in honor of Sir William		0.73	arrives before Quebec,		. 14
Howe,	11.	. 372	plan of attack,		. 14:
Mississippi, navigation of,	. v.	0	strength of force,		. 145
Monckton, Brigadier, in the exped	1- ,	000	on Arnold and his troops,		. 14:
tion against Quebec,		26S 270	summons Quebec to surrender,		. 14:
commands battery at Point Levi,		277	to Carleton,		. 14:
wonnded, Monckton, Col., killed in an attac		211	prepares to attack, efforts to incite the inhabitants,		$\frac{148}{148}$
on Wayne,	`iii	399	anecdote,		144
burial,		401	project of an escalade,		14
Monk's Corner, Brigadier-Genera		101	plan of attack,	ii	. 140
Huger at,	iv.	46	the attack,		. 146
curprised by Tarleton,	iv.		leads his men,		. 147
Monmouth Court House, battle of,		397	surprises the picket,		. 147 killed and wounded,	iii.	40I	death,	ii.	147
Monro, Colonel, in command of For			burial,		. 151
William Henry,	i.	235	Montgomery, Major, attack on For	t
William Henry, Mongoe, James, in the advance	9		Griswold,	iv.	314 against Trenton,	ii.	452	Montour, Andw., acts as interprete	c, i.	49 takes two cannon,		453	accompanies Adjutant Muse,	i.	. 115
remonstrates against Hamilton,		193	Montreal, capitulates to Amherst,	i.	281 minister to France,		196	taken by Montgomery,		91 reception in France,		196	Montreson, Captain, enters the de		010 recalled,		242	serted American works,		316 to Washington on an intercepted	a	040	bearer of flag to Washington,		. 343 letter,		$\frac{242}{265}$	Morgan, Daniel, arrives at camp,	11.	$\frac{19}{148}$ address to by M. Barras,		230	in the attack on Quebec, takes command,		143
Montcalm, his operations, takes Oswego,		231	earries two batteries,		149 returns in trinmph to Montreal,		231	henmed in, brave defence and sur		110 again takes the field,		235	render,		151 attacks Fort William Henry,		236	exchanged,		311 captures and destroys it,		236	recommended to the command of returns to Canada,		236	a rifle regiment,	ii.	344 prepares his defence,	i.	248	mans the lines,		366 repulses Abererombie,	i.	249	sent to fight the Indians,	iii.	132 in command of Quebec,	i.	269	attacks the enemy,	iii.	213 abandons his intrenchments,		275	effect of his corps on the enemy,	iii.	216 sends for reinforcements,		275	to attack Burgoyne,	iii.	237 advances against Wolfe,		275	harasses the enemy,		239 receives his death wound,		277	to reinforce Maxwell,		359 to General Townsend,		277	at Charlotte,		154 to De Ramsay,		$\frac{277}{278}$	detached to South Carolina,		189 his death,		210	on his way to Ninety Six, retreats from Tarleton,		$\frac{216}{217}$
Montgomery, Richard, at the land ing before Louisburg,	٠,	244	at the Cowpens,		218 appointed brigadier general,		414	reasons for selecting,		218 at Ticonderoga,	ii.	44			219
birth and services,	ii.	41			220
emigrates to New York and marries		41			222 appointed brigadier general,	ii.	45			222 appearance and manners,	ii.	45	crosses the Catawba.	iv.	224 embarkation for the Isle aux Noix,	, ii.	47		iv.	226 invests St. Johns,	ii.	59	pushes for the Yadkin,		231 presses the siege of St. Johns,	ii.	83	correspondence with Washington,	v.	199 to Carleton on the treatment of			left with detachment,	v.	203 prisoners,	ii.	84	Morocco, treaty with, Morris, Captain, wins Miss Philipse	v.	4 takes St. Johns,	ii.	86	Morris, Captain, wins Miss Philipse	, į.	211 treatment of prisoners,	ii.	86	wounded at Shilivan's Island,	11.	276 proceeds to Montreal,	ii.	87	Morris, Governor, appoints commis-		140 takes Montreal,	iL	91	sioners,		140 prepares to descend the St. Law	ii.	92	at Alexandria,		145 148 rence, to Schnyler on insubordination o		92	to Croghan, Morris, Gouverneur, on Gates,		176 troops,	ii.	92			348
	• • • •	·

on the French crisis, differs from Jefferson, to Washington on the French revolution.  on the same, v. 63 on the same, v. 70 to Washington on Lafayette. v. 70 to Washington on affairs in France, v. 137 representation of affairs in France, v. 137 relative to Louis XVI., v. 141 on the successes of France, v. 142 on the successes of France, v. 143 on the successes of France, v. 144 on the successes of France, v. 145 on Massington, v. 146 not assume that the successes of France, v. 146 not assume that the successes of France, v. 146 not assume that the successes of France, v. 147 not assume that the successes of France, v. 146 not assume that the successes of France, v. 146 not assume that the successes of France, v. 146 not assume that the successes of France, v. 147 not assume that the successes of France, v. 148 not assume that the successes of France, v. 148 not assume that the successes of France, v. 148 normalisation, v. 148 norma dillers from Jefferson, to Washington on the French revellation.  To Mushington on Lafayette.  V. 69  to Washington on affairs in France, v. 137  representation of affairs in France, v. 137  concerning Lafayette and the Reign of Terror, v. 137  relative to Louis XVI., v. 139  relative to Louis XVI., v. 149  recalled.  Mornis Robert, sends money to Washington, i. 237  entertains Washington, ii. 468  patriotic exertions, ii. 468  patriotic exertions, iii. 438  Morristown, its position, iii. 439  Morristown, its position, iii. 430	on the French crisis, v. 33	MUSGRAVE, Colonel, encamped, iii. 261 to Washington on the French revo- lution, on the same, on the same of the Washington on affairs in France, v. 137 representation of affairs in France, v. 137 on the successes of France, v. 144 on the successes of France, v. 144 on the successes of France, v. 144 on the successes of France, v. 146 recalled. Washington, ii. 468 patriotic exertions, iv. 237 ontertains Washington, iii. 438 ontertains Colonel Moner, iii. 437 Morristown, its position, iii. 438 ontertains Colonel Win, commands of the same of the successes of France, ii. 237 MOLIDER, Captain, at Princeton, iii. 437 MOLIDER, Captain, at Princeton, iii. 437 MOLIDER, Captain, at Princeton, iii. 438 ontertains Colonel Win, commands of the successes of France, ii. 237 MOLIDER, Captain, at Princeton, iii. 439 Morristown, its position, iii. 439 Morristown, its position, iii. 439 Morristown, its position, iii. 430 Morristown, its position,	differs from Jefferson, v. 34
Intion. v. 55 on the same, on Lafayette. v. 69 to Washington on affairs in France, v. 137 representation of affairs in France, v. 137 concerning Lafayette and the Reign of Terror, representation of affairs in France, v. 137 relative to Louis XVI., v. 139 relative to Louis XVI., v. 149 to Jefferson on Genot, v. 149 to Jefferson on Genot, v. 149 Morristown, its position, v. 130 Morristown, its position, v. 235 Morticological and Princeton, Moutland & Boils de la, arrives at Louisburg, Moutlone, Colpain, at Princeton, Moutler, Colonel Win, commands at Sullivan's Island, v. 1290 Mount Defance, strategetical position, v. 1290 Mount Defance, strategetical position, v. 1290 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgone, iii. 272 glorious defence, evacuated, iii. 173 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgone, iii. 193 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, and in the American army at the form of Admiral Vernon, and wilkinson, iv. 263 In dancer, v. 1296 Mowar, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, Moyle, editached to operate against shipping above Quebee, revisited by Wishington, v. 263 Morread Bore, with Wolfe, detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, pring above Quebee, detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, detached to advance against Morreal, v. 275 Mernack, William Vans, minister to orlean a father in the art of war, arrival of a British fleet, v. 275 Murgary, Brigadier, with Wolfe, detached to advance against Montreal, v. 275 Murgary, Brigadier, with Wolfe, detached to advance against Montreal, v. 275 Murgary, Brigadier, with Wolfe, detached to advance against Montreal, v. 275 Murgary, Milliam Vans, minister to describe the revolution, it 325 Murgary, Brigadier, with Wolfe, detached to advance against Montreal, v. 275 Murgary, Milliam Vans, minister to describe the revolution, it 325 Murgary, Brigadier, with Wolfe, detached to advance against Montreal, v. 275 Murgary, Brigadier, with Wol	to Washington on the French reve-on the same, to Washington on Lafayette, v. 70 to Washington on affairs in France, v. 137 representation of affairs in France, v. 137 nelative to Louis NVI., v. 141 on the successes of France, v. 144 on the successes of France, v. 146 Norms, Robert, sends money to Washington, ii. 468 patriotic exertions, e. v. 146 Norms, Robert, sends money to Washington, ii. 468 surject and the surject of the surject to Washington on affairs in France, v. 137 representation of affairs in the art of France, v. 140 representation of affairs in the representation of affairs in the art of France, v. 140 recalled in for troops, it v. 313 represents that the surface of the propof, it v. 313 represents the propof, it v. 313 represents the propof, it v. 314 represents the propof, it v. 315 represents the propof, it v. 317 represents the propof, it v. 317 represents the propof, it v. 318 represents the propof, it v. 317 represents the propof, it v. 317 represents the propof affairs, v. 15 represents the propof affairs, v. 16 receives thanks of Congress, it 2-17 receives thanks of Congress, it		1 11 00
minister to France, v. 137 representation of affairs in France, v. 137 concerning Lafayette and the Reign of Terror, v. 142 of the successes of France, v. 142 to Jefferson on Genot, v. 146 to Mashington, v. 146 Washington, v. 146 Monts, Robert, sends money to Washington, v. 146 parfordic exertions, entertains Washington, v. 217 entertains Washington, v. 217 entertains Washington, v. 218 Morristown, its position, ii. 46 sufferings of the American army at, iv. 317 Mornex Admiral de Bois de la, arrives at Louisburg. v. 188 Mourt Legal and the Proceeding at Sullivan's Island, ii. 272 glorious defence, proclamation, which are the following to make the more of Admiral Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 254 assumes a military tone, ii. 255 assumes a military tone, ii. 256 assumes a military tone, ii. 257 and the vernor and vern	to Washington on Lafayette. v. 70
minister to France, v. 137 representation of affairs in France, v. 137 concerning Lafayette and the Reign of Terror, v. 142 of the successes of France, v. 142 to Jefferson on Genot, v. 146 to Mashington, v. 146 Washington, v. 146 Monts, Robert, sends money to Washington, v. 146 parfordic exertions, entertains Washington, v. 217 entertains Washington, v. 217 entertains Washington, v. 218 Morristown, its position, ii. 46 sufferings of the American army at, iv. 317 Mornex Admiral de Bois de la, arrives at Louisburg. v. 188 Mourt Legal and the Proceeding at Sullivan's Island, ii. 272 glorious defence, proclamation, which are the following to make the more of Admiral Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 254 assumes a military tone, ii. 255 assumes a military tone, ii. 256 assumes a military tone, ii. 257 and the vernor and vern	to Washington on affairs in France, v. 87 representation of affairs in France, v. 137 concerning. Lafayette and the Reign of Terror, relative to Louis XVI., on the snecesses of France, to Jefferson on Genot, v. 146 or cealled. W. 146 recalled. W. 146 recalled. W. 146 washington, it. 205 Morris, Robert, sends money to Washington, it. 250 patriotic exertions, it. 271 entertains Washington, it. 251 Morristown, its position, sufferings of the American army at, iv. 1 Morris, Colonel Roger, it. 257 Moulder, Colonel Roger, it. 258 mould Hopendence, evacuated, it. 259 moulded to operate against ship saved from ravage, revisited by Washington, it. 250 mount for moulding the pring above Quebec, it. 250 mount for a British Roger, it. 250 mounters General Phillips, it. 251 murdering Town, it. 250 mounter of a British Roger, it. 251 murdering Town, it. 250 mounter of a British Roger, it. 251 murdering Town, it. 250 mounter of a British Roger, it. 251 murdering Town, it. 250 mounter of a British Roger, it. 251 murdering Town, it. 252 mounter of war, it. 252 mounter of war, it. 253 mounter of mo	minister to France, v. 137	N.
on the sidecesses of France, V. 142 rocalled. To Jefferson on Genot, v. 196 recalled. Washington, ii. 468 patriotic exertions, ii. 275 entertains Washington, iv. 257 entertains Washington, iv. 258 entertain Washington, iv. 259 entertain washington, iv. 250 enterta	representation of affairs in France, v. 137
on the sidecesses of France, V. 142 rocalled. To Jefferson on Genot, v. 196 recalled. Washington, ii. 468 patriotic exertions, ii. 275 entertains Washington, iv. 257 entertains Washington, iv. 258 entertain Washington, iv. 259 entertain washington, iv. 250 enterta	concerning Lafayette and the	NASH, Gen., killed at Germantown, iii, 265
on the sidecesses of France, V. 142 rocalled. To Jefferson on Genot, v. 196 recalled. Washington, ii. 468 patriotic exertions, ii. 275 entertains Washington, iv. 257 entertains Washington, iv. 258 entertain Washington, iv. 259 entertain washington, iv. 250 enterta	Reign of Terror, v. 139	National Bank, v. 79
on the sidecesses of France, V. 142 rocalled. To Jefferson on Genot, v. 196 recalled. Washington, ii. 468 patriotic exertions, ii. 275 entertains Washington, iv. 257 entertains Washington, iv. 258 entertain Washington, iv. 259 entertain washington, iv. 250 enterta	relative to Louis XVI., v. 141
to Jenerson on Genot, v. 146 Moeris, Robert, sends money to Washington, ii. 468 patriotic exertions, iv. 277 entertains Washington, iii. 438 Morristown, its position, iii. 438 Mouris Admiral de Bois de la, arrives at Louisburg, ii. 237 MOULDER, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 438 MOULTER, Colonel Win, commands at Sullivan's Island, glorious defence, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, iproclamation, v. 188 Mount Defiance, strategetical position, in 199 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Uvernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 241 quiet disturbed, ii. 142 situation of, assanica, ii. 143 sasunes a military tono, ii. 284 assunes a military tono, ii. 285 in danger, ii. 116 saved from ravage, ii. 116 Avenary, Mowart, Leitt, destroys Falmouth, ii. 71 Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MUEGRAY, Brigadier, with Wolfe, i. 265 detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, ii. 277 arrival of a British fleet, ii. 279 arrival of british freepole, ii. 285 arrival of British freepole, ii. 287 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrival of more ships, ii. 249 arrival of the people, ii. 248 arrival of more ships, ii. 249 ar	on the successes of France, v. 142	Freneau, v. 106
Morris, Robert, sends money to Washington, i. 468 partiotic exertions, i. 468 partiotic exertions, i. 468 morris, Colonel Roger, i. 338 Morristown, its position, ii. 468 sufferings of the American army at, iv. 156 Mortine, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 438 Moutler, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 437 moutler, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 247 glorious defence, ii. 277 proclamation, ii. 278 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 101 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 101 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 101 saved from ravage, iv. 269 revisited by Washington, ii. 284 assumes a military tono, ii. 284 assumes a military tono, ii. 284 morris very an every assumed a military tono, ii. 284 Mover, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 71 Movlan, Colonel, and Wikinson, ii. 292 Mowar, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 71 Murdering Town, ii. 84 Mutenaxy, Major, to embark, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 arrival of British troops, ii. 281 Muse, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrival of Washington, patriotic exertions, iv. 277 entertains Washington, ii. 338 Morristown, its position, iii. 4 sufferings of the American army at, iv. Morne, Admiral de Bois de la, arrives at Louisburg, i. 237 MOULDER, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 478 MOUTPIE, Colonel Wm, commands at Sullivan's Island, glorious defence, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 103 Mount Perince, cyacuated, iii. 103 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 104 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 105 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, and iii. 103 Mount Vernon, and iii. 103 Mount Vernon, and iii. 103 Mount Vernon, and iii. 103 Mowar, Lieut., destroys Falmouth, ii. 113 saved from ravage, iv. 263 revisited by Washington, iii. 325 MULLBARY, Mojor, to embark, iii. 177 MULGRAYE, Major, to embark, iii. 177 prepagate condition, iii. 279 desperate condition, iii. 279 desperate condition, iii. 279 arrival of a British fleet, ordered to advance against Montreal, ascends the river, iii. 59 MURSE, Major, teaches Washington  the art of war, arrives in canner, iii. 393 MURSE, Major, teaches Washington  the art of war, arrives in canner, iii. 394 arrives in canner, ii. 594 arrives in canner, iii. 395 in danger, iii. 300 iii. 400 iii. 40 washington, patriotic exertions, entertains Washington, iv. 257 entertains Washington, iv. 315 Moreus Colonel Roger, ii. 338 Morristown, its position, sufferings of the American army at, iv. 1 Morne. Admiral de Bois de la, arrives at Louisburg. i. 237 MOULDER, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 478 MOULDER, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 277 glorious defence, receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, which is a continue to the fine of	Morris, Robert, sends money to	called on for troops, iv. 317 ments (Solonel Roger, ii. 338 Morristown, its position, iii. 338 Morristown, its position, iii. 338 Morristown, its position, iii. 348 Morristown, its position, iii. 247 rives at Louisburg, ii. 237 Morristown, its position, iii. 272 glorious defence, iii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 glorious defence, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 glorious defence, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Urenon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 262 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 252 in danger, ii. 110 doubt Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mowark surprised by the British, iv. 68 New England resists the project of taxation, continues the disuse of tea, ii. 232 army, its situation, of, ii. 402 read in the revolution, ii. 402 remail thanks by the British, iii. 428 receive thanks of Congress, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 278 mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Morristourious, ii. 262 revisited by Washinston, ii. 254 revisited by Washinston, Centertains washington, 1v. 315 Moneris, Colonel Roger, ii. 338 Morristown, its position, sufferings of the American army at, iv. 1 Mother, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 277 Moulder, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 277 glorious defence, receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, ii. 277 proclamation, ii. 277 Mount Defiance, strategetical position, flow flow by the British, iii. 422 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, assumes a military tono, i. 142 situation of, assumes a military tono, i. 274 quiet disturbed, ii. 142 situation of, assumes a military tono, ii. 142 situation of, assumes a military tono, ii. 143 Monart, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 71 Movala, Captain respond by the British, iii. 420 xew Haven taken by the British, iii. 420 xew Jersey, opinion of the revolution, ii. 440 prison ship, militia turn out with alacrity, iii. 76 trops, discontent of, iii. 445 xew London, expedition against, tv. 293 xervisited by Washington, ii. 273 Murgering Town, ii. 274 Murgering Town, ii. 275 desperate condition, ii. 274 destruction of, assisties the troops, iii. 455 iii. 400 Xew Orseas, opinion of the revolution, ii. 460 rice disturbed, iii. 103 xew Elazation, continues the disuse of tea, ii. 282 army, its situation, ii. 440 xew Jersey, opinion of the revolution, iii. 462 revisited by Washington, iv. 56 revisited by Washington, iv. 203 revisited by Washington, iv. 204 xew Jondon, expedition against, tv. 293 xew laven taken by the British, iii. 425 xew Hamys its disturbed, iii. 103 xew Bellord ravaged by the British, iii. 425 xew Hamyshire sends volunteers, ii. 401 xew Jers	patriotic exertions, iv. 277	another proof, iv. 343
Morristown, its position, sufferings of the American army at, iv. 1 Morner, Admiral de Bois de la, arvives at Lonisburg, Morlace, Captain, at Princeton, Moultreir, Colonel Win, commands at Sullivan's Island, glorious defence, receives thanks of Congress, proclamation, V. 188 Mount Defiance, strategetical position, floon, for fiffed by Burgoyne, iii. 277 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, aii. 294 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 104 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, assemas a military tono, ii. 294 situation of, assemas a military tono, ii. 296 revisited by Washington, iii. 110 saved from ravage, revisited by Washington, iii. 110 Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, Murlenberg, Gen., near Suffolk, encounters General Phillips, funderlarg Town, Murlenberg, Gen., near Suffolk, encounters General Phillips, retreats into Quebee, detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, revisited to advauce against Montreal, seemas the French eentre, attacks De Levi, assends the river, ii. 279 desperate condition, ii. 279 desperate condition, ii. 270 desperate condition, ii. 270 desperate condition, ii. 271 desperate condition, ii. 272 desperate condition, ii. 273 drants, ii. 274 drants, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 duenax, Miss, aneedote, Mussex, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrival of a British troops, iii. 243 arrival of more ships, ii. 245 carrival of more ships, ii. 246 new Hanpshire sends volunteers, ii. 402 new Hanpshire sends volunteers, ii. 402 new Hanpshire sends volunteers, ii. 402 new Jampshire sends volunteers, ii. 402 new Jampshire sends volunteers, ii. 402 new Hanpshire sends volunteers, ii. 402 new Jampshire sends		Nelson, Mr., Secretary, anecdote, iv. 843
Mother Admiral de Bois de la, arrives at Louisburg.  Mother Captain, at Princeton, ii. 475 Mother Captain, at Princeton, ii. 475 Mother Captain, at Princeton, ii. 475 Mother Captain, at Princeton, ii. 272 glorious defence, ii. 277 proclamation, ii. 272 glorious defence, ii. 277 proclamation, ii. 272 Mount Defiance, strategetical position, ii. 282 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 103 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 104 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 294 situation of, i. 294 revisited by Washinston, iii. 319 MOVLAN, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MOVLAN, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MULLENBERG, Gen, near Suffolk, iv. 263 cencounters teneral Phillips, iv. 263 teneral vernor, ii. 105 Mount Lengare, ii. 110 MOVLAN, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MULLENBERG, Gen, near Suffolk, iv. 263 cencounters teneral Phillips, iv. 263 teneral research to troops, iii. 402 Move Jersey, opinion of the revolution, iii. 402 troops, discentent of, iii. 402 troops, mutiny of, iv. 56 New Lorand by Knyphansen, iv. 56 we detacled by Connel, ii. 406 New Orleans, v		Neutral ground, iv. 109
Mother Admiral de Bois de la, arrives at Louisburg.  Mother Captain, at Princeton, ii. 475 Mother Captain, at Princeton, ii. 475 Mother Captain, at Princeton, ii. 475 Mother Captain, at Princeton, ii. 272 glorious defence, ii. 277 proclamation, ii. 272 glorious defence, ii. 277 proclamation, ii. 272 Mount Defiance, strategetical position, ii. 282 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 103 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 104 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 294 situation of, i. 294 revisited by Washinston, iii. 319 MOVLAN, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MOVLAN, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MULLENBERG, Gen, near Suffolk, iv. 263 cencounters teneral Phillips, iv. 263 teneral vernor, ii. 105 Mount Lengare, ii. 110 MOVLAN, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MULLENBERG, Gen, near Suffolk, iv. 263 cencounters teneral Phillips, iv. 263 teneral research to troops, iii. 402 Move Jersey, opinion of the revolution, iii. 402 troops, discentent of, iii. 402 troops, mutiny of, iv. 56 New Lorand by Knyphansen, iv. 56 we detacled by Connel, ii. 406 New Orleans, v		NEVIL, General, house of, assailed, v. 198
rives at Louisburg, MOULDER, Captain, at Princeton, MOULDER, Captain, at Princeton, at Sullivan's Island, glorious defence, proclamation, v. 185 Mount Defiance, strategetical position, flon, ii. 262 Mount Ilope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 104 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon,	superings of the American army at, iv. 1	Newark surprised by the British, iv. 6
MOULDER, Captain, at Princeton, ii. 478 MOULDER, Colonel Wm., commands at Sullivan's Island, glorious defence, receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, v. 188 Mount Defiance, strategetical position, floor, flo	Mothe, Admiral de Bois de la, ar-	New Bedford ravaged by the British, iii. 428
MOULTER, Colonel Wm., commands at Sullivan's Island, glorious defence, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, V. 188 Mount Defiance, strategetical position, Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 104 Mount I Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 101 Mount I Hope, fortified in honor of Admiral Vernon, anneed in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 142 situation of, ii. 254 assumes a military tono, ii. 254 assumes a military tono, ii. 254 assumes a military tono, iv. 269 nevisited by Washington, iv. 260 MowAr, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 11 MOYLAN, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MULTENBERG, Gen., near Suffolk, iv. 263 encounters General Phillips, iv. 267 MULTERARY, Mrigadier, with Wolfe, detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, breaks the French eentre, i. 276 attacks De Levi, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, assends the river, ii. 280 Murrary, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Murrary, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrival of a British fleet, ii. 259 arrival of a British fleet, ii. 250 arrival of British treops, ii. 234 minimum of conspirace, ii. 243 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrives in camp, ii. 154 panie of the people, iii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 certification of the revolution, ii. 490 floor of the revolution, iii. 490 floor of the revolution, ii. 490 floor of the revolution, iii. 490 floor of the revolution	rives at Louisburg, 1. 237	New England resists the project of active at Sullivan's Island, glorious defence, ii. 277 receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, Sullivan's George Stanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, Sullivantion, Sull	Moulder, Captain, at Princeton, 11. 478	taxation, i. 304 glorious defence, receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, control of receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, control of proclamation, control of the	of Sullivents Latend receives thanks of Congress, ii. 277 proclamation, v. 188 Mount Defiance, strategetical position.  Mount Uperace, cvacuated, iii. 101 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, i. 21 quict disturbed, i. 142 situation of, i. 241 assumes a military tono, ii. 355 in danger, iv. 269 revisited by Washington, iv. 269 revisited by Washington, iv. 269 Mowart, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 71 Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, Milleranger, iv. 269 Mulleranger, General Phillips, iv. 267 Mulleranger, General Phillips, iv. 267 Mulleranger, iv. 269 strated by Washington, iv. 320 Mulleranger, iv. 269 mul	glavious defense	army, its situation, i, 410
Mount Depance, strategetical position, Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, ii. 262 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 262 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 263 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 264 Mount Independence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, named in honor of Latin Vernon, named in honor of the statistic statistic state to prise of satisfies the troops, iii. 455 troops, muntiny of, veneuated, troops, muntiny of, veneuated, Mount Defiance, strategetical position.  Iton, in the pendence, evacuated, iii. 193 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 194 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 214 guiet disturbed, i. 142 situation of, i. 214 saved from ravage, iv. 269 revisited by Washington, iv. 269 nevisited by Washington, iv. 269 Movaa, Lieut, destroys Falmeuth, ii. 319 Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkimson, iii. 319 Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkimson, iii. 329 Mutlerany, Brigadier, with Wolfe, i. 268 detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, iv. 269 streaks the French eentre, i. 276 attacks De Levi, i. 279 retreats into Quebee, iv. 269 retreats into Quebee, iv. 269 retreats into Quebee, iv. 279 retreats into Quebee, iv. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, iv. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, iv. 319 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, v. 287 Murrany, Mrs. aneedote, iv. 289 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, v. 287 Murrany, Mrs. aneelote, iv. 298 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, v. 287 Murrany, Mrs. aneelote, iv. 298 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, v. 287 Murrany, Mrs. aneelote, iv. 298 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, v. 287 Murrany, Mrs. aneelote, iv. 298 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, v. 287 Murrany, Mrs. aneelote, iv. 298 Murrany, Mrs. aneelote, iv. 298 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, v. 287 Murrany, Mrs. aneelote, iv. 298
Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 191 Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 191 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, it 142 guite disturbed, it 142 studed by Knyphansen, iv. 56 toxen Mow London, expedition against, iv. 312 taken by Arnold, iv. 203 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordens, named by Arnold, iv. 203 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 30 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 31 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 31 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 31 New London, expedition against, iv. 313 New Ordenas, v. 31 New London, expedition against, iv. 312 New Ordenas, v. 31 New London, expedition against, iv.		New Haven taken by the British, iii. 462
Mount Hope, fortified by Burgoyne, iii. 101 Mount Hopendence, evacuated, iii. 103 Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, anneed in honor of Admiral Vernon, ii. 214 gittuation of, i. 254 assumes a military tono, i. 355 in danger, ii. 110 saved from ravage, iv. 269 revisited by Wushinston, iv. 320 Mowart, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 71 Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MULLENBERG, Gen., near Suffolk, iv. 263 encounters General Phillips, iv. 263 encounters General Phillips, iv. 263 Murgary, Brigadier, with Wolfe, i. 268 detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, i. 272 breaks the French centre, i. 276 statacks De Levi, i. 279 refreats into Quebee, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, assends the river, i. 280 Murgary, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Murgary, Mrs., aneedote, ii. 350 Mussey, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, is 59 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrival of more ships, ii. 245 estruction of the statue of George University of the propher of contents of the people, convention at Whith laberity, iii. 472 troops, discontent of, iii. 472 tr		New Jersey, opinion of the revolution, ii. 419
Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, animaled in honor of Admiral Vernon, animaled in honor of Admiral Vernon, i. 1. 21 quiet disturbed, i. 1. 142 situation of, i. 244 assumes a military tono, i. 1. 254 assumes a military tono, i. 1. 255 in danger, ii. 1555 in danger, ii. 1555 in danger, ii. 1555 in danger, iii. 1526 revisited by Washington, iv. 263 Mowart, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 151 MovLan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 329 Mowart, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 250 encounters General Phillips, iv. 267 Mullerane, Major, to embark, ii. 157 Murlefring Town, ii. 548 Murren, Brigadier, with Wolfe, detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, iv. 256 attacks De Levi, i. 279 retreats into Quebee, iv. 257 desperate condition, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, iv. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, assends the river, iv. 268 Murren, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Murren, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, elarged with owardice, ii. 154 arrival of more ships, iii. 452 Legislature of, satisfies the troops, iii. 455 invaded by Knylphansen, iv. 56 to evacuated, iv. 65 to evacuated, iv. 269 to evacuated, iv. 269 to evacuated, iv. 65 to evacuated, iv. 269 to evacuated, iv.	Mount Hone fortified by Rusgayne iii 101
Mount Vernon, named in honor of Admiral Vernon, i. i. 14 quite disturbed, i. 142 situation of, assumes a military tono, i. 254 assumes a military tono, i. 255 in danger, ii. 110 saved from ravage, revisited by Washington, iv. 320 revisited by Washington, iv. 320 revisited by Washington, ii. 314 MONLAN, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 MULGRAVE, Major, to embark, ii. 177 Murdering Town, ii. 258 detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, ii. 279 is repulsed, revenue entre, ii. 279 desperate condition, ii. 279 desperate condition, ii. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ascends the river, ii. 250 arrival of a British fleet, ii. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ascends the river, ii. 250 washington the art of war, arrives in camp, ii. 351 Musex, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, elarged with owwardice, ii. 115 panie of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 245 ii. 246 convention at White Plains, iii. 246 convention at White Plains, iii. 247 convention at White Plains, iii. 248 convention at White P	Mount Independence evacuated iii 102
Admiral Vernon, die 1. 214 guiet disturbed, i. 142 situation of, i. 254 assumes a military tono, ii. 254 assumes a military tono, ii. 255 iin danger, iv. 269 revisited by Washington, iv. 269 Mowar, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 71 Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 342 MURLIGARVE, Major, teaches Washington ping above Quebec, iv. 263 attacks De Levi, i. 279 retreats into Quebec, iv. 279 retre	Mount Vernon, named in honor of quiet disturbed, situation of, situation of, situation of, situation of, situation of, situation of, saved from ravage, revisited by Washington, wow. of the saved from ravage, revisited by Washington, situation of, situation o	Admiral Vernon. i 21	invaled by Knyabancan situation of, assumes a military tono, i. 254 in danger, i. 255 in danger, ii. 255 in danger, iv. 269 revisited by Washington, iv. 269 Mowar, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 71 Movlan. Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 243 MURLERABERG, Gen., near Suffolk, iv. 263 encounters General Phillips, iv. 263 MURLERABE, Major, teaches Washington ping above Quebec, ib. 276 detached to operate against shipping above Quebec, ib. 279 retreats into Quebec, ib. 279 retreats into Quebec, ib. 279 retreats into Quebec, ib. 279 ordered to advance against Montreal, ib. 270 ordered t assumes a military tone, in danger, in danger, ii. 110 saved from ravage, iv. 205 revisited by Washington, iv. 205 revisited by Washington, iv. 205 revisited by Washington, ii. 312 MowAr, Leiut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 313 MowAr, Leiut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 314 MovAlan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 encounters General Phillips, iv. 207 Mulegave, Major, to embark, ii. 1.77 Murdering Town, ii. 1.77 Murdering Town, ii. 1.77 Murdering Town, ii. 205 breaks the French eentre, ii. 276 attacks De Levi, ii. 279 desperate condition, ii. 279 desperate condition, ii. 279 desperate condition, ii. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ascends the river, ii. 280 ascends the river, ii. 280 Muraray, Wilsam Vans, minister to Frank, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrivas of mark, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, ii. 104 arrival of more ships, ii. 243 arrives in camp, ii. 154 estruction of the statue of George Ulls, arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrives in camp, ii. 154 estruction of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 247 convention at White Plains, ii. 248 convention at White Plains, iii. 249 convention at White Plains, iii. 248 convention at White Plains, iii. 249 convention at White Pla in danger, saved from ravage, revisited by Washington, Mowart, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, Movlan, Coloncl, and Wilkinson, Morland, Coloncl, and Wilkinson, Murlerner General Phillips, cneounters General Phillips, iv. 263 Murdering Town, Murdering Town Methodound Assembly Murdering Town Methodound Assembly Murdering Town Methodound Assembly Murdering Town Methodound saved from ravage, iv. 263 revisited by Washington, iv. 320 Mowart, Lieut, destroys Falmouth, ii. 312 Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 312 Mutlerang, General Phillips, iv. 267 Mutlerang, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, elarged with owardiee, destroys Washington the fart of war, arrives in camp, arrival of mem, arrival of more ships, arrival of the people, carrival of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 248 arrives in camp, arrival of more ships, paine of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 248 character by Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, arrival of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 248 character by Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, arrival of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 248 character by Washington the statue of the people, carrival of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 248 character by Washington, iv. 269 chework, staution of, wewbork, iii. 449 chewyork resents the attempt against the resents the artempt against the independence of the judiciary, i. 362 research the attempt against the resists the mutiny act, iii. 419 proceedings in regard to stamp act, i. 310 resists the mutiny act, iii. 419 powers of Governor and Assembly suspended, at the revolution, i. 241 artivat of Sir Henry Clinton ii. 157 its effects, iii. 157 its effects, iii. 157 its effects, iii. 157 its effects, iii. 240 batteries at, (note.) iii. 243 carrivat of British treops, ii. 233 further arrivals, declaration of independence, iii. 243 deverse influences in, ii. 158 atlandence of the judiciary, i. 362 resists the mutiny act, iii. 416 resists the mutiny act, iii. 416 resists the mutiny act, iii. 416 resists the mutiny act, iii. 417 resists the mutiny act, iii. 417 resists the mutiny act, iii. 416 resists the mutiny act, iii. 416 resists the mutiny act, iii. 416 resists the mutiny act, iii. 417 resists the mutiny act, iii. 41		taken by Arnold 1v. 912 revisited by Washington, Mowart, Lieut, destroys Falmonth, ii. 71 Moylan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 342 Menlexberg, Gen., near Suffolk, iv. 233 encounters General Phillips, iv. 267 Mulgary Town, with Wolfe, detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, ii. 278 breaks the French centre, i. 276 attacks De Levi, i. 279 is repulsed, ii. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ascends the river, i. 280 ascends the river, i. 280 ascends the river, i. 280 Murrany, Mrs., aneclote, Muss., Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, elarged with owwardice, i. 115 elarged with owwardice, i. 115 panie of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 243 convention at White Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 247 convention at White Plains, ii. 248 convention at White Plains, iii. 248 convention at White Plains, iii. 249 convention at White Plains, iii. 248 convention at White Plains, iii. 249 conventio
MOVALN. Cloincl, and Wilkinson, iii. 342 MCHLENBERG. Gen., near Suffolk, encounters General Phillips, iv. 263 MULGRAVE. Major, to embark, ii. 174 Murdering Town, iii. 456 MURBAX, Brigadier, with Wolfe, i. 263 detached to operate against shipping above Quebec, i. 276 attacks De Levi, i. 279 attacks De Levi, i. 279 arrivate of a British fleet, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, iii. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, iii. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, iii. 280 MURBAX, William Vans, minister to France, v. 287 MURBAX, Mrs. aneedote, ii. 298 MUSS, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, elarriged with oowardice, ii. 214 elarged with oowardice, ii. 214 charged with oowardice, ii. 214 convention at Whithe Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 iii. 456 New York resents the attempt against the independence of the judiciary, i. 302 proceedings in regard to stamp act, i. 310 resist the mutiny act, powers of Governor and Assembly suspended, at the revolution, ii. 446 events in, in a panie at Lee's approach, ii. 38 adverse influences in, ii. 156 attracks De Levi, i. 279 arrival of Sir Henry Clinton ii. 157 its effects, ii. 279 its equition, ii. 456 attracks De Levi, ii. 214 at the revolution, ii. 346 at the revolution, ii. 446 at the revolution, ii. 446 at the revolution, ii. 446 at the revolution, ii. 340 at the revolution, ii. 446 at the r	revisited by Washington, iv. 320
MOVLAN. Coloned, and Wilkinson, MEHLENBERG, Gen., near Suffolk, iv. 236 encounters General Phillips, iv. 267 MULGRAYE, Major, to embark, ii. 177 Murdering Town, ii. 177 Murdering Town, with Wolfe, detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, breaks the French eentre, i. 276 attacks De Levi, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ascends the river, i. 280 more ascends the river, ii. 280 more ascends the river ascends the river ascends the river, ii. 280 more ascends the river ascends	Mowat, Lieut., destroys Falmouth, ii. 71	Newtown, battle at, iii. 456
the independence of the judiciary, i. 302 MULGRAYE, Major, to embark, ii. 177 MULGRAYE, Major, to embark, ii. 178 MURGRAY, Brigadier, with Wolfe, i. 268 detached to operate against shipping above Quebec, i. 279 is repails be Levi, i. 279 is repulsed, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ascends the river, i. 250 MURGAY, MISLAM VAINS, minister to France, v. 257 MURGAY, MISLAM VAINS, minister to F	Movlan, Colonel, and Wilkinson, iii. 342	New York resents the attempt against
Mulgraxy, Major, to embark, ii. 177 Murdering Town, Murgraxy, Brigadier, with Wolfe, i. 268 detached to operate against ship- ping above Quebec, i. 270 attacks De Levi, i. 279 is repulsed, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ii. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ii. 280 ascends the river, i. 290 Murraxy, William Vans, minister to France, v. 287 Murraxy, Mrs. aneedote, ii. 280 Mussy, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrivas in camp, ii. 154 arrivas in camp, ii. 243 estruction of the statue of George Hi. 243 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrival of the people, ii. 245 estruction of the people, ii. 246 estruction of the people ii. 246 estruction of	Muhlenberg, Gen., near Suffolk, iv. 263	the independence of the judiciary, i. 302
Murdering Town, Murdering Town	encounters General Phillips, iv. 267	proceedings in regard to stamp act. i. 310
Attackary, Brigadier, with Wolfe, detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, is 276 attacks De Levi, is 279 attacks De Levi, is 279 retreats into Quebec, is 279 desperate condition, is 279 desperate condition, is 279 arrival of a British fleet, is 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ascends the river, is 280 ascends the river, is 280 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, ancedote, v. 287 Murrany, Mrs. Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, arrival of more ships, arrival of more ships, is 243 arrival of more ships, is 244 arrives in camp, is 59 anie of the people, convention at White Plains, is 245 convention at White Plains, is 246 convention at White Plains, is 246 at the revolution, is 486 events in, in a panie at Lee's approach, ii. 138 at the revolution, is 486 adverse influences in, ii. 138 adverse influences in, ii. 148 adverse influences in, ii. 148 adverse influences in, ii. 159 at 279 ordered to advance against Montreal and the revolution, ii. 446 events in, ii. 286 arrival of a British recording its effects, iii. 157 alarm of conspiracy, arrival of British treops, ii. 238 further arrivals, popular joy at the declaration of independence, ii. 243 arrival of more ships, iii. 244 arrival of more ships, iii. 244 arrival in the revolution, ii. 446 events in, ii. 286 arrival of British recording in a panie of the revolution, ii. 446 events in, ii. 286 arrival of British recording in a panie at Lee's approach, ii. 158 adverse influences in, ii. 157 its effects, such creation of its effects, such creation of in a panie of the revolution, ii. 446 events in, ii. 286 arrival of British recording in a panie of the revolution, ii. 446 events in, ii. 286 arrival of British recording in a panie at Lee's approach, ii. 158 adverse influences in, ii. 158 adverse influences in, ii. 158 adverse influences in, ii. 157 its effects, such creation of its approach, ii	MULGRAVE, Major, to embark, ii. 177	resists the mutiny act, i. 314
Alterary, Brigadier, with Wolfe, detached to operate against shipping above Quebee, is 276 attacks De Levi, is repulsed, is 279 attacks De Levi, is 279 retreats into Quebee, is 279 desperate condition, is 279 desperate condition, is 279 arrival of a British fleet, is 279 ordered to advance against Montreal, ascends the river, is 280 Murrary, William Vans, minister to France, with the art of war, arrives in camp, the art of war, arrives in camp, arrival of more ships, arrival of more ships, is 243 arrival of more ships, is 244 arrives in camp, and of more ships, is 245 estarged with owardice, is 1245 convention at White Plains, is 245 convention at White Plains, is 246 convention.	Murdering Town, i. 84 ping above Quebee, i. 272 breaks the French centre, i. 276 attacks De Levi, i. 279 is repulsed, i. 279 retreats into Quebee, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, i. 280 ascends the river, i. 280 MURRAY, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 MURRAY, Milliam Vans, minister to France, v. 257 MURRAY, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, i. 59 arrives in camp, ii. 59 arrival of British troops, ii. 293 further arrivals, popular joy at the declaration of independence, ii. 243 destruction of the statue of George MUSS, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, i. 59 arrives in camp, ii. 276 ii. 172 convention of the people, ii. 243 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrival of more ships, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 breaks the French eentre, attacks De Levi, i. 276 in a panie at Lee's approach, ii. 138 adverse influences in. ii. 156 adverse influences in. ii. 156 arrival of Sir Henry Clinton ii. 157 retreats into Quebec, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, w. 257 Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, w. 257 Murrany, Mrs. anecdote, ii. 355 Mursany, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, ii. 59 arrival of more ships, ii. 243 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrives in camp, ii. 115 panie of the people, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246		at the revolution, i. 446 attacks De Levi, is repulsed, is 279 retreats into Quebec, is epilsed, is 279 retreats into Quebec, is 279 desperate condition, is 279 desperate condition, is 279 desperate condition, is 279 desperate condition, is 279 desperate of Sir Henry Clinton is 157 its effects, is 192 batteries at, (note,) is 280 ascends the river, is 280 Muranay, Mrs. aneedote, france, fr	ping above Quebec, 1. 272 is repulsed, retreats into Quebec, i. 279 desperate condition, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 arrival of British treops, ii. 230 alrun of conspiracy, ii. 230 furnaxy, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Muraxy, Milliam Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Muraxy, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Muraxy, Milliam Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Muraxy, William Vans, minister to F		in a panic at Lee's approach, ii. 138 retreats into Quebec, desperate condition, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 ordered to advance against Montreal, i. 230 ascends the river, i. 250 Murray, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Murray, Mrs., aneedote, will be art of war, arrives in camp, the art of war, arrives in camp, the arrived with opwardice, i. 124 charged with opwardice, i. 124 charged with opwardice, i. 124 convention at White Plains, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 247 convention at White Plains, iii. 248 convention at White Plains, iii. 157 letters descriptive of, iii. 157 letters descriptive of, iii. 192 batteries at, (note.) iii. 293 arrival of British treops, ii. 228 arrival of British treops, ii. 238 popular joy at the declaration of independence, ii. 248 destruction of the statue of George III.		adverse influences in, ii. 156 desperate condition, i. 279 arrival of a British fleet, i. 279 ordered to advauce against Montreal, ascends the river, i. 250 Muranxy, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Muranxy, Mrs., aneedote, ii. 355 Muss., Major, teaches Washington the art of war, i. 59 arrives in camp, ii. 59 arrives in camp, ii. 59 arrives in the art of war, ii. 59 charged with owardice, ii. 114 arrival of British treops, ii. 233 further arrivals, popular joy at the declaration of independence, ii. 243 destruction of the statue of George 11. arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrival of more ships, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 arrival of a British fleet, ordered to advauce against Mont- real, Murran, William Vans, minister to France, Muss, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, charged with cowardice, li 279 batteries at, (note,) ii 207 aların of conspiracy, ii 228 arrival of British treops, ii 238 popular joy at the declaration of independence, ii 325 li 325 estruction of the statue of Georgo III. arrival of more ships, ii 243 arrival of more ships, ii 243 convention at White Plains, ii 245 convention at White Plains, ii 246 ordered to advauce against Montreal, 1, 280 ascends the river, 1, 280 Muranx, William Vans, minister to France, v. 257 Muranx, Mrs. anecdote, v. 257 Muranx, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, i. 59 arrives in camp, 1, 115 charged with owardice, 1, 124 convention at White Plains, ii. 243 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 real, ascends the river, i. 280 MURRAY, William Vans, minister to France, i. 287 MURRAY, Mrs., anecdote, ii. 385 MUSE, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, i. 59 arrives in camp, i. 115 clarged with cowardice, i. 124 clarged with cowardice, i. 124 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 ascends the river,  Murray, William Vans, minister to France, Murray, Mrs., anecdote, Muss, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, charged with opwardice, 1.124  clurged with opwardice, 1.250  further arrivals, popular joy at the declaration of independence, ii. 234 destruction of the statue of George 111. arrival of more ships, panie of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 243 convention at White Plains, ii. 243 ii. 243	real 1 900	alarm of conspiracy, ii. 228
Murrany, William Vans, minister to France, V. 287 Murrany, Mrs. anecdote, Muss., Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, charged with cowardice, 1. 115 charged with cowardice, 1. 124 popular joy at the declaration of independence, destruction of the statue of George 111. arrival of more ships, panie of the people, ii. 243 panie of the people, iii. 244 convention at White Plains, iii. 245 convention at White Plains, iii. 246
France, v. 287 MUERAY, Mrs., aneedote, ii. 385 MUSE, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, elarged with cowardice, i. 124 elarged with cowardice, i. 124 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246	Murray William Vans minister to
Murray, Mrs., anecdote,     ii. 335       Murray, Major, teaches Washington     iii. 335       the art of war,     i. 59       arrives in camp,     ii. 115       charged with cowardice,     ii. 124       convention at White Plains,     ii. 245       convention at White Plains,     ii. 246	France. 2 987	popular joy at the declaration of Muse, Major, teaches Washington the art of war, arrives in camp, l. 115 charged with cowardice, i. 59 111. arrival of more ships, panie of the people, convention at White Plains, ii. 243 convention at White Plains, ii. 243 convention at White Plains, the art of war, i. 59 arrival of more ships, ii. 244 arrives in camp, l. 115 panie of the people, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 convention at White Plains, ii. 246		III :: 0.00 arrives in camp, charged with cowardice, 1.115 panic of the people, ii. 245 convention at White Plains, ii. 246	the art of war, i. 59 charged with cowardice, i. 124 convention at White Plains, ii. 246 charged with cowardice, i. 124	convention at White Plains. ii 948 obtains graut of land, (note), 1. 837 station secret committee in New	Ohio Company, formation of, i. 46

York, ii. 250	despatch Christopher Gist to ex-military measures, ii. 256	plore the Ohio, i. 49 arrival of a hundred sail, ii. 281 forces collected in and about, iii. 283	establish a trading company at Will's Creek, i. 55 forces collected in and about, convention order out levies, ii. 286	Ohio Tribes incensed at the French, i. 65 panic and distress, ii. 295	Ohio, expedition to the, i. 330 terror of the inhabitants, ii. 302	Old South Church, desecration of, ii. 77 question of its destruction, ii. 319	Oldham, Colonel, with St. Clair, v. 98 letters of British officers relative to, ii. 319	killed, v. 101
British ships come opposite, ii. 321	OLNEY, Mrs., and Washington, iv. 438 question of abandonment, ii. 329	Onondagas, settlement destroyed by the Americans, iii. 456 left by Congress to the discretion of Washington, ii. 331	Oriskany, battle of, iii. 153 agitations in, ii. 332	killed and wounded, iii. 155 more ships move up the Sound, ii. 332	ORME, Capt. Robert, hopes of success, i. 142 evacuated by Putnam, ii. 335	to Washington, i. 143 conflagration in, ii. 342	Osgood, Samuel, in the treasury ascribed to American incendiaries, ii. 342	board, v. 4
Committee of Safety, to Washing-	OSWALD, secretary to Arnold in the attack on Quebec, ii. 148 ton on the defence of the High- lands. ii. 350	attack on Quebec, ii. 148 leads forlorn hope, ii. 149
in perturbation on account of	marches to Danbury, iii. 47
French fleet, iii. 417	at Monmouth Court House, iii. 397 bay frozen over, iv. 5	Otis, James, against writs of assist-scarcity of food and fuel, iv. 5	ance, i. 302 reduction of, meditated, iv. 36	, to be attacked, iv. 276
failure of intended attack on, iv. 279	P.
alarm in, iv. 363	D Mr
preparations to evacuate, iv. 391	PAINE, Mr., i. 411 PAINE, Thomas, ii. 367 evacuated, iv. 406 excitement concerning the French	on Washington's retreat across the war, v. 171	Jerseys, ii. 436
Viagara, expedition against, i. 200	moral qualities of Washington, ii. 437 rallying place for Indians, Tories,	to Washington on the key of the rallying place for Indians, Tories, &c., iii. 432	to Washington on the key of the Bastille, v. 72
&c., iii. 432 Vicuous, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 91
&c., iii. 432 Vicnots, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Vicnotson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 91 PALFREY, Colonel William, substi-
Ke., iii. 492 Kenols, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Konolsson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333 Kicholson, Commodore, reception	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 91 PALFREY, Colonel William, substi- tutes an original prayer, ii. 114
&c., iii. 492 Nichols, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Nicholson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333 Victolson, Commodere, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 91 Palferey, Colonel William, substi- tutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 181
&c.,  Mil. 492 McHols, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 McHolson, John, Indian interpreter, 1. 393 McHolson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 McOll, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 91 Palfner, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 181 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 383
Kec, iii. 492 Nicuots, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 106 Nicuotson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 Nicuotson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 Nicola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of iv. 370	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 91 PALFIERY, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 PALMER, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 383 PARIS, Colonel, dispute with Her-
Ace, iii. 492 Number, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Numbers, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 Numbers, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 Numbers, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary teter of, Noalless, Viscount de, capitulation	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 PALFIEY, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 PALMER, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 PARIS, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155
Kee, iii. 492 Nichols, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Nicholson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333 Nicholson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 Nicola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of. iv. 370 Noalless, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 351 Non-importation Associations, effect	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 PALFIEY, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 PALMER, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 PARIS, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155
Kee, iii. 492 Muchols, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Mucholson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 Mucholson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 Muchols, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary Heter of, iv. 370 Monthes, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 851 Monthly Mucholson, 190 Monthly Mucholson, 190 Monthly Mucholson, 190 Muc	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 91 Palfrery, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 181 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Pants, Colonel, dispute with Herkins, colonel, dispute with 152 killed by Bed Jacket, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187
See, iii. 492 tucnots, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 tucnotson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 893 tucnotson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 trocal, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of iv. 870 toanles, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 851 Yon-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, tooks Hill, attempt to fortify, i. 179	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfrey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, iii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 181 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 389 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii. 152 kilmer, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to
Kee, iii. 432 tucnots, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 tucnots, Oxlon, Indian interpreter, i. 333 tucnots, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 tucota, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of, iv. 370 total, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary iv. 371 total, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary iv. 372 total, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary iv. 373 total, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary iv. 372 total, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary iv. 373 total, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary iv. 373 total, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary iv. 374 total, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary iv. 370 total, Colonel Lewis,	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 91 Palfiery, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Panis, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii 152 killed by Red Jacket, iii 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392
Ke, iii. 492 Lucious, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 106 Lucious, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 Lucious, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 Lucious, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary Lucter of, Volentles, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, Non-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, i. 326 Lucious, Martin, Lucious, ii. 327 Lucious, Martin, Martin, III. Lucious, Martin, Marti	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfrey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii. 152 killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedi-
Kee, iii. 432 VICHOLS, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 VICHOLSON, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333 VICHOLSON, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 VICHOLA, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of. iv. 370 VOLILES, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 351 VON-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, VONETH, Lord, premier, i. 327 VONETH, Lord, premier, i. 327 repeals duties except on tea, i. 327 on the right of taxation, ii. 327	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfrey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 13i Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 283 Paris, colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii 152 killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 449
Kee, iii. 432 MICHOLS, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 MICHOLSON, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333 MICHOLSON, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 MICHOLA, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of, iv. 370 MILLES, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 370 MOLILES, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 310 MOLILES, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 310 MOLILES, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 326 MOLILES, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 370 MOLILES, Viscount de, capitulat	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 91 Palfiery, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii 152 killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 442 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's
Kee, iii. 492 themore, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 themore, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 themore, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 themore, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of, iv. 470 toola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of, iv. 370 toola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of, iv. 370 toola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of, iv. 370 toola, Tooland toola	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfrey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 389 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii. 152 kimer, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 442 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 274
Kee, iii. 432 VICHOLS, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 VICHOLS, OS, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333 VICHOLSON, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, VICHOLA, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of, iv. 470 VOLILES, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, VON-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, VONETH, Lord, premier, VONETH, LORD, VONETH, VONETH, LORD, VONETH, VONETH	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfrey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, iii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 181 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii. 152 kimer, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 442 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 274 is repulsed, iii. 271 burns the Actreon, iii. 271
Kee, iii. 492 tucnors, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 tucnotson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 tucnorson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 tucola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of iv. 370 toal, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of or Synthesis, vis. 370 toal, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of on British commerce, iv. 351 ton-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, iv. 326 tooks Hill, attempt to fortify, iv. 370 ton the right of taxation, iv. 327 on the right of taxation, iv. 327 on the right of taxation, iv. 327 to the right of taxation, iv. 327 to the coloner of Cornwallis, iv. 356 torth Carolina to be invaded, iv. 79 the people and country, iv. 79	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 71 PALFREY, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 PALMER, Edmund, a spy, iii. 13i Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 283 PARIS, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii 152 killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155 PARKER, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 PARKER, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 PARKER, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 442 PARKER, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 274 burns the Acteon, ii. 276 burns the Acteon, ii. 276 Parliament taxes America, i. 305
Kee, iii. 492 Lucious, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Luciouson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 Riciouson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 Ricola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of iv. 370 Roalles, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 351 Roalles, Viscount de, capitulation of Freedom of the commerce, iv. 327 Roalles, Viscount de, capitulation on British commerce, iv. 327 Roalles, Viscount de, capitulation iv. 327 on the right of taxation, iv. 327 on the right of taxation, iv. 356 Roalles, Viscount de, capitulation iv. 350 Roalles,	Bastille, v. 79 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfiery, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii. 152 Killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, Parker, Gommodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 449 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 276 is repulsed, ii. 276 burns the Acteon, ii. 276 Parliament taxes America, ii. 306 imposes fresh duties on American
Kee, Sil. 432 Nichols, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Nicholson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333 Nicholson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, Nicola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of. Nolliles, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, Non-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, North, Lord, premier, repeals duties except on tea, on the right of taxation, bill favoring the export of tea, surrender of Cornwalls, North Charolina to be invaded, the people and country, North Charol used for fuel, 11. 73	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palferey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 13i Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 389 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii. 152 Killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 892 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 442 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 27' is repulsed, fi. 276 burns the Actreon, ii. 271 Parliament taxes America, i. 306 imposes fresh duties on American imports, i. 313
Kee, iii. 492 Nichols Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Nicholson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 Nicholson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 Nicola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of, Noalles, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 350 Non-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, i. 326 Nooks Hill, attempt to fortify, i. 179 Norrin, Lord, premier, i. 327 repeals duties except on tea, i. 327 on the right of taxation, i. 327 on the right of convalids, iv. 356 North Carolina to be invaded, iv. 79 the people and country, iv. 79 North Church used for fuel, ii. 77 Norwalk devastated by the British, iii. 463	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfier, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii. 152 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, v. 187 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 449 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 276 burns the Actron, ii. 276 burns the Actron, ii. 277 Parliament taxes America, i. 308 imposes fresh duties on American imports, ii. 313 extends the mutiny act to America, 1. 315 extends the mutiny act to America, 1. 315
Kee, Sil. 432 Nichols, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Nicholson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333 Nicholson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, Nicola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of. Nolliles, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, Non-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, North, Lord, premier, repeals duties except on tea, on the right of taxation, bill favoring the export of tea, surrender of Cornwalls, North Charolina to be invaded, the people and country, North Charol used for fuel, 11. 73	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfrey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, iii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii. 152 Rarker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 449 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 272 js repulsed, fi. 276 burns the Acteon, ii. 277 Parliament taxes America, i. 308 imposes fresh duties on American imports, extends the mutiny act to America, i. 313 extends the mutiny act to America, i. 313 importuned by British merchants, i. 326
Kee, iii. 432 Numors, Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Numors, John, Indian interpreter, i. 333 Numors, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, Numors, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of, iv. 370 Non-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, Nooks Hill, attempt to fortify, Norm, Lord, premier, repeals duties except on tea, on the right of taxation, bill favoring the export of tea, surrender of Cornwallis, North Charolina to be invaded, the people and country, Norwalk devastated by the British, iii. 468	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 72 Palfpers, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 13i Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 283 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii 152 killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 449 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 27i is repulsed, iii. 27i burns the Actæon, ii. 27i Parliament taxes America, ii. 305 inposes fresh duties on American imports, i. 313 extends the mutiny act to America, i. 315 importuned by British merchants, i. 326 passes the Boston Port Bill, i. 347
Cc.  Common Commonders of the Market Science S	Bastille, v. 79 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfrey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii 152 kimer, iii 152 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 449 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 272 sir epulsed, iii. 277 Parliament taxes America, iii. 305 imposes fresh duties on American imports, ii. 313 extends the mutiny act to America, i. 315 importuned by British merchants, i. 326 passes the Boston Port Bilt, ii. 347 other acts to the injury of Boston, i. 347 other acts to the injury of Boston, i. 347
Ce, Se, Se, Se, Se, Se, Se, Se, Se, Se, S	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 72 Palfpers, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 13i Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 283 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii 152 killed by Red Jacket, iii. 155 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 449 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 27i is repulsed, iii. 27i burns the Actæon, ii. 27i Parliament taxes America, ii. 305 inposes fresh duties on American imports, i. 313 extends the mutiny act to America, i. 315 importuned by British merchants, i. 326 passes the Boston Port Bill, i. 347
Cc.  Common Commonders of the Market Science S	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 72 Palfrey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, iii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 181 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 283 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii 152 kimer, iii 152 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 272 kinon against Georgia, iii. 442 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 272 is repulsed, fi. 276 burns the Actreon, iii. 277 Parliament taxes America, iii. 308 imposes fresh duties on American, iii. 308 imposes fresh duties on American, iii. 313 extends the muliny act to America, i. 314 passes the Boston Port Bill, i. 347 Other acts to the injury of Boston, i. 347 Paresons, General, sent to Peckskill, iii. 81 at West Point, iii. 362 Patterson, Colonel, interview with
Kee, iii. 492 Nichols Colonel, at Bennington, iii. 166 Nicholson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 Nicholson, John, Indian interpreter, i. 393 Nicholson, Commodore, reception of Washington at New York, iv. 470 Nichola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of Noahles, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, iv. 351 Non-importation Associations, effect on British commerce, i. 326 Nonk Hill, attempt to fortify, i. 179 Norri, Lord, premier, i. 327 repeals duties except on tea, i. 327 on the right of taxation, i. 327 on the right of taxation, i. 327 on the right of convalids, iv. 356 North Carolina to be invaded, iv. 79 the people and country, iv. 79 North Church used for fact, iv. 79 North Church used for fact, ii. 77 Norwalk devastated by the British, iii. 468  G.  Odden, Capt. Aaron, concerning the exchange of Arnold for André, iv. 137 Odden, Colonel Matthias, project to caphire Prince William Henry, iv. 362 DIABA, General, at the Yadkin, iv. 232	Bastille, v. 79 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 79 Palfiery, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, ii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 131 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 388 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii. 152 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 892 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 449 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 274 burns the Actæon, ii. 276 burns the Actæon, ii. 276 parliament taxes America, ii. 308 imports, ii. 318 extends the mutiny act to America, i. 316 importuned by British merchants, i. 326 passes the Boston Port Bill, i. 341 Parsons, General, sent to Peckskill, iii. 841 Parterson, Colonel, interview with Washington, ii. 258
See, See, Sii. 432 Lucinois, Colonel, at Bennington, Sii. 166 Lucinois, Colonnolore, reception of Washington at New York, Stocola, Colonel Lewis, extraordinary letter of Commodore, reception of Yorktown, Siv. 370 Non-Les, Viscount de, capitulation of Yorktown, Siv. 351 Non-Importation Associations, effect on British commerce, Siv. 357 Non-In, Lord, premier, Siv. 327 repeals duties except on tea, Siv. 326 on the right of taxation, Surrender of Cornwallis, Surrender of Cornwallis, Surrender of Cornwallis, Siv. 336 North Carolina to be invaded, Siv. 336 North Church msed for fuel, Siv. 79 North Church used for fuel, Siv. 79 North Church used for fuel, Siv. 346 OGDEN, Capt. Aaron, concerning the exchange of Arnold for André, Siv. 137 Odden, Capt. Aaron, concerning the exchange of Arnold for André, Siv. 137 Odden, Capt. Price William Henry, Siv. 362	Bastille, v. 72 Rights of Man reprinted, v. 72 Palfrey, Colonel William, substitutes an original prayer, iii. 114 Palmer, Edmund, a spy, iii. 181 Paris, treaty of peace signed at, iv. 283 Paris, Colonel, dispute with Herkimer, iii 152 kimer, iii 152 Parker, Colonel, debate on Jefferson's report, v. 187 Parker, Daniel, commissioner to New York, iv. 392 Parker, Commodore Hyde, expedition against Georgia, iii. 272 kinon against Georgia, iii. 442 Parker, Sir Peter, attacks Sullivan's Island, ii. 272 is repulsed, fi. 276 burns the Actreon, iii. 277 Parliament taxes America, iii. 308 imposes fresh duties on American, iii. 308 imposes fresh duties on American, iii. 313 extends the muliny act to America, i. 314 passes the Boston Port Bill, i. 347 Other acts to the injury of Boston, i. 347 Paresons, General, sent to Peckskill, iii. 81 at West Point, iii. 362 Patterson, Colonel, interview with

PAULDING, John, and André,	iv. 111	Pulling Conord commands artil
Paulus Hook, situation of,	iii. 473	Phillips, General, commands artil-earried by Major Lee,				- 8 relinquished by the British,	iii. 475	fortifies Sugar Hill,	111.	108
Prepare Vatherial or samulate	iv. 405	demurs to the expedition against PEABODY, Nathaniel, on committe	e ee			16 to confer with Washington,	iv. 33			28,
PEALE, Charles Wilson, portrait	OI			23
Washington, (appendix,)	i. 456			21
Peckskill, attack on,	iii, 29			26
Pellew, Edward, Lord Exmonth of				260
Lake Champlain,	ii. 390			267
Pendleron, Edmund, delegate to th	e	regains Petersburg,	ív.	260
General Congress,	i. 259	death of,	ív.	270 sets out for Philadelphia,	i. 363	Phipps' Farm, battery erected on,	íi.	100 against Washington as commande:	r-	Phenix ship of war sails up the in-chief,	i. 411	Hudson,	ii.	243
Pennsylvania troops described,	ii. 19	move up near Fort Montgomery,		257 sharpshooting,	ii. 19	and Rose retreat,		289 described by Graydon,	ii. 267	Piankeshas, king of,		52
Legislature of, remonstrate agains	st.	interview with the French ambas-	. 	٠.
the army going into winter-quar	r-	sadors,	i.	52
ters,	iii. 309	Pichon, M., to Wm. Vans Murray,		286 troops, their grievances,	iv. 194			237 revolt,	iv. 195
march towards Philadelphia,	iv. 196			240
at Princeton,	iv. 199			334
		at Entaw Springs,	IV.	330
British emissaries in camp,	iv. 201	Pickening, Colonel Timothy, with		00.5 accept propositions offered,	iv. 202	the Essex militia,		397 mutiny of,	iv. 398	quartermaster-general,	IV.	SO Council of, offer to Washington,	iv. 414	secretary of war,		211 insurrection in,	v. 197	to Washington urging his return,		220 quelled,	v. 202	secretary of state,	v.	220
Penobscot, Bay of, British fort at,	iii. 471	recommends Hamilton as second expedition against,	iii. 472	in command,		275
Percy, Lord, advances to reinforc		Piel, Lieutenant, character of Rahl,	ii.	457
Colonel Smith,	i. 395	account of treatment of Hessian continues the retreat,	i. 396	prisoners,	ii.	459 conduct of soldiers,	i. 396	Piekce, Leigh, anecdote of Wash-sharp skirmishing,	i. 396		v.	457 narrow escape,	i. 396	Pigot, Gen., ascends Breed's Hill,	i.	433 failure of ammunition,	i. 397	orders a retreat,	î.	433 to lead the attack against Dorches	-	orders a retreat, Рисотт, General Sir Robert, com-ter Heights,	ii. 177	mands at Rhode Island.	ii.	419
on Long Island,	ii. 295			419
leaves Flatlands in Clinton's divi		Pilgrims,		300 sion,	ii. 299	PINCKNEY, Colonel, commands Fort attacks the American lines,	ii. 367	Monltrie,	ν.	28 to reinforce Howe,	ii. 372		v.	45
menaces Fort Washington,	ii. 377	withdraws with part of the garri-	•	20
PETERS, Richard, secretary to Gov-			1.0	45
ernor Morris,	i. 147	PINCKNEY, Mr., concerning British		70
in camp,	i. 157	aggressions,	τ-	191 secretary to board of war and ord	- 1. 10.		٠.	101
nance,	ii. 209	PINCKNEY, Charles Cotesworth, min-		242
			٧.	242
Peters, Judge, receives Washington,	17. 405	dismissed by the French Govern-		000
Petersburg, ravaged by the British,				266
Perouney, Chevalier de,	1. 122			268
Philadelphia during the battle of				275
Brandywine,	iii. 194	his acceptance,	v.	251 strength of the British,	iii, 296	PINCKNEY, Thomas, wishes to be re-question of attack on,	fii. 296	lieved,	v.	242
British defences,	iii. 297	Pine, portrait of Washington, (ap-British army described,	iii. 349	pendix,)		457 number of British in,	iii. 374	Pine's Bridge,		372 preparations to evacuate,	iii. 355	Pine's Bridge, Piqua, Indian Town,		52 evacuated by the British,	iii. 388	PITCAIRN, Major, sent forward to Con	-
PHILIPSE, Miss Mary,	i. 210	cord,	i.	392
= :

enters Lexington,	i. 392	embarks at Oswego,	i. 262
orders the American yeomanry to	0	besieges Fort Niagara,	i. 266 disperse,	i. 392	is killed,	i. 266 pnts them to flight,	i. 393	PRINCE WILLIAM HENRY, project to slain at Bunker's Hill,	i. 439		v. 362
Pitt, William, administration,	i. 241	Princeton, British forces assembled	470
Pittsburg, embryo city,	i. 331		ii. 470
Plains of Abraham,	i. 270		ii. 478 taken possession of by Wolfe,	i. 275 i. 276		ii. 479 victory of the English,	i, 277	Pringle, Captain, conducts British armament on Lake Champlain,	ii. 386
POMEROY, Seth, nominated genera			ii. 887 officer,	i. 383		ii. 388 sppointed brigadier general,	i. 414		ii. 11
n favor of occupying Charlesto		Province Island, fortified by General heights,	i. 422	Howe, i	ii. 284
sharpshooting,	i. 438	Pulaski, Count, a volunteer, i	ii. 183 attempts to rally the troops,	i. 455		ii. 295
Pontiac's War,	i. 297		ii . 4 3 9
Postiac and Colonel Croghan,	i. 332	Pusaz, Hugh de, Bishop of Durham, Poor, General, to attack Bur-		his wealth and retinue,	i. 5
goyne,	iii. 237	prepares to join the crusade, but is	i. 6 attacks the enemy,	iii. 237	induced to remain,	i. 6
Porterfield, Colonel, commands	iv. 84	Putnam, Captain, despatched to Cambridge,	i. 432
Virginia troops, joins Gates,	iv. 85	PUTNAY, Israel, detached to recon-	1. 294 mortally wounded,	iv. 87	noitre,	i. 246
Portraits of Washington, (appendix)		at Boston,	i. 376
Port Royal Island, landing of Tarle	2-	his history,	i. 376 ton,	iv. 26	hears of the battle of Lexington,	i. 393
Portsmouth, expedition against,	iv. 261	in command of a regiment,	i. 401
Posey, Major, at the storming of	f	appointed major general,	i. 414
Stony Point,	iii. 467	in command of Connecticut troops,	1. 420
Potomac river,	i. 293	in favor of ocupying Charlestown	: 400
Powder, searcity of,	ii. 23	heights,	i. 422
Power, brigadier general, in the ir	iii. 87	opinion of American soldiers,	i. 422 i. 424
vasion from Canada, Prayers in Washington's camp,	i. 116	joins Prescott, advises fortifying Breed's Hill,	i. 425
Prescott, Colonel William,	i, 422	asks for reinforcements,	i. 429 to fortify Bunker's Hill,	i. 424	arrives at the redoubt,	i. 430 leave Cambridge,	i. 424	words with Prescott,	i. 430 crosses the Neck,	i. 425	orders a breastwork on Bunker's ascends Bunker's Hill,	i. 425	Hill,	i. 430 anxiety,	i. 426	suggests a novel rampart,	i. 431 inspires confidence,	i. 427	rallies the reinforcements,	i. 435 sends for reinforcements,	i. 429	attempts to rally the troops,	i. 433 tenders the command to Warren,		a leading spirit at Bunker's Hill,	i. 440 ii. 4 encourages his men,	i. 484	at Prospect Hill,	ii. 4 ii. 12 orders a retreat, services at Bunker's Hill,	i. 457 i. 440	his merits, complimented by Washington,	ii. 17
at Throg's Neck,	ii. 357	commands the centre,	ii. 18
Prescott, General, and Ethan Aller		and his female prize,	ii. 68 confined in jail,	ii. 107	christens the captured mortar,	ii. 102 commands British forces in Rhod		takes possession of Cobble Hill,	ii. 107
Island,	iii. 112	fortifies Lechmere Point,	ii. 107 exchanged for Lee,	iii. 37 7	anecdote of,	ii. 109
Perston, Major, in command of St		treats his men to an exploit,	ii. 165
Johns,	ii. 59	ready to attack Boston,	ii. 176
menful resistance,	ii. 83	appointed to command in New	:: 101
espitulates,	ii. 86	York,	ii. 191
Prevost, General, ordered to attach		military rule,	ii. 191 ii. 279
Georgia, takes Sunbury,	iii. 442 iii. 444	military devices, to Gates on the British force,	ii. 280 arrives at Savannah and take		in command of Long Island,	ii. 297 command,	iii, 444	crosses to Long Island,	ii. 297
Prevost, Bishop,	iv. 475	in favor of abandoning New York, PRIDEAUX, Brigadier General, to a	t-	to be stationed in New York,	ii. 331 tack Fort Niagara,	i. 266	retreat from New York,	ii. 335 10 described by Colonel Humphreys,	ii. 335	his character,	1. 457 traditional anecdote,	11, 835		i. 458 loss in the retreat,	ii. 335		i. 458

at McGowan's Pass,	ii. 338	RAMSEY, Colonel, at Monmouth Court	i. 397 commands troops in the Jerseys,	ii. 379 ii. 428	RANDOLPH, Edmund, nominated at-	1. 004 takes command of Philadelphia, ordered to Princeton,	iii. 425		v. 25 amount of force,	iii. 5		v. 26
stratagem to conceal his weakness,		opposed to a national bank,	v. 50 to command the Hudson,	ili. 68	to Washington, urging a continuance on the alert,	iii. 131	of oflice,	v. 122
to Sir Henry Clinton on Edmund		concerning French prizes,	v. 155
Palmer,	iii. 131	succeeds Jefferson as secretary of	v. 183 force at Peekskill,	iii, 222	state, Fauchet's despatch,	v. 221 to Clinton, on the designs of the	iii, 222	correspondence with Washington,	v. 223 to Clinton on the movements of		resigns,	v. 224
the enemy,	iii, 234	his vindication,	v. 227 prepares for an attack,	iii. 224	to Bushrod Washington, his contrioutmanœuvred by Sir Henry Clin-			v. 223 ton,	111. 228	RANDOLPH, Peyton, heads a company	i. 220 to Washington on the movements	::: 091	of volunteers,	24, 351 of the British,	iii. 231 iii. 283	clected moderator, i. 3: delegate to General Congress,	i. 859 desires to attack New York, his "hobby-horse,"	iii. 290	president of second Congress,	i. 408 goes to Connecticut on private		return to Virginia Assembly,	i. 408 matters,	iii. 362	RANDOLPH, of Tuckahoe, and his near West Point,	iii. 486	horse Shakespeare,	i. 286
at West Point,	iii. 437	Rank of officers,	i. 133 commands at Danbury,	iii, 445	RAPELYE, Mrs., betrays the Amer-	ii. 316
at Smith's Clove,	iii. 461 iv. 384		ii 226 seconds the resolutions of Knox, Putnam, Colonel Rufus, directs the	11.004		v. 28 works about Kingsbridge,	ii. 218	at Camden,	iv. SI
PYLE, Colonel, defeated by Lee and		concentrates his forces at Camden,	lv. 86
Pickens,	iv. 240	on the American yeomanry,	v. 178
·			v. 295
		evacuates Camden,	iv. 296 iv. 298
Q.		enters Ninety-Six, pursues Grant,	iv. 298
Quaker Hill occupied by the British	111 946	pursues Grant, at Orangeburg,	iv. 298
Quebec, its situation,	i. 269	departs for Europe,	v. 304 capitulates,	i. 273	RAWLINGS, Colonel, at Fort Washing-alarm caused by Arnold,	ii. 121	ton,	ii. 395 besieged by Montgomery,	il. 142	driven in by Rahl,	ii. 393 11, 003
the assault,	ii. i46	RAWLINS bleeds Washington,	v. 294 arrival of reinforcements,	ii. 200	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery creeted at,	v. 294 ii. 292
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised,	ii. 200 ii. 201	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 arrival of reinforcements,	ii. 200	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery creeted at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 iii. 155
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised,	ii. 200 ii. 201	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, REED, Colonel Joseph, ordered to as-	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 iii. 155
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,	ii. 200 ii. 201	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery creeted at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 802 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery creeted at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, REED, Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 i. 453 arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Joslah, at town meetings, RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361	RAWLISS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, REED, Colonel Joseph, ordered to as- sist Presectt, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 i. 453
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, QUINCY, Josiah, at town meetings,  R.  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill,	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361 r- ii. 369	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Repo, Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 i. 458 ii. 14 ii. 14
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,  R.  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington,	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361 r- ii. 369 ii. 396	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Repo, Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends, on searcity of powder,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 i. 458 ii. 14 ii. 14 ii. 24
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,  R.  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings,	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361 r- ii. 369 ii. 398	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, REED, Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends, on searcity of powder, on reserve of ammunition,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 i. 453 ii. 14 ii. 14 ii. 24 ii. 50
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,  IR.  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings, in command of Trenton,	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361 r- ii. 369 ii. 398 ii. 442	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, REED, Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends, on scarcity of powder, on reserve of ammunition, departs for Philadelphia,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 i. 458 ii. 14 ii. 14 ii. 24
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Joslah, at town meetings,  R.  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings, in command of Trenton, described,	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361 r- ii. 369 ii. 396 ii. 442 ii. 442	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery creeted at, cannonacled, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Itero, Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's sceretary, remonstrance of friends, on searcity of powder, on reserve of ammunition, departs for Philadelphia, meets Lieutenant Brown,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 ii. 14 ii. 14 ii. 24 iii. 50 ii. 75 ii. 252 iii. 252
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,  IR.  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings, in command of Trenton,	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361 r- ii. 369 ii. 396 ii. 442 ii. 442	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery creeted at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Reno, Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends, on searcity of powder, on reserve of ammunition, departs for Philadelphia, meets Lieutenant Brown, recognition of Washington's rank, declines to receive the letter,	v. 294 ii. 292 ii. 302 ii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 i. 453 iii. 14 ii. 14 iii. 24 iii. 50 ii. 252 iii. 252
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings, in command of Trenton, described, reconnoitres the banks of the Del ware, warned of the attack,	ii, 200 ii, 201 i, 361 i. 361 r- ii, 369 ii, 396 ii, 398 ii, 442 ii, 442 a- ii, 444 ii, 450	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Report Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends, on searcity of powder, on reserve of ammunition, departs for Philadelphia, meets Lieutenant Brown, recognition of Washington's rank, declines to receive the letter, on sectional jealousies,	v. 294 ii. 292 iii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 ii. 454 i. 453 ii. 14 ii. 14 ii. 50 ii. 75 ii. 252 ii. 252 ii. 266
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings, in command of Trenton, described, reconnoitres the banks of the Delware, warned of the attack, alarm at an outpost,	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361  r- ii. 369 ii. 396 ii. 398 ii. 442 ii. 442 a- ii. 444 ii. 450	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Report Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends, on searcity of powder, on reserve of ammunition, departs for Philadelphia, meets Lieutenant Brown, recognition of Washington's rank, declines to receive the letter, on sectional jealousies, on the policy of remaining in New	v. 294 ii. 292 iii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 i. 458 ii. 14 ii. 14 ii. 24 iii. 50 ii. 752 ii. 252 ii. 252 ii. 266
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Joslah, at town meetings, R.  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings, in command of Trenton, described, reconnoitres the banks of the Del ware, warned of the attack, alarm at an outpost, relaxes his vigilance,	ii. 200 ii. 201 i. 361  r- ii. 369 ii. 398 ii. 442 ii. 442 a- ii. 450 ii. 450 ii. 451	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonacled, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Rend Jacket at Oriskany, Rend Jacket at Oriskany, or o	v. 294 ii. 292 iii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 ii. 454 i. 458 ii. 14 ii. 24 iii. 50 ii. 75 ii. 252 ii. 252 ii. 266 ii. 282
arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings, in command of Trenton, described, reconnoitres the banks of the Delware, warned of the attack, alarm at an outpost, relaxes his vigilance, bewildered by the attack,	ii, 200 ii, 201 i, 361 i. 361 r- ii, 369 ii, 396 ii, 398 ii, 442 ii, 442 a- ii, 450 ii, 450 ii, 451 ii, 454	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Report Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends, on searcity of powder, on reserve of ammunition, departs for Philadelphia, meets Lieutenant Brown, recognition of Washington's rank, declines to receive the letter, on sectional jealousies, on the policy of remaining in New York, relative to Clinton's arrival at New	v. 294 ii. 302 iii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 i. 454 i. 453 ii. 14 ii. 14 ii. 24 iii. 55 ii. 252 ii. 252 ii. 266 ii. 282 arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Qrincy, Josiah, at town meetings, R. Rahl, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings, in command of Trenton, described, reconnoitres the banks of the Del ware, warned of the attack, alarm at an outpost, relaxes his vigilance, bewildered by the attack, vash charge,	ii, 200 ii, 201 i, 361  r- ii, 369 ii, 396 ii, 398 ii, 442 ii, 443 ii, 450 ii, 451 ii, 454 ii, 455	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonacled, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Rend Foot Street, Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends, on searcity of powder, on reserve of ammunition, departs for Philadelphia, meets Lieutenant Brown, recognition of Washington's rank, declines to receive the letter, on sectional jealousies, on the policy of remaining in New York, relative to Clinton's arrival at New York.	v. 294 ii. 292 iii. 302 iii. 155 i. 429 ii. 454 i. 458 ii. 14 ii. 24 iii. 50 ii. 75 ii. 252 ii. 252 ii. 266 ii. 282 arrival of reinforcements, blockade raised, Quincy, Josiah, at town meetings,  RAHL, Colonel, attack on Chatte ton's Hill, attack on Fort Washington, drives in Colonel Rawlings, in command of Trenton, described, reconnoitres the banks of the Delware, warned of the attack, alarm at an outpost, relaxes his vigilance, bewildered by the attack,	ii, 200 ii, 201 i, 361 i. 361 r- ii, 369 ii, 396 ii, 398 ii, 442 ii, 442 a- ii, 450 ii, 450 ii, 451 ii, 454	RAWLINS bleeds Washington, Red Hook, battery erected at, cannonaded, Red Jacket at Oriskany, Reno, Colonel Joseph, ordered to assist Prescott, repulses General Howe, maintains his position, Washington's secretary, remonstrance of friends, on searcity of powder, on reserve of ammunition, departs for Philadelphia, meets Lieutenant Brown, recognition of Washington's rank, declines to receive the letter, on sectional jealousies, on the policy of remaining in New York, relative to Clinton's arrival at New York, on the British,	v. 294 ii. 294 ii. 302 iii. 155 ii. 429 ii. 454 ii. 14 ii. 14 ii. 24 ii. 75 ii. 252 ii. 252 ii. 252 ii. 252 ii. 252

	i. 319 <sub> </sub>			219
on the awkward position of the				249
ariny, i	i, 321 [	reception by Schuyler,	iii.	254 concerning descritions, i	i. 323	Rifle dress, origin of,	i	255
	i. 832			94
		RIKER, Lieutenant,	11.	J-1
	i. 339	Robertson, miniature of Washing-insolence of British troops, i	i. 340	ton, (appendix,)	î.	458 to his wife, from Harlem Heights, ii		Robertson, General, communicates
	. 000	with Conoral Horro		1-0 opposed to holding Fort Washing-		with General Howe, Robertson, Lieutenant General, on	11.	178
	i. 393	Robertson, Lieutenant General, on to Lee, disparaging to Washington, ii	. 405	commission concerning Andre,	iv.	139
	i. 408			140
				110
	i. 410	Robinson, Col. Beverly, and Wash-reconciliation, (note,)	i. 417	ington,	i.	210 on Washington's return to Prince-	- 1	in the attack against Fort Monti, 425	comera	::: ·	226
	i. 440	connection with Arnold's treason, marches to Bordentown, i	i. 464	attempted interview,	iv.	103
	i. 466	to Washington, interceding for ive	124
	i. 467
	i. 471			139
scours the country,	i. 484	Robinson, Speaker, thanks Washing-
	i. 73	ton on behalf of the colony,		282
	i. 297
	1. 291	objects to Patrick Henry's resolu-
to Wharton, relative to attack on		tions,		306
Philadelphia, iii	i. 299	ROCHAMBEAU, Count de, expected,	iv.	35
	i. 303		iv.	69
				69
	i. 306		įv.
reply to Johnstone, ii	i. 383	to Vergennes on the state of affairs,	ıv.	70 drafts proclamation for Arnold, in	r. #11	his troops,	iv.	71 to Greene, on Arnold's conduct, in	r. 13	informs Washington of ships to be
	. 10	cont to the Channesha		057
president of the executive council			iv.	201 of Pennsylvania, iv	v. 13	arranges plan of campaign with increased powers, iv	7. 41	Washington,	iv.	260
	. 200	interview with Washington,	iv	275
ampiron of Dringston ir	<ul> <li>001</li> </ul> arrives at Princeton, iv	. 201	arrival with troops,	iv.
arrives at Princeton, iv	v. 201	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry,	iv. iv.	280
arrives at Princeton, iv	v. 201	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry,	iv. iv.	280
arrives at Princeton, iv propositions to the troops, iv Reign of Terror, commencement of, w	v. 201   z. 1 38	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres,	iv. iv. iv.	$\frac{280}{282}$ arrives at Princeton, iv propositions to the troops, Reign of Terror, commencement of, v REPART, Captain, i. 78	v. 201 v. 138 8, 80	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament,	iv. iv. iv. iv.	$\frac{280}{282}$ $\frac{283}{283}$ arrives at Princeton, iv propositions to the troops, iv Reign of Terror, commencement of, vi REPART, Captain, i. 79 Republicans, party formed,	v. 201 v. 138 8, 80 r. 82	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp,	iv. iv. iv. iv.	$\frac{280}{282}$ $\frac{283}{283}$ arrives at Princeton, iv propositions to the troops, iv Reign of Terror, commencement of, vi REPART, Captain, i. 79 Republicans, party formed,	v. 201 v. 138 8, 80 r. 82 i. 401	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament,	iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 283 310
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, in Reign of Terror, commencement of, variety and in the troops, in the commencement of, variety formed, in the commenced, in the commenced, in the commenced, in the commence of the commenc	v. 201 v. 138 8, 80 r. 82 i. 401	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washing-	iv. iv. iv. iv.	$\frac{280}{282}$ $\frac{283}{283}$ arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, variety, and the troops, is repart, Captain, i. 78. Republicans, party formed, account on commenced, trials of the, is	v. 201 v. 138 8, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 2	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington,	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 283 310 311
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, iverself the propositions to the troops, iverself the propositions to the troops, iverself the proposition in the proposition in the proposition in the proposition commenced, in the proposition of the proposition in the propositi	v. 201 v. 138 8, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washing- ton, pecuniary assistance,	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, in Reign of Terror, commencement of, variety of Terror, commencement of, variety of Terror, captain, i. 78 Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, in Revnell, Lieutenant, it Rhode Island, sends volunteers,	v. 201 7. 138 8, 80 7. 82 1. 401 v. 2 1. 215 1. 401	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washing- ton, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington,	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 253 310 311 315 320
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, in Reign of Terror, commencement of, variety of Terror, commencement of, variety of Terror, captain, i. 78 Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, in Revnell, Lieutenant, it Rhode Island, sends volunteers,	v. 201 v. 138 8, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washing- ton, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers,	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, Repart, Captain, i. 78 Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, is REYNELL, Lieutenant, Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, i	v. 201 7. 138 8, 80 7. 82 1. 401 v. 2 1. 215 1. 401	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washing- ton, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers,	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 253 310 311 315 320 arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, iv Reign of Terror, commencement of, variety formed, i. ?? Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, REYNELL Lieutenant, if Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connection fit	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 7	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washing- ton, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg.	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 358
arrives at Princeton, iversease propositions to the troops, in Reign of Terror, commencement of, variety of the Republicans, party formed, excellents, party formed, trials of the, in Revolution commenced, trials of the, in Revenue, it Revenue, Lieutenant, it Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, i	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 7	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point,	iv.	280 282 283 310 315 320 345 358 372
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, iverpropositions to the troops, iverpropositions to the troops, iverpropositions to the troops, the proposition of the trials of the, iverproposition commenced, iverpropositions of the trials of the, iverproposition of the troops, their fine condition, iverproposition of the trial of trial of the trial of the trial of trial	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of,	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 358
arrives at Princeton, iversease in propositions to the troops, in propositions to the troops, in propositions to the troops, in the prince of the proposition of the	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419 i. 419	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucauld, Liancourt, and Lou	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 283 310 315 320 345 358 372 175
arrives at Princeton, iversease in propositions to the troops, in propositions to the troops, in propositions to the troops, in the prince of the proposition of the	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419 i. 419	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucauld, Liancourt, and Lou	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv.	280 282 283 310 315 320 345 358 372 175
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, as Repart, Captain, i. 78 Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, is REYNELL, Lieutenant, ii Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connectiont fit out armed vessels, is (proper.) situation of, ii plan of attack, ii siege abandoued, ii siege abandoued, ii	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 v. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419 i. 419	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucauld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI.	iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. iv. v. iv. i	280 282 283 310 811 815 820 845 858 872 175 arrives at Princeton, iv propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, vice and the proposition of the propo	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 v. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419 i. 419 i. 425 i. 426	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochepoucauld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at,	iv.	280 282 283 310 315 320 345 358 372 175 35
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, X Repart, Captain, i. 78 Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, it Rexentl, Lieutenant, ii Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, Massachusetts and Connectiont fit out armed vessels, i (proper,) situation of, ii plan of attack, ii siege abandoned, retreat from, ir evacuated by the British, iii	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 v. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419 i. 419	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoulawld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner,	iv.	280 282 283 310 811 815 820 845 858 872 175
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, iv propositions to the troops, iv Reign of Terror, commencement of, variety of the property of the proposition of the Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, it Revnell, Lieutenant, ii Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, (proper.) situation of, ii (proper.) situation of, ii siege abandoned, ii retreat from, ii retreat from, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washing-	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 r. 82 i. 401 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419 ii. 425 i. 426 i. 426	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, ton, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucauld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the Brit	iv.	280 282 283 210 311 315 320 345 358 372 175 35 62 83
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, iv propositions to the troops, iv Reign of Terror, commencement of, variety of the property of the proposition of the Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, it Revnell, Lieutenant, ii Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, (proper.) situation of, ii (proper.) situation of, ii siege abandoned, ii retreat from, ii retreat from, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washing-	v. 201 v. 138 S, 80 v. 82 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419 i. 419 i. 425 i. 426	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, ton, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucauld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the Brit	iv.	280 282 283 310 315 320 345 358 372 175 35
arrives at Princeton, iverpropositions to the troops, iverpropositions to the troops, iverpropositions to the troops, iverpropositions to the troops, iverproposition of the trials of the, iverproposition commenced, trials of the, iverpropositions of the, iverpropositions of the troops, their fine condition, in the troops, their fine condition, in the trials of the	v. 201 v. 138 S. 80 S. 80 v. 2 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 ii. 70 ii. 419 ii. 425 ii. 426 ii. 479	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucallo, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the British,	iv.	280 282 283 283 283 310 311 315 320 345 358 372 175 62 83
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, is Republicans, party formed, Republicans, party formed, trials of the, is Reynella, Lieutenant, ii Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, is Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels. (proper.) situation of, ii plan of attack, ii glan of attack, ii greatenated by the British, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, is RICHANDSON in Arnold's possession, is	v. 201 v. 138 v. 138 v. 138 v. 20 i. 401 v. 2 i. 215 i. 401 i. 407 ii. 409 ii. 419 ii. 425 ii. 426 ii. 426 ii. 428 v. 206	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucavld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Summer, Rodney, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade,	iv.	280 282 283 283 283 310 311 315 320 345 358 372 175 62 83 180 345 arrives at Princeton, ipropositions to the troops, is propositions to the troops, is propositions to the troops, is respectively as a superior of the proposition of	v. 201 v. 138 v. 138 v. 138 v. 20 i. 401 i. 401 i. 401 i. 419 ii. 419 ii. 425 ii. 426 ii. 426 ii. 426 ii. 426 ii. 323 v. 206 ii. 224	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochepoucauld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck,	iv.	280 282 283 283 283 310 311 315 320 345 358 372 175 62 83
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, is Republicans, party formed, Republicans, party formed, trials of the, is Reynella, sends volunteers, trials of the, is Reynell, Lieutenant, ii Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, is (proper.) situation of, ii plan of attack, ii plan of attack, ii gea abandoned, ii retreat from, ir evacuated by the British, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii RICHARDSON in Arnold's possession, is RICHARDSON in Arnold's possession, ii RICHARDSON in Arnold's possession, ii the invasion from Canada, ii in the invasion from Canada, ii	v. 201 v. 135 v. 135 v. 135 v. 135 v. 25 i. 401 i. 215 i. 401 i. 419 i. 419 i. 425 i. 426 i. 479 i. 323 v. 224 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 iii. 87	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, aw kward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucavid, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Summer, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romliv, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's Romliv, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's	iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 358 372 175 83 180 345 364
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, is Republicans, party formed, Republicans, party formed, trials of the, is Reynella, sends volunteers, trials of the, is Reynell, Lieutenant, ii Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, is (proper.) situation of, ii plan of attack, ii plan of attack, ii gea abandoned, ii retreat from, ir evacuated by the British, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii RICHARDSON in Arnold's possession, is RICHARDSON in Arnold's possession, ii RICHARDSON in Arnold's possession, ii the invasion from Canada, ii in the invasion from Canada, ii	v. 201 v. 138 v. 138 v. 138 v. 20 i. 401 i. 401 i. 401 i. 419 ii. 419 ii. 425 ii. 426 ii. 426 ii. 426 ii. 426 ii. 323 v. 206 ii. 224	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochepoucauld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck,	iv.	280 282 283 283 283 310 311 315 320 345 358 372 175 62 83 180 345
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, and the propositions to the troops, is Repart, Captain, i. 78. Republicans, party formed, and the proposition of the, and the proposition of the, is Revnell, Lieutenant, for the proposition, in the fine condition, in the standard vessels, and connection fit out armed vessels, in the fine condition, in the standard property situation of, in the fine condition, in the standard property of the property situation of, in the standard property of the British, in the standard property of the British, in the invasion from Canada, attacks St. Clair's rear-guard, in	v. 201 v. 135 v. 135 v. 135 v. 135 v. 25 i. 401 i. 215 i. 401 i. 419 i. 419 i. 425 i. 426 i. 479 i. 323 v. 224 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 ii. 226 iii. 87	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rocheforcally, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romilly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,)	iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 358 372 175 83 180 345 364 arrives at Princeton, ipropositions to the troops, is propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, in Repart, Captain, i. 78 Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, is Revnett, Lieutenant, if Revnett, Lieutenant, it Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, if (proper.) situation of, if plan of attack, if is is geabandoned, if retreat from, evacuated by the British, it Richardson, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, Richardson, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, it Richardson, Captain Canada, in the invasion from Canada, in the invasion from Canada, is attacks St. Clair's rear-guard, it demurs to the expedition against	v. 201 v. 138 s, 80 s, 1215 s, 401 s, 419 s, 425 s, 425 s, 425 s, 425 s, 425 s, 479 s, 206 s, 224 s, 108 s, 10	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucalld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romilly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hud-	iv.	280 282 253 310 311 315 320 345 353 372 175 35 83 180 345 364
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, is Republicans, party formed, Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, is REYNELL, Lieutenant, ii Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, is Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, is (proper.) situation of, ii plan of attack, ii glan of attack, ii glan of attack, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, is reaccusted by the British, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, it RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii RICHARDSON,	v. 201 v. 138 s, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 22 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419 ii. 425 i. 426 i. 479 ii. 426 ii. 426 ii. 419 ii. 419 ii. 426 ii. 419 ii. 419 iii. 410 iii. 4	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucauld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodney, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romilly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,)	iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 353 372 175 62 83 180 345 345 364 143 245
arrives at Princeton, ipropositions to the troops, is represented by the propositions to the troops, is represented by the propositions to the troops, is represented by the proposition of the proposition	v. 201 v. 138 s. 80 s. 80 s. 82 i. 401 i. 215 ii. 401 ii. 419 ii. 425 ii. 426 ii. 423 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 425 iii. 426 iii. 426	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucalld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romilly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hudson, moves up near Fort Montgomery,	iv.	280 282 283 310 811 315 320 345 353 372 175 83 180 345 364 143 245 257
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, N. Repart, Captain, i. 78. Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, is REYNELL, Lieutenant, ii. Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, if (proper.) situation of, if plan of attack, ii. (proper.) situation of, iii. (proper.)	v. 201 v. 138 s, 80 r. 82 i. 401 v. 22 i. 215 i. 401 i. 70 i. 419 ii. 425 i. 426 i. 479 ii. 426 ii. 426 ii. 419 ii. 419 ii. 426 ii. 419 ii. 419 iii. 410 iii. 4	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucavid, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodens, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romilly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hudson, moves up near Fort Montgomery, and Phænix retreat,	iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 353 372 175 62 83 180 345 345 364 143 245
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, N. Repart, Captain, i. 78. Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, is REYNELL, Lieutenant, ii. Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, in Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, if (proper.) situation of, if plan of attack, ii. (proper.) situation of, iii. (proper.)	v. 201 v. 138 s. 80 s. 80 s. 82 i. 401 i. 215 ii. 401 ii. 419 ii. 425 ii. 426 ii. 423 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 426 iii. 425 iii. 426 iii. 426	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucavid, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodens, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romilly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hudson, moves up near Fort Montgomery, and Phænix retreat,	iv.	280 282 283 310 811 315 320 345 353 372 175 83 180 345 364 143 245 257 arrives at Princeton, iv propositions to the troops, iv Reign of Terror, commencement of, view of the troops, and the property of the prince of the proposition of the property of the prince of the property of the prince of the property of the prince of t	v. 201 v. 136 v. 180 v. 20 v. 21 v. 21 v. 21 v. 21 v. 419 ii. 419 ii. 425 ii. 425 ii. 425 ii. 425 ii. 425 ii. 426 ii. 425 ii. 426 ii. 425 ii. 425 iii. 425	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucalld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romilly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hudson, moves up near Fort Montgomery, and Phænix retreat, Ross, Major, capitulation of York-	iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 353 372 175 35 62 83 180 345 364 143 245 2257 2289
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, x Repart, Captain, i. 78 Republicans, party formed, Revolution commenced, trials of the, is Rexnell, Lieutenant, ii Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, i (proper,) situation of, ii iplan of attack, ii siege abandoned, iii retreat from, evacuated by the British, ii RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, ii RICHARDSON, Tarnold's possession, ii RIEDESEL, Baron, in Canada, ii attacks St. Clair's rear-guard, demurs to the expedition against Bennington, in the attack on Gates, iin the attack on Gates, iin the attack of Gates, iin the attack on Gates, iin the attack of Gates, iin the attack of Gates, iin the attack of Gates, iin the attack on Gates, iin covers Burgoyne's retreat, iin RIEDESEL, Baroness de, with Burgoyne's army, iii	v. 201 v. 1885 S, 50 v. 1885 S, 50 v. 22 i. 401 i. 421 i. 421 i. 425 i. 429 i. 425 i. 429 i. 425 i. 429 i. 425 i. 426 i. 426 i. 427 i. 428 i. 428	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoulawld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romlly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hudson, moves up near Fort Montgomery, and Phænix retreat, Ross, Major, capitulation of Yorktown,	iv.	280 282 283 310 811 315 320 345 353 372 175 83 180 345 364 143 245 257
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, and the propositions to the troops, is Repart, Captain, i. 78. Republicans, party formed, and the proposition of the, and the proposition of the, is Revnell, Lieutenant, if Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, if Massachusetts and Connection fit out armed vessels, if (proper.) situation of, if iplan of attack, is siege abandoned, if retreat from, if verteat from Canada, in the invasion from Canada, if verteat from Canada, in the invasion from Canada, if verteat from Canada, in the attack on Gates, if verteat from the attack of Gates, if verteat from the atta	v. 201; 185; 5, 80; 5, 80; 82; 2, 10; 140; 1, 40; 1, 40; 1, 419; 419; 419; 419; 419; 419; 419; 419;	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Werplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rocheptocally, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodney, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romlly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hudson, moves up near Fort Montgomery, and Phenix retreat, Ross, Major, capitulation of York-town, Rugeley, Colonel, taken by Colone.	iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 358 372 175 62 83 345 364 143 245 2257 289 352
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, and Republicans, party formed, Republicans, party formed, trials of the, signeral control of the control of t	v. 201, 7, 1888, 8, 80, 82, 8, 80, 82, 82, 82, 82, 82, 83, 84, 84, 84, 84, 84, 84, 84, 84, 84, 84	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucalld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Summer, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romilly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note.) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hudson, moves up near Fort Montgomery, and Phænix retreat, Ross, Major, capitulation of Yorktown, Regley, Colonel, taken by Colone. Washington.	iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 353 372 175 35 62 83 180 345 364 143 245 2257 2289
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, and the propositions to the troops, is Repart, Captain, i. 78. Republicans, party formed, and the proposition of the, and the proposition of the, is Revnell, Lieutenant, if Rhode Island, sends volunteers, troops, their fine condition, if Massachusetts and Connectient fit out armed vessels, if (proper.) situation of, if in July of Attack, in siege abandoned, if retreat from, if evacuated by the British, if RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at New York, if RICHARDSON, Colonel, joins Washington at the invasion from Canada, in the invasion from Canada, in the invasion from Canada, in the attack on Gates, covers Burgoyne's retreat, if RICHESEL, Baroness de, with Burgoyne's retreat, if RICHESEL, Baroness de, with Burgoyne's retreat, if dines in camp, during the battle,	v. 2017, 1888, 5, 80 5, 80 6, 82 1, 401 1, 401 1, 401 1, 419 1,	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Werplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rocheptocally, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Sumner, Rodney, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romlly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note,) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hudson, moves up near Fort Montgomery, and Phenix retreat, Ross, Major, capitulation of York-town, Rugeley, Colonel, taken by Colone.	iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 372 175 35 62 83 345 345 345 345 345 345 345 34
arrives at Princeton, propositions to the troops, is Reign of Terror, commencement of, and Republicans, party formed, Republicans, party formed, trials of the, signeral control of the control of t	v. 2017, 1888, 5, 80 5, 80 6, 82 1, 401 1, 401 1, 401 1, 419 1,	arrival with troops, at Dobb's Ferry, reconnoitres, awkward predicament, breaks up his camp, visits West Point with Washington, pecuniary assistance, accompanies Washington, addresses the Gatinais grenadiers, at Williamsburg, at Verplanck's Point, retrospect of, Rochefoucalld, Liancourt, and Lou XVI., Rockaway Bridge, Washington at, Rocky Mount attacked by Summer, Rodner, to advance against the British, Rogers, Col. Robert, the renegade, at Mamaroneck, Romilly, Sir Thomas, on Arnold's conduct, (note.) Rose, ship of war, sails up the Hudson, moves up near Fort Montgomery, and Phænix retreat, Ross, Major, capitulation of Yorktown, Regley, Colonel, taken by Colone. Washington.	iv.	280 282 283 310 311 315 320 345 358 372 175 62 83 345 364 143 245 2257 289 352

RUSSELL, Lieutenant Colonel, takes		II.	49 command of Fort Millin, iii. 286		ii.	43
RUTLEDGE, Edward, member of the board of war and ordnance, ii. 209	arrives at the Isle anx Noix, sends Allen and Brown to reconnol-	il.	48
on committee to confer with Lord		ii.	54
llowe, ii. 325		li.	55
clothed with dictatorial powers, iv. 27	information of the fort,	ii.
endeavors to rouse the militia, iv. 46		ii.
to Washington imploring aid for		ii.
South Carolina, iv. 190 RUTLEDGE, John, judgo of supreme		ii.
court, v. 26		ii. ii.	$\frac{56}{56}$
		ii.
		ii.	63
S.	to Washington on his annoyances,	ii.	63
C [ onl Cooms and Conord	to Washington on the Canada ex-		00
SACKVILLE, Lord George, and General Lee, i. 379		íi.	83
Sag Harbor, expedition against, iil. 52	to Congress on the conduct of troops,	ii.	93
Saltonstall, Commodore, convoys		ii.
expedition against Penobsect, iii. 472		ii.	94
Saratoga occupied by Burgoyne, iii. 245	intention to retire,	ii.	96
SARGENT, Colonel, estimate of St.			96
Clair's loss, v. 101 SAUNDERS, Admiral, i. 273		ii.	97
Saunders, Admiral, i. 273   Savage Mountain, i. 164	annoyanco from sectional preju- dice,	::	97
Savannah besieged by D'Estaing and	to Washington on the disasters in		٥, Lincoln, iii. 481		ii.	153
besiegers repulsed, iii. 482	urges reinforcements for Canada,		154 killed and wounded. iii. 482	besieges and captures Sir John Scammel, Colonel Alexander, mistake.	Johnson,		155 take, ii. 314   vigilant guard over André, iv. 133			$\frac{155}{203}$ capture and death, iv. 329			204
SCAROOVADI accompanies the half-	question of command with Gates, king, i. 106	to Washington concerning the com-arrives in eamp, i. 113			260
at Braddock's camp, i. 158 taken by the French, i. 166			261 taken by the French, i. 166 his release, i. 167			$\frac{262}{263}$ son killed by mistake, i. 171			$\frac{263}{263}$ remains true to the English, i. 199	on the security of the Northern accounts for Braddock's defeat, i. 199	department, ii		26 opinion of British soldiers, i. 199			31
Schuyler, Philip, appointed major seneral.		i.	32
general, 1. 414 sets out from Philadelphia, i. 442	tenders his resignation, ii resignation not accepted, ii		32 33
his origin and education, i. 442	to Congress on its resolve, ii		33 in the old French war, i. 413	misunderstandings with Congress, ii		35 in the expedition against Ticonde-	reprimanded by Congress, ii	i.	87
roga, 1. 443		i.	38
delegate to Congress, i. 443 sympathy with Washington, i. 443	takes his sent in Congress, ii		38 sympathy with Washington, i. 443 recollections with Lec, i. 444	services at Philadelphia, ii on the point of resigning, ii		39 54
letters from, ii. 32	report of committee of inquiry, ii		55 ordered to Tieonderoga, ii. 39	memorial to Congress, ii		54 arrives at Ticonderoga, ii. 39	reinstated in his command, ii	i.	60 to Washington, picture of a fron-	reception at Albany, ii	i.	60 tier post, ii. 40 complaints to Washington, ii. 41	on fortifying Mount Independ-		C1
to Washington, ii. 41	ence, ii enforces cleanliness, ii		61 61 to Washington on invasion of Can-	at Ticonderoga, ii		88
ada, ii. 43	hastens to Fort George, ii		89 repairs to Albany, ii. 44	to Congress on the invasion from to Washington recommending the	Canada, ii	i.	89 employment of savages, ii. 47	to Washington, with St. Clair's		91 to Washington on the expedition to Quebec, ii. 47	letter, ii hopeful letters, iii		95

to General Herkimer, iii. 95		ii.	364 to Washington on the evacuation	Sherman, Roger, member of the		000 of Ticonderoga, iii. 96			209 throws up works on Moses Creek, iii. 114	introduces Gates to Congress, in at Washington's inauguration, in	11.	$\frac{62}{475}$ to' Washington on the enemy's movements.	Shingis, chief of the Delawares,		70 movements, iii. 117 slanders against, iii. 123	blockades Fort Pitt,		298 desires a scrutiny, iii. 125		v.	12 summoned to Congress, iii. 125	Shippen, Miss Margaret.	v.	12 cause of prejudice against, (note,) iii. 123	SHIRLEY, Governor of Massachusetts,	i.	145 retires to Fort Miller, iii. 141	Suirley, William, to Gov. Morris,	i.	161 takes post at Stillwater, 111. 140	SHILLEY, General, expedition against		200 appeals for reinforcements, iii. 158	Niagara,		$\frac{200}{207}$ recalled to attend court of inquiry, iii. 159	referred to on a point of rank, plan of campaign,		209 sends relief to Gansevoort, iii. 159 moves from Stillwater, iii. 160	recalled to England		209 to Duane on the appointment of	Short Hills, Washington posted at,		59
Gates, iii. 161	Shreve, Colonel, retreating,		395 to Lincoln on Stark's victory, iii. 169	in the fight at Springfield,	iv.	63 to Stark on his victory, iii. 169	Shuldham, Admiral,		178 means angmenting, iii. 174	Shurtce's Creek,	i.	65 returns to Albany, iii. 208	SILLIMAN, Gen., rouses the country,		47 promotes the success of the eam-	joined by Arnold and Wooster, Silver Heels in Braddock's camp,	iii.	158
paign, m. 208 benevolent conduct, iii. 255	Sincoe, Col., accompanies Arnold,		192 on committee to confer with Wash-	devastates Westham,	iv.	207
ington, iv. 36	deceives Steuben,		289 to Arnold on Washington's dispo-	ravages,	iv.	290
sition, iv. 41			291
SCHUYLER, Mrs., anecdote, i. 444			348
SCOTT, Captain, wounded at Sulli-		111.	140
van's Island, ii. 276 Scott, General Charles, expedition	suggests an expedition to Ben- nington,	iii	149 against Indians, v. 94			161
Seat of Government, v. 63	Skenesborough, arrival of flotilla
Sectional jealousies, Washington to	from Ticonderoga,	iii.	106
Schuyler, ii. 265	Skinners, Slavery, Washington concerning,		109
John Adams on, ii. 271	Slavery, Washington concerning,		298
Washington's general order upon, ii. 283	SMALLWOOD, Colonel,		$\frac{266}{267}$
Washington relative to, iii. 26	equipment of his battalion, reinforces Washington,		286
SEVIER, Colonel, in the battle of King's Monntain, iv. 175	bravery of his macaronis,		306
SEYMOUR, Colonel Thomas, com-	wounded,		370
mands Connectiont light-horse, ii. 268	to co-operate with Rodney,	iii.	181 to Washington, for a discharge of			201 troops, ii. 269		iv.	184
to Gov. Tramball, explanatory, ii. 270	SMITH, Joshna Hett, delivers Ar-		104
SHANK, Captain, skirmish with McPherson, iv. 290			105
SHARPE, Governor, i. 132			107
furnishes waggons, i. 141			109
SHARPLESS, portrait of Washington,	sent a prisoner to West Point,	iv.	128
(appendix,) i. 458	acquitted,	iv.	146
Shaw, Captain, society of the Cin-	SMITH, Lieut. Col., commands expeeinnad, iv. 392	dition against Concord,	į.	391
SHAW, Major, to his father, iii. 268	sets out on his march,		392
Washington and the army, iv. 383 SHEE, Colonel. ii. 266	people rising, sends for reinforcements,		392
SHEE, Colonel, ii. 266 SHELBURNE, Major, and detachment	sends Major Piteairn forward,		30:
captured, ii. 213	arrives at Lexington,		898
SHELBY, Colonel, in the battle of	enters Concord,	i.	. 394
King's Mountain, iv. 175	retreats on Boston,		89
Shenandoah, Valley of, i. 85	harassed by the Americans,		390 ravaged by Indians, i. 218	reinforced by Lord Percy,	1.	395
Shengis instigates outrages on the colonists. i. 199	SMITH, Lieut. Col. Samuel, commands Fort Mifflin,	s iii	270 colonists, i. 199 at Kittanning, i. 221			275
at mitting,	an the defense of The Middle	:::	001

	ii . 286	to Schuyler on Burgoyne's force,	iii	90 voted a sword by Congress,	iii, 257	on desperate state of Ticonderoga,	iil.	9:3
Smith, Lieutenant, killed while			iii.	94 bearing flag,	ili. 263		iiį.
SMITH, William, the historian, on	1111	calls a council of war,		103
Gage,	i. 352	evacuates Ticonderoga and Monnt	111.	10.3
	1. 002			100
SMITH, Chief Justice, William, on		Independence,		103 commission concerning André,	1v. 159	his retreat,		104
Smith, William S., commissioner to	- 1	attacked by General Fraser,	iii.	108
New York,	iv. 392	reaches Fort Edward,	iii.	110
Soldier's claims,	i. 330	summoned to Congress,		125 adjusted, (note,)	i. 337	insinuations against,		152
South Carolina, invasion of,	iii, 453	in the camp of the Pennsylvania	• • •
	iv. 23			199
		mutineers,
	iv. 81	sent to reinforce Greene,		358
lower part described,	iv. 82	receives Washington,		469
Spain and the Mississippi,	v. 5	at Washington's inauguration,		475
Specut, Brigadier-General, in com-	.	commands Indian expedition,	V.	54
mand of Burgoyne's camp,	iii. 236	cantioned by Washington,	v.
Spences, Joseph, appointed briga-		his army,		94
dier general,	i. 414	character and equipment,	v.
	ii. 12
offended on a question of rank,		on his march,	v.
at Roxbury,	ii. 18	desertions,	v.
at Harlem,	ii. 338	his encampment,	v.
	iii. 189	surprised by Indians,	v.	- 93
Spotswoop, Colonel Alexander,		conduct in the battle,	v.	99
Spotswood, Colonel Alexander, forms Washington's guard,	iii. 44	flight of,		100
Springfield, N. J., American troops		reach Fort Jefferson,		100
	iv. 59	arrives at Fort Washington,		100
it,	iv. 63			110
		asks for a court of inquiry,
	iv. 65	resigns his commission,		111
Stamp Act projected,	i. 303	exculpated by House of Represent	- its passage,	i. 304	atives,		112 first opposition to,	i. 304	St. CLAIR, Sir John, precedes Brad-preparations to enforce it,	i. 309	dock,	i.	139 popular agitation,	i. 310	to Governor Morris,	i.	139 repealed,	i. 313	engages waggons and horses,		141
STANISLAUS, King, makes General		his wrath at Fort Cumberland,		147
	i. 379
Lee his aid-de-camp,		in the advance to Fort Duquesne,		174 friendship for General Lee,	i. 350	orders Washington to Williams-
Stanwix, Colonel,	i. 234	burg,		253
Stark, John, carries the alarm,	i, 398	Steele, Mrs. Elizabeth, and General arrives with troops from New		Greene,	iv.	282
Haven,	i. 420	STEPHENS, Col. Adam, joins Washingto to reinforce Prescott,	i. 429	promoted by Washington,		114 arrives at Bunker's Hill,	j. 432	with Washington,		198
	i. 432			418
anecdote,		at Princeton, repulses General Howe,	i. 434	at the battle of Germantown,		261 maintains his position,	i. 438	dismissed.	111.	300 leads the advance guard,	ii. 452	Sterling, Colonel, lands at Fort at Bennington,	iii. 183	Washington,		397 appeal to his patriotism,	iii. 158	at Princeton,	ii.	. 419
at Bennington,	iii, 163	mortally wounded,		57 serves on his own responsibility,		Steuben, Baron, arrival in camp,	111	35.
	iii. 164	his history,		35
insubordination,				. 001
	iii. 164	to Washington, on his desire to		0.0
attacks Baum,	iii. 166	serve America,		. 350 defeats Baum,	iii. 167	proceeds to Congress,		350 to Lafayette,	iii. 334	appointed inspector general,	iii.	35 forage in Westehester county,	iv. 167	disciplines the army,		85
Staten Island, British throwing up		anecdotes of,		859 works,	ii. 240	character and habits,		359
	ii. 240	offine of his discipling	442	89
treachery of the people,		effect of his discipline,
Fr. CLAIR, Colonel, detached to		to preside over court of inquiry,		. 15
Three Rivers,	ii. 221	commands in Virginia,		. 20.
takes command of Ticonderoga,	III. 60	opposes Arnold,	iv.	. 207 announces the appearance of the		at York,	iv.	. 26 enemy,	iii. 80	obliged to withdraw,	iv.	. 26 deceived by Simcoe,	iv. 289	STOCKWELL, Lieutenant, guides Col opens second parallel before York-		Willett,		157 town,	1v. 345			340

society of the Cincinnati,	iv. 892	Stonington cannonaded,	ii.
at Washington's inauguration,	iv. 475	Stony Point, landing of the British,	111.	$\frac{225}{459}$
Stevens, General, joins Gates,	iv. 85 iv. 87	being fortified, taken by the British,		460 at the council of war, at the battle of Canden,	iv. 87	position of,		465 takes charge of Morgan's prison-		garrison of,		465
ers,	iv. 227	plan of attack,		465
at Guilford Court House,	iv. 245	stormed by the Americans,		467 orders a retreat,	iv. 246	killed and wounded,		468
STEWART, Captain, assists Braddock,	i. 180			463 accompanies Braddock,	i, 182	evacuated and destroyed by the		470
STEWART, Colonel, at Monmouth	007	Americans,	111.	470
Conrt House,	iii. 397	fortified and garrisoned by the		470 accompanies Wayne,	iv. 197	British, St. Pierre, Chevalier Legardeur de,		470
STEWART, Colonel, at Guilford Cour	iv. 247	reception of Washington,	i.	77
STICKNEY, Colonel, at Bennington,		gives Washington his reply to Gov		•••
STIELING, Lord, in command at Nev		Dinwiddie,	i.	80
York,	ii. 191	his reply to Governor Dinwiddie,	1.	90 report on the condition of the High		commands Canadians and Indians		201 lands,	ii. 217	slain,		203 moves against General Grant,	ii. 301	STRINGER, Doctor, dismissed,		35 holds him in check,	ii. 302	St. Simon, Marquis, lands withtroops,	įv.	319 attacks Cornwallis,	ii. 305	embarks his troops,		358 surrenders himself,	ii. 307	STUART, Col., joins Lord Rawdon,		$\frac{298}{304}$ exchanged,	ii, 344 ii, 364	encamps on the Congaree,		334 resolves to entrap Rogers, to cross at King's Ferry,	ii. 879	moves to Eutaw Springs, battle of Eutaw Springs,		335 crosses the Hudson,	ii. 351	decamps,		339 falls back on Trenton,	ii. 426	retreats to Monck's Corner,		840 at Matouchin Church,	iii. 78	STUART, Doctor, to Washington of	a . driven in by Cornwallis,	111, 437	sectional interests,	٧.	55
in favor of attacking Philadelphia,	iii. 296	to Washington on ceremonials,	v.	64 correspondence with Wilkinson of	n ooz	STUART, Gilbert, portrait of Wash	٠.	1=0
the Conway letter,	iii. 337	ington, (appendix,)		459 appeases the honor of Wilkinson,	iii. 398	Sugar Hill commands Ticonderoga, fortified by the British,	111.	$\frac{102}{103}$
at Monmouth Court House, encamps at the New Bridge,	iii. 475	Sugar House,	iii.	22 unsuccessful descent on Staten	111. 410	Sulgrave, "Washington's Manor," Island,	iv. 5	described,	i.	12 retreats to Elizabethtown,	iv. 6	SULLIVAN, General, under Major Ger	n-
St. Johns, Canada, expedition agains	t, i. 407	eral Lee,	ii.
surprised by Arnold,	i. 497	sent to Portsmouth,	11.
General Schuyler appears before i	t, ii. 55	despatched to New York,		191 invested by Montgomery,	ii. 59	despatched to Canada,		$\frac{195}{220}$ its resistance,	ii. 59 ii. 86	takes command, to Washington, hopeful,		221 capitulates, St. John's Island, landing of Sir Henr		mistakes the enemy's force,		223
Clinton,	iv. 26	to Washington on Thompson's ex		220
ST. LEGER, Colonel, to make a diver		pedition,	ii.	224
sion,	iii. 87	retreats,	ii.	226
invests Fort Schuyler,	iii, 149	joined by Arnold,	ii.	226 summons it to surrender,	iii. 150	embarks for Crown Point,		227 tries to intimidate the garrison,	iii. 153	requests leave of absence,		262 makes regular approaches,	iii. 157	tenders his resignation,		265 presses the siege,	iii. 172	in temporary command,		$\frac{293}{302}$ obliged to decamp,	iii, 173 iii, 141	reconnoitres, retreats,		308
St. Luc commands Indians,	iii. 162	taken prisoner,		304 reputation, St. Lucia, expedition against,	iii. 442	at Vealtown,		431
Бтово, Captain, left as hostage,	i, 123	hastens to join Washington,		435 letter from Fort Duquesne,	i. 129	joins Washington.		440 imprisoned in Quebec,	i. 135	ordered to advance and charge,	ii	. 451 his escape,	i. 135	attacks Trenton,		. 458 obtains grant of land, (note),	i. 837	at Morristown,	iii	. 4

behind the Sourland Hills, iii.	6   predicts André's fate, iv. 131 to advance to the Highlands, iii.
joins Washington, iii. 1	2 André, iv. 138 attempt to surprise the enemy, iii. 1 at Brandywine, iii. 1	1 successful exploit, iv. 167 at the battle of Germantown, iii, 2 describes Washington at German-	accompanies Washington to the town, iii. 2
to attack Rhode Island, iii. 4	8 letter to Washington, i. 104 moves from Providence, iii. 4	prepares for battle, i. 110 occupies abandoned works, iii. 4 before Newport, iii. 4
11 m	I IIIs death,
at Honeyman's Hill, iii. 4 protest against D'Estaing's pro-	nastre, on the expedition to South ceeding to Boston, Iii. 4	1 Carolina, iv. 23 general order on the departure of	description of, iv. 25 the French fleet, iii. 4 retreats to Batt's Hill, iii. 4 commands expedition against the	surprises General Huger's camp, iv. 48
Indians, iii. 4	6 surprises Americans at Lancau's Indians, iii. 4 battle at Newtown, iii. 4 lays the Indian country waste, iii 4 thanked by Congress, iii. 4 retires from the service, iii. 4	7 his excuse, iv. 54
Hamilton's talent for finance, iv. 2	S pursues Sumter, iv. 90
Sullivan's Island fortified, ii. 2 in operat of Marien battle of, ii. 2	4 in quest of Marion, iv. 1s1 bravery of troops, ii. 2	5   fight at Black Stock Hill, iv. 1-2
British account, ii. 2	5 sent in quest of Morgan, iv. 216 deficiency of powder, ii. 2	6 at Pacolet, iv. 217 enemy repulsed, ii. 2	6 battle of the Cowpens, iv. 220 loss of the Americans ii ti	7 detected to Posttick Ford in 190 loss of the Americans, ii. 2	7 detached to Beattie's Ford, iv. 229 Sumner, Gen., at Eutaw Springs, iv. 8 gives way, iv. 3:	7 recruiting expedition, iv. 289
Sumter, Thomas, character and ser-	recalled to Hillsborough, iv. 240
vices, iv.	1 skirmish with Lee, iv. 244 chosen leader, iv. 8 attacks the British at Rocky attacks the British at Rocky	skirmish with the French, iv. 331
Mount, iv.	3   Tarrant's Tavern, militia surprised by successful attack on Hanging	Tarleton, iv. 231
	3 Tash, Colonel, ordered to Fishkill, ii. 351 reduces redoubt on the Wateree, iv. 8 surprised by Tarleton, iv. 9 again in the field, iv. 1	1 arrives on the field. iii. 239 menaces the British posts, iv. 1	2 TERNANT, M., inspector, iii. $57 fight at Black Stock Hill, iv. 1 and the state of the second training of the state of the second training of the second trai	Duenal dark to command detached to scour the country, iv. 2 pursues Colonel Coates, iv. 3 attack on Colonel Coates, iv. 36	3 THAYER, commands Fort Mifflin, iii. 256 rejoins Greene, iv. 3
Sutherland, Major, commands at	Thicketty Run, Braddock encamps at, i. 170
Poulus Hook	There is The standard Chemina at, 1. 114
Paulus Hook, iii. 4
Symonds Colonel, joins Stark, iii. 1	5 general, i. 414
Symonds Colonel, joins Stark, iii. 1	5 general, i. 414 commands the right wing, i. 421
Symonds Colonel, joins Stark, iii. 1	5 general, i. 414 commands the right wing, i. 421
	5 general, i. 414 commands the right wing, i. 421 fortifies Roxbury Neck, ii. 6
Symonds Colonel, joins Stark, iii. 1	5 general, i. 4!4 commands the right wing, i. 421 fortifies Roxbury Neck, ii. 6 offended on a question of rank, ii. 12
T.	5 general, commands the right wing, 4-21 fortifies Roxbury Neck, ii. 6 offended on a question of rank, ii. 12 at Roxbury, ii. 18
T. Talbot, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, 511, 2	5 general, i. 414 commands the right wing, i. 421 fortifies Roxbury Neck, ii. 6 offended on a question of rank, ii. 12 at Roxbury, ii. 13 sets out for Dorchester Heights, ii. 173
Talbor, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, iii. 2 wounded, iii. 2	5 general, i. 442 commands the right wing, i. 421 fortifies Roxbury Neck, ii. 6 offended on a question of rank, ii. 12 at Roxbury, ii. 18 sets out for Dorchester Heights, ii. 173 7 reinforced, ii. 173
T. Talbot, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, 511, 2	5 general, i. 442 commands the right wing, i. 421 fortifies Roxbury Neck, ii. 6 offended on a question of rank, ii. 12 at Roxbury, ii. 18 sets out for Dorchester Heights, ii. 173 7 reinforced, ii. 173
Talbot, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, iii. 2 wounded, Iii. 2 Talbetaan and the American en-	5 general, commands the right wing, fortifies Roxbury Neck, offended on a question of rank, at Roxbury, sets out for Dorchester Heights, reinforced, commands in Canada, ii. 173
Talbot, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, iii. 2 wounded, iii. 2 Talbeyrand and the American envoys, v. 2	5 general, commands the right wing, fortifies Roxbury Neck, offended on a question of rank, at Roxbury, sets out for Dorchester Heights, reinforced, commands in Canada, promotion, ii. 189
TALBOT, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, iii. 2 wounded, iii. 2 TALEXEAND and the American envoys, amicable overtures, v. 2	5 general, commands the right wing, difference of a question of rank, at Roxbury, Neck, sets out for Dorchester Heights, reinforced, commands in Canada, promotion, head-quarters at Albany, ii. 189
Talbot, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, wounded, Tallerand and the American envoys, amicable overtures, Tallmanger, Major, and André, iv. 1	5 general, commands the right wing, i. 424 fortifies Roxbury Neck, offended on a question of rank, at Roxbury, ii. 13 6 sets out for Dorchester Heights, reinforced, commands in Canada, promotion, promotion, ii. 189 6 head-quarters at Albany, ii. 189 4 arrives at Quebec, ii. 199
Talbot, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, iii. 2 wounded, iii. 2 Talleyeand and the American envoys, amicable overtures, v. 2 Tallmadge, Major, and André, iv. 1 escorts Andre to the Robinson	5 general, commands the right wing, fortifies Roxbury Neck, offended on a question of rank, at Roxbury, sets out for Dorchester Heights, reinforced, commands in Canada, promotion, head-quarters at Albany, arrives at Quebec, sends a fire-ship, ii. 199
Talbot, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, iii. 2 iii. 2 iii. 2 Talleveano and the American envoys, v. 2 amicable overtures, v. 2 Tallandge, Major, and André, iv. 1 escorts Andre to the Robinson House, iv. 1;	5 general, commands the right wing, i. 421 fortifies Roxbury Neck, offended on a question of rank, at Roxbury, ii. 13 sets out for Dorchester Heights, reinforced, commands in Canada, promotion, promotion, ii. 189 de head-quarters at Albany, arrives at Quebec, sends a fire-ship, prepares to retreat, ii. 200
Talbot, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, iii. 2 iii. 2 iii. 2 Talleveano and the American envoys, v. 2 amicable overtures, v. 2 Tallandge, Major, and André, iv. 1 escorts Andre to the Robinson House, iv. 1;	5 general, commands the right wing, i. 421 fortifies Roxbury Neck, offended on a question of rank, at Roxbury, ii. 13 sets out for Dorchester Heights, reinforced, commands in Canada, promotion, promotion, ii. 189 de head-quarters at Albany, arrives at Quebec, sends a fire-ship, prepares to retreat, ii. 200
Talbot, Captain, at Fort Mifflin, iii. 2 wounded, Iii. 2 Tallexand and the American envoys, amicable overtures, v. 2 Tallmadge, Major, and André, iv. 1 escorts Andre to the Robinson Ilouse, iv. 1:	5 general, commands the right wing, confined on a question of rank, at Roxbury, Neck, offended on a question of rank, at Roxbury, sets out for Dorchester Heights, reinforced, commands in Canada, promotion, ii. 189 head-quarters at Albany, tarrives at Quebec, sends a fire-ship, yends af fre-ship, prepares to retreat, prepares to retreat, prepares to retreat, gently from the selambault, 1. 202

Alleger and dooth	ii. 220 1	march of American troops,	ii. 451 illness and death, Thompson, Brig. Gen., despatched t		picket driven in,	ii. 452
Canada,	ii. 195	the attack,	ii. 452
at the mouth of the Sorel,	ii. 220	surrender of the Hessians,	ii. 455 preparing to retreat,	ii. 221	number of prisoners,	ii. 456 captured at Three Rivers.	ii. 225	TRIPLET, Captain, under Morgan,	iv. 189
THOMPSON, Col., at Sullivan's Island.	, ii. 273	TROUP, Major,	iii. 53 repulses Sir Henry Clinton,	ii. 276	TRUMAN, Captain, with General St. receives thanks of Congress,	ii. 277	Clair,	v. 97
fhree Mile Run, skirmish at,	iii. 302	TRUMBULL, Colonel John, portraits	1 450
Throg's Neck, position of,	ii. 356	of Washington (Appendix),	i. 458 landing of the British,	ii. 356	aide-de-camp to Washington,	ii. 13 ii. 14
Theonderoga, to be reduced,	i. 241 i. 268	his duties,	ii. 262 dismantled,	i. 402	selects site for a fort, arrives from Europe,	v. 45 expedition against, surprised by Ethan Allen,	i. 405	message from Lafayette to Wash-	20 strength of garrison,	ii. 40	ington,	v. 45 preparations for defence,	ii. 385	TRUMBULL, Jonathan, patriotism,	ii. 10 threatened,	iii. 77	to Washington,	ii. 10 approach of Burgoyne,	iii. 90	asks protection for New London,	ii. 20
thickening alarms,	iii. 92	to Washington, on desertion of	Î enemy advancing,	iii. 93	Connecticut troops,	ii. 101 evacuated,	iii. 96	aids General Lee,	ii. 187
Burgoyne fortifies Mount Hope,	iii. 101	concerning Schuyler and Gates,	ii, 265 invested,	iii. 10I	patriotism of,	iii. 122 commanded by Sugar Hill,	iii. 102	Trumbull, Joseph, appointed com-evacuated,	iii. 103	missary general,	ii. 18 ii. 264 effects of evacuation,	iii. 110	to Gates concerning Schuyler,	ii. 354 surprised by Colonel Brown,	iii, 216 iii, 256	to Gates concerning Lee,	iii. 34 evacuated by the British, Tilgiman, Colonel Tench, on Ger		accusing Schuyler, resigns,	iii. 128
	ii. 861	TRYON, Governor, absent in England
eral Lee, rival generalship,	ii. 374		i. 450 enemy at Dobb's Ferry,	ii. 376	in New York harbor, reception in New York,	i. 451 to R. R. Livingston, relative		letter concerning,	ii. 193
Greene,	ii. 400	in New York bay,	ii. 194
Washington's aide-de-camp,	iii. 4	conspiracy in New York,	ii. 229
Washington's festive gayety,	iv. 438	offers bounty to recruits,	ii. 230 death of,	iv. 414	on colonial loyalty (note)	ii, 235
TILLY, M. de, detached to the Ches	a-	conducts an expedition agains	211 47
peake,	iv. 258	Danbury,	iii. 47 iii. 47
failure of the enterprise,	iv. 259	lands at Canepo Hill,	iii. 48
Townsend, Brigadier, in the exped	i. 268	destroys Danbury, commences the retreat,	iii. 49
tion to Quebec, sent against Montcalm,	i. 275	intrenched at Ridgefield,	iii. 50 in command,	i. 277	reaches Canepo Hill,	iii. 51 advances to meet De Bougainville		sends Lord North's bills to Wash and General Lee,	i. 379	ington,	iii. 868
Travelling in 1756,	i. 207	commands expedition against Con	1-
Treasury, secretary of the, importan	nce	necticut,	iii. 462 of the post.	v. 24	lands near New Haven,	iii. 462
TREAT, Capt., killed at Fort Mifflin	, iii. 285	takes New Haven,	iii. 462
Treaty with France,	111. 505	destroys Fairfield,	iii. 463 ratified by Congress,	iii. 370	devastates Norwalk,	iii. 463 rejoicings in the United States,	iii. 370 v. 213	TUPPER, Colonel, attacks the Ros	ii. 283 with England (Jay's),	v. 214	and Phœnix, bravery of the Americans,	ii. 283 debated in the Senate,	v. 215	Turtle Bay cannonaded,	ii. 333 ratified, public outery against,	v. 216	TUTTLE, Rev. Joseph F., anecdotes
Washington concerning,	v. 218	(note)	iv. 4
TRENT, Captain William, sent to ex	ī-	() postulate with the French,	i. 67	U.
returns home unsuccessful,	i. 67	United Colonies,	i. 4 0 9 despatched to the frontier,	i. 91
his behavior,	i. 100	V.
Trenton, in command of Col. Rahl,	ii 442		iii, 30 6 projected attack on,	ii. 446	Valley Forge, march to, disposition of the army,	iii. 307 alarm at an outpost,	ii. 450	disposition of the army,	211. 001
vol. v.—18*		•

	*
condition of the troops, iii. 349	grant £20,000 for the public ser-described by British historian, 111, 349	vice, i. 145 amount of American troops, iii, 374	recruits, their appearance and disci- pline, i. 156
Van Braam, Jacob, Washington's fencing master, i. 59	pline, i. 156 troops, effective mode of fighting, i. 178 accompanies Washington as inter-	Legislature, reform the militia preter, i. 68	laws, i. 205 made captain, 1. 95	Assembly, vote measures of relief, i. 217 recommended by Washington for	troops, gallant conduct, 1. 261 promotion. i. 114	aristocratical days, i. 28 treats with the French, i. 122 left as hostage, i. 123	style of living, i. 286 love of horses, i. 286 accused of treachery, i. 124	estate, a little empire, i. 287 imprisoned in Quebee, i. 135	Legislature, their proceedings, i. 325 escape and recapture, i. 135	sympathy with the patriots of New sent to England, i. 135	England, i. 325 obtains grant of land, 1.387	address to the king, i. 325 to Washington, relating his his-	dissolved by Lord Botetourt, i. 325 adjourn to a private house, i. 325
VAN CORTLANDT, Pierre, to General	adjourn to a private house, f. 32- Peyton Randolph moderator, i. 32-
Lee, ii. 139	pledge themselves not to use or im-patriotic zeal, ii. 256	port taxed British goods, i. 32 family (note), ii. 258	public discontents, i. 328
joins Schuyler, iii. 174	Board of Commissioners, i. 330
VAN RENSSELAER, General, drives	renewed public irritation, i. 839 back the maranders, iv. 157	Legislature, call the Earl of Dun- more to account. i. 340
VAN SCHAICK, Colonel, iii. 95 expedition against the Onondagas, iii. 456	more to account, i. 340 prorogued by the governor, i. 340
VAN WART, Isaac, and André, iv. 111	convened, i. 34 and the death of André, iv. 146	corresponding committee, i. 350
Varick, Colonel, in correspondence	aristocracy, i. 34 with Schuyler, iii. 208	Legislature in session, i. 84 fears Burgoyne will decamp, iii. 209	splendid opening, i. 84 to Schuyler, on Burgoyne's sur- render. iii. 251	indignation at the Boston port bill, i. 849 protest against obnoxious acts of render, iii. 251 Varnum, General, iii. 81	Parliament, 1.34 reinforces Washington, iii. 269	appoint a day of fasting and prayer, i. 34
at Red Bank, iii. 285	dissolved, i. 34 on the destitution of the troops, iii. 308	adjourn to the Raleigh tavern, i. 34
meets Washington, iv. 457	resolutions, i. 35 recommend a General Conzress, i. 35
VAUGHAN, General, to move up the Iludson. iii. 230	recommend a General Congress, i. 85 meeting called, i. 88
Hindson, iii. 230   expedition up the Hudson, iii. 460	nilitary preparations, i. 38
Venango, i. 74	second convention at Richmond, i. 35
Vergennes, Count de, prediction con-	in combustion, i. 39 cerning the American colonies, i. 281	troops described, ii. 1 on the battle of Germantown, iii. 268	sharpshooting, ii. 1 solicits the liberation of Capt. As- gill, iv. 366	General Assembly of, conduct to- ward Gates, iv. 18 gill, fv. 366 Vermont admitted into the Union, v. 88	defenceless state, iv. 20
Verplanck's Point, landing of the Brit-	Assembly, reception of Washing-ish, iii. 224	ton, iv. 42
fort erected on, iii. 459	appropriation to Washington, iv. 42
Villiers, Captain de, sallies from Fort	VAN Decnow, Major, and Col. Rahl, ii. 44
Duquesne, i. 119	mortally wounded, ii. 45 his account of the affair at Great Meadows, i, 127	W.
VINCENT, Earl St., in the expedition	***
against Quebee, i. 269	Wadworth, Colonel, resigns, iv.
Viomenia, General, the Baron de, em-	Wainwood, Mr., intercepts a treason-barked, iv. 260	able letter, li. 6 to storm a redoubt, iv. 345	WALCOTT, Col., referee for exchange iii. 1
earries the redoubt, iv. 347	of prisoners, Waldeckers join General Howe, ii. 86
Virginia divided into military districts, i. 58	WALES, Judge, on the bombardment
House of Burgesses convened, i. 102	of Boston, ii. 7 vote thanks to Washington and his	WALKER, Capt., interprets for Steu-
1 197	hon iii S

MALLACE, Capitain, piratical reputation, file of harasses Rhode Island, ii. 25 before New York. iii. 245 before New York. iii. 245 before New York. iii. 245 before New York. iii. 246 MALLACE, Sir James, to go up the Hudson. iii. 236 MALLACE, Sir James, to go up the Hudson. iii. 236 saricolotes of Braddock, iii. 238 saricolotes of Braddock, iii. 238 sarical remark on Braddock's definition of the state of the house of his boyhood, ii. 186 sarical remark on Braddock's definition of the state of the house of his boyhood, ii. 187 saricolotes of Braddock, ii. 238 sarical remark on Braddock's definition of the state of the house of his boyhood, ii. 186 sarical remark on Braddock's definition of the state of the house of his boyhood, ii. 186 sarical remark on Braddock's definition of the state of the house of his boyhood, ii. 186 sarical remark on Braddock's definition of the state of the house of his boyhood, ii. 186 sarical remark on Braddock's definition of the state of the house of his boyhood, ii. 186 sarical	WALKER, Thomas, and Genera. Pres-	marries Jane Butler, and afterwards thon, harasses Phode Island, ii. 25b before New York.  Wallace, Sir James, to go up the Hudson.  Walloton, James to go up the Hudson.  Ington.  James to go up the Hudson.  James to go up the Hudson.  James to go up the Hudson.  James to Lord Botcourt, James to go up the Lary.  on Lord Botchourt, James to go up the Lary.  on Lord Howe.  Walloton, Sir Robert, on American taxation, James to Lord Howe.  Wallon, Aremas, nominated general officer, commands American camp, James to the Letter to General Greene, James to Georges, gencalogy of, in the Lary to the Burlots of the Lary to the Hudson.  Walloton, James to go up the Hudson.  It is early education, James taked on his mother's remonstration on the school-boy passion, James trans and returns to school.  Wanne, Alemas, nominated general officer, completes his surveys and returns to the West Indicate the Letters to General Greene, James to the West Indicate the Lary.  disposition of troops, James to the Lawrence's will, and the expedition against Ticonderogy of occupying Charlestown Heights, Tepairs to Congress, James to Congress, Ja	cott, (note,) ii. 107	Mary Ball,	ļ.	16
harasses Rhode Island, ii. 25 before New York.  Wallact, Sir James, to go up the Hudson.  Hudson, Area and Braddock's delay and Horatio Gates, i. 295 on Burgoyne's plays, ii. 44 concerning General Gage, ii. 74 on Lord Howe, ii. 187 on Lord Howe, ii. 188 on Garden and returns to school, studies and exercises, ii. 295 on Burgoyne's plays, ii. 44 oncerning General Gage, ii. 74 on Lord Howe, ii. 187 on Lord Howe, ii. 188 on How Lord Howe, ii. 188 on How Lord Howe, ii. 189 on Garden and returns to school, studies and returns	tion ii 67 before New York.  WALLOUS, Sir James, to go up the Hudson, ii. 193 ancedotes of Braddock, i. 1285 satirical remark on Braddock's delay, on Cord Botetourt, i. 129 and Horatio Gates, i. 1285 and Horatio Gates, i. 1285 on Burgoyne's plays, ii. 144 concerning General Gage, ii. 74 on Lord Howe, ii. 1841 and Horatio Gates, ii. 1852 on Burgoyne's plays, ii. 144 concerning General Gage, iii. 74 on Lord Howe, iii. 187 on Lord Howe, iii. 188 on Marcota, Sir Robert, on American taxation, iii. 188 on Manna Artemas, nominated general officer, iii. 189 officer of the Gate and Edward Manna Artemas, nominated general officer, iii. 189 officer of the Gate of Linguistical Control of the American Camp, iii. 188 ware, to the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, iii. 188 at Manchester, iii. 189 at Manchester, iiii. 189 at Manchester, iiii. 189 at Manchester, iiii. 189 at Manchest Wallack Sir James, to go up the Huddon, and the state of Madeology florace, opinion of Washington, services of Braddock, serviced remark on Braddock's delay on Lord Botetonri, serviced flow, surprise Strike and in Congress, and serviced serviced flow for the Eventual of the Even		his early education, anedotes of Braddock, satrical remark on Braddock's de- lay, on Granville, on Lord Botetonrt, and Horallo Gates, on Durgoyne's plays, concerning General Gage, in 1.74 on Lord Howe, Walford, Sir Hobert, on American taxation, Wando, works thrown up, in 201 Wando, works thrown up,				20
sneedotes of Braddock, s. 1.285 lastrical remark on Braddock's delay, on Granville, influence of soldier's tales, incompanies tales to freinds, complete of soldier's tales, incomplete of soldier's tales, incomplete of soldier's tales, incomplete of soldier's tales, incomplete of soldier's tales, incomplet		school exercises,	i.
satirical remark on Braddock's delay.  lay.  on Granville,  on Lord Botetonrt,  on Lord Botetonrt,  on Burgoyne's plays,  concerning General Gage,  in Taxation,  Walford, Sir Irobert, on American  taxation,  Wando, works thrown up,  in Mando, works thrown up,  in Mando, works thrown up,  in Section and Saturation,  in Stander and character at six-  teen,  inthe side and exercises,  sendol-boy passion,  attempts at poetry,  appearance and character at six-  teen,  inthe side passion,  in the diderness,  in 188   in the expedition of troops,  in the expedition against Ticonderous,  in the expedition of the country,  in the expedition of the country,  in the expedition of the coun lay, on Granville, is 200 on Lord Botetourt, is 251 and Horatio Gates, is 255 on Burgoyne's plays, is 4 concerning General Gage, is 74 concerning General Gage, is 1.825 con Mando, works thrown up, iv 46 Warn, Artemas, nominated general officer, commands American camp, is 492 his services, sustained in Congress, is 492 appointed major general, is 414 cleeted second in command, is 414 cleeted second in command, is 414 cleeted second in command, is 415 and broad-quarters at Cambridge, is 422 disposition of troops, dubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, is 422 commands right wing, is 11 to the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is 496 repairs to Congress, is 36 cleeted Lieutenant Colonel, is 496 arrives at camp, is 50 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 163 at Manchester, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 165 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 165 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 165 arrives at the heights, is 422 noble conduct, iii. 164 arrives at the keights, ii. 492 noble conduct, iii. 164 arrives at the keights, ii. 493 noble conduct, iii. 493 declines the command, iii. 494 arrives at the keights, ii. 492 noble conduct, iii. 493 declines the command, iii. 494 arrives at the keights, ii. 492 noble conduct, iii. 494 arrives at the keights, ii. 492 noble conduct, iii. 494 arrives at the keights, ii. 492 noble conduct, iii. 494 arrives at the keights, ii. 492 noble conduct, iii. 494 arrives at the keights, ii. 495 noble conduct, iii. 496 arrives at the keights, ii. 497 noble conduct, iii. 496 arrives at the keights, iii. 497 noble conduct, iii. 496 arrives at the keights, iii. 497 noble conduct, iii. 496 arrives at the keights, iii. 497 noble conduct, iii. 496 arrives at the keights, iii. 497 noble conduct on Granville, i. 1994 on Lord Botetonrt, i. 252 and Horatio Gates, i. 255 on Burgoyne's plays, concerning General Gage, ii. 74 on Lord Howe, ii. 157 on Lord Howe, ii. 158 officer, ii. 158 of on Lord Botetourt, i. 321 and Horatto Gates, i. 285 on Burgoyne's plays, ii. 4 concerning General Gage, ii. 74 on Lord Howe, ii. 187 WALDOE, Sir Robert, on American taxation, i. 301 Wando, works thrown up, iv. 46 WARDOE, Sir Robert, on American officer, i. 321 omnands American camp, i. 492 his services, i. 492 substained in Congress, i. 492 appointed major general, i. 414 head-quarters at Cambridge, i. 420 disposition of troops, ii. 422 disposition of troops, ii. 423 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 commands right wing, ii. 17 enters Boston, ii. 188 WARD, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 63 WARNER, Seth, Ethan Allen's Lientenant, ii. 403 in the expedition against Ticonderoga, ii. 403 in the expedition against Ticonderoga, ii. 403 in the expedition against Ticonderoga, ii. 404 repairs to Congress, ii. 492 arrives at Compress, ii. 493 at Manchester, iii. 164 arrives at camp, ii. 36 detached to intercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 at Manchester, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 at Manchester, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 at Manchester, iii. 164 arrives at the beights, i. 492 noble conduct, i. 493 noble conduct, i			1.	24 and Horatio Gates, on Burgopne's plays, on Lord Howe, Authole, Sir Robert, on American taxation, Waldo, works thrown up, Wando, works thrown up, is an interest of the wilderness, oommands American camp, is services, oommands American camp, is services, oommands American camp, is services, is send-boby passion, tend, is attempts at poetry, attempts at poetry, is attempts at poetry, is attempts at poetry, is attempts at poetry, is attempts at spectry, is attempts at poetry, is attempts at spectry, is attempts at poetry, is appointed undiancer at ix.  Sendicion bevond the Blue Ridge, is attempts at poetry. is appointed public surveyor. if attempts at poetry, is appointed applied an			;	oc on Burgoyne's plays, concerning General Gage, ii. 74 on Lord Howe, ii. 187 Waltole, Sir Robert, on American taxation, ii. 281 Wando, works thrown up, iv. 46 Wann, Artemas, nominated general officer, commands American camp, i. 492 his services, ii. 492 appointed major general, ii. 492 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, in the expedition against Ticondelected become from the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, ii. 493 arrives at camp, ii. 494 arrives at camp, ii. 494 arrives at camp, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 108 Wannen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, iii. 164 arrives at the seene of action, iii. 163 Wannen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, iii. 164 arrives at the seene of action, iii. 163 wannen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, iii. 164 arrives at the seene of action, iii. 163 wannen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, iii. 164 arrives at the seene of action, iii. 163 wannen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, iii. 164 arrives at the seene of action, iii. 163 wannen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, iii. 164 arrives at the seene of action, iii. 163 wannen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, iii. 164 arrives at the seene of action, iii. 163 wannen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, iii. 164 arrives at the seene of action, iii. 165 doubts the expediency of occupying Committee of Safety, iii. 164 arrives at the seene of action, iii. 165 wannets the command, iii. 493 actines the command, iii. 495 arrives at the heights, ii. 492 arrives at the heights, ii. 493 actines the command, iii. 485 actine the wilderness, ii. 292 arrives at the heights, ii. 492 arrives at the heights, ii. 429 arrives at the heights, ii. 493 actines the command, ii. 495 arrives at the heights, ii. 494 arrives at the heights, ii. 42 concerning General Gage, ii. 74 on Lord Howe, Waltole, Sir Robert, on American taxation, Wando, works thrown up, Wando, works thrown up, Wando, works thrown up, Sir Robert, on American taxation, Wando, works thrown up, Waltole, Sir Robert, on American taxation, Wando, works thrown up, Waltole, Sir Robert, on American taxation, Wando, works thrown up, Waltole, Sir Robert, on American taxation, Waltole, Sir Robert, on American taxation, Waltole, Sir Robert, on American taxation, taxation, Waltole, Sir Robert, on American taxation, taxation the wilderness, complete his surveyor, tappointed public surv		school-hov passion on Lord Howe, Wallook, Sir Robert, on American taxation, works thrown np, i. 301 Wallook, Warn, Artemas, nominated general officer, commands American camp, i. 492 his services, sustained in Congress, i. 492 appointed major general, i. 414 appointed major general, i. 415 appointed public surveyor, i. 40 appointed daljutant general, i. 50 appointed public surveyor, i. 40 appointed subtrants general prepares himself for his new duties, i. 50 appointed with small-pox, i. 60 articles, i. 52 articles and Allen's Lientenant, i. 406 articles and Allen's Lientenant, i		attempts at poetry.
Waltor, Sir Robert, on American taxation,  Wando, works thrown up, iv. 46 Warn, Artemas, nominated general officer, is services, is services, is services, is stained in Congress, is services, is spontated major general, elected second in command, head-quarters at Cambridge, is disposition of troops, ing Charlestown Heights, commands right wing, in the expediency of occupy- ing Charlestown Heights, in the expedition against Ticonde- roga, in the expedition beyond the Blue Ridge, is specified beyond the blue repairs on himself beyond the specified appointed aguitant general, is specified beyond the blue repairs on himself beyond the specified appointed aguitant general, is specified beyond retu		appearance and character at six-	• taxation, Wando, works thrown up, iv. 46 Wando, works thrown up, iv. 46 officer, iv. 46 officer, iv. 46 officer, iv. 46 services, sustained in Congress, iv. 492 appointed major general, iv. 412 appointed public surveyor, iv. 40 appointed adjutant general, iv. 422 disposition of troops, iv. 422 disposition of troops, iv. 422 disposition of troops, iv. 422 commands right wing, iv. 422 commands right wing, iv. 422 commands right wing, iv. 422 commands the expediency of occupy- ing Charlestown Heights, iv. 422 arives at Cambridge, iv. 422 arives at camp, iv. 424 arives at camp, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 422 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, iv. 426 detached to intercept relief, iv. 426 arrives at the scene of action, i	WALPOLE, Sir Robert, on American		i.	32 officer, is appointed major general, is 492 sustained in Congress, is 492 appointed major general, is 494 head-quarters at Cambridge, is 495 disposition of troops, is 492 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, is 492 reinforces Prescott, is 493 reinforces Prescott, is 494 reinforces Prescott, is 495 returns to General Greene, is 494 returns to General Greene, is 495 repairs to Congress, is 396 repairs to New York Convention, is 396 elected Lieutenant Colonel, is 42 arrives at camp, is 396 at Manchester, is 150 at Manchester, is	taxation, i. 301	letters to friends,		32
officer, is appointed major general, is 492 sustained in Congress, is 492 appointed major general, is 494 head-quarters at Cambridge, is 495 disposition of troops, is 492 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, is 492 reinforces Prescott, is 493 reinforces Prescott, is 494 reinforces Prescott, is 495 returns to General Greene, is 494 returns to General Greene, is 495 repairs to Congress, is 396 repairs to New York Convention, is 396 elected Lieutenant Colonel, is 42 arrives at camp, is 396 at Manchester, is 150 at Manchester, is	Wando, works thrown up, iv. 46		i.
commands American camp, his services, is used in Congress, is ustained in Congress, is used appointed major general, elected second in command, is used the capediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, is used in Congress to Companies Lawrence to the West Indies, arrives at Barbadoes, is completed major general, is used in the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, is used in the capediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, is used in the capediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, is used in the expedition against Ticonderoga, is used in the first time.  Warr	WARD, Artemas, nominated general his services, sustained in Congress, i. 492 appointed major general, i. 414 head-quarters at Cambridge, i. 420 disposition of troops, i. 421 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 commands right wing, ii. 17 enters Boston, ii. 183 Warren Boston, ii. 185 Warren Boston, ii. 185 Warren Sest, Ethan Allen's Lientenant, ii. 186 repairs to Congress, ii. 406 roga, surprizes Crown Point, i. 406 roga, surprizes Crown Point, i. 406 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 elected Lieutenant Colonel, ii. 42 arrives at camp, ii. 56 attacks General Carleton, ii. 56 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 at Manchester, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, warrives from Boston ii. 306 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 492 noble conduct, ii. 493 noble conduct, ii. 493 deelines the command, ii. 493 deelines the command, ii. 493 deelines the command, ii. 493 noble conduct, ii. 493 noble conduct, ii. 494 marn, ii. 494 noble conduct, ii. 495 noble co			i.	37 sustained in Congress, appointed major general, elected second in command, head-quarters at Cambridge, disposition of troops, disposition of troops, ing Charlestown Heights, ing Charlestown Heights, inthe expediency of occupy- ing Charlestown Robert, inthe expediency of occupy- inters Boston, Ward, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, inthe expedition against Ticonde- roga, surprises Crown Point, in the expedition against Ti	commands American camp, 1. 492		,	00 appointed major general, elected second in command, i. 414 head-quarters at Cambridge, i. 420 disposition of troops, i. 420 disposition of the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 commands right wing, ii. 17 enters Boston, ii. 183 with the expedition against Treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 68 WARNER, Seth, Ethan Allen's Lientenant, ii. 406 in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, i. 406 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 detached to intercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 at Manchester, iii. 155 in St. Clark's retreat, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, warrives the darm, i. 391 gives the alarm, i. 391 gives the alarm, i. 391 gives the alarm, i. 391 declines the command, i. 433 death, public loss, washington, modifications of the name, washington, modifications of the name, washington, Augustine, father of	mis services, 1, 402 elected second in command, i. 414 head-quarters at Cambridge, i. 429 disposition of troops, i. 421 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 reinforces Prescott, i. 425 commands right wing, ii. 147 enters Boston, Ward, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 68 Ward, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 68 warner, Seth, Ethan Allen's Lientenant, i. 406 in the expedition against Ticonderoga, i. 406 in the expedition against Ticonderoga, i. 406 surprises Crown Point, i. 406 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 detached Lientenant Colonel, ii. 42 arrives at camp, ii. 56 detached Lientenant Colonel, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 56 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 105 at Manchester, iii. 165 warres to the council at Logstown, i. 70 gives the alarm, ii. 391 grives the alarm, ii. 391 grives the specific problems, ii. 422 arrives at the beights, ii. 423 noble conduct, ii. 433 death, ii. 437 noble conduct, ii. 433 death, ii. 437 noble loss, wares to return, receives the reply of the Chevalier dest. Plerre to Gov. Dinwiddie, reaches the roll of the Chevalier dest. Plerre to Gov. Dinwiddie, reaches the reply of the Chevalier dest. Plerre to Gov. Dinwiddie, reaches the reply of the Chevalier dest. Plerre to Gov. Dinwiddie, reaches the reply of the Chevalier dest. Plerre to Gov. Dinwiddie, reaches the form, was not from Venango, best out from Venango homeward, i. 82 head-quarters at Cambridge, disposition of troops, disposition of the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, declines the command, death, public loss, washington, modifications of the mane, washington, modifications of the mane, washington, and companies Lawrence to the West Indies, disposition of the arrives at Barbadoes, disposition disposition, decompanies Lawrence to the West Indies, disposition of the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, declines the command, disposition of the condition, disposition of the mane, washington, modifications of the mane, washington, and the condition of the mane, washington, and the companies Lawrence to the West Indies, disposition of the first time, disposition of the first time, and cecompanies Lawrence to the West Indies, arrives at Barbadoes, witnesses a dramatic performance witnesses a dramatic performance for the first time, and catacked with small-pox, in 60 catacked with smal	elected second in command i 414	propers himself for his new duties disposition of troops, doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 reinforces Prescott, ecommands right wing, ii. 137 enters Boston, Ward, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 68 Warner, Seth, Ethan Allen's Lientenant, in the expedition against Ticonderoga, i. 494 surprises Crown Point, i. 496 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 repairs to the the thing of the thing of the control of the country, ii. 61 most to megatiate with the Indians, in the expedition against Ticonderoga, ii. 494 arrives at camp, ii. 56 detached to intercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, iii. 163 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 105 dat Manchester, iii. 105 joins Stark, arrives at the scene of action, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 warners to the council at Logstown, ii. 70 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 warners to the council at Logstown, ii. 70 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 warners to the council at Logstown, ii. 70 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 warners to the council at Logstown, ii. 70 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 warners to the council at Logstown, ii. 70 arrives at Venango, ii. 74 arrives at the heights, ii. 492 noble conduct, ii. 493 declines the command, ii. 493 declines the command, ii. 493 death, public loss, wtensoro, modifications of the name, wtensoro, modifications of the name, ii. 110 warners at Carleton, ii. 100 warners at Carleton, ii. 100 warners at Mills' Creek, ii. 63 arrives at Logstown, ii. 65 warners to the council at Logstown, ii. 70 arrives at the height, ii. 104 arrives at the height, ii. 105 warners to the council at Logstown, ii. 70 arrives at Venango, ii. 74 arrives at the height. The proposed manufactor of the council at Logstown,				• doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 reinforces Prescott, i. 422 reinforces Prescott, i. 422 reinforces Prescott, i. 422 returns Doston, i. 183 Ward, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 63 Ward, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 63 ward, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 63 ii. 65 ward, iii. 65 ii. 65 ward, iii. 65 ii. 65 ward, iii. 65 ii. 66 ii. 67			i.	60
ing Charlestown Heights, i. 422 commands right wing, ii. 157 enters Boston. ii. 158 WARD, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 63 WARDE, Seth, Ethan Allen's Lientenant, ii. 406 In the expedition against Ticonderoga, ii. 404 surprises Crown Point, ii. 406 roga, ii. 406 surprises Crown Point, ii. 406 roga, ii. 406 surprises Crown Point, ii. 406 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to Row York Convention, ii. 36 detached to intercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 56 in St. Chair's retreat, iii. 108 at Manchester, iii. 108 WARREN, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 201 gives the alarm, i. 301 devined and the scene of action, iii. 168 WARREN, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 201 gives the alarm, i. 301 devined to intercept relief, ii. 59 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 arrives at the heights, i. 432 noble conduct, ii. 433 death, ii. 437 noble conduct, ii. 433 death, ii. 437 noble loss, WASHINGTON, Augustine, father of	doubts the expediency of occupy-			60 commands right wing, ii. 157 enters Boston, ii. 188 (WARD, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, iii. 68 (WARDER, Seth, Ethan Allen's Lientenant, ii. 403 in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Grown Point, i. 404 repairs to Congress, iii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, iii. 36 re	ing Charlestown Heights, i. 422 meters Boston, Ward, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, Warner, Seth, Ethan Allen's Lientenant, in the expedition against Ticonderoga, i. 403 in the expedition against Ticonderoga, i. 404 is repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 repairs to Niercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 56 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 105 yarlives at the scene of action, iii. 165 yarrives at the scene of action, iii. 165 warner, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 291 gives the alarm, i. 391 grives the alarm, i. 391 grives the capatin boston doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 arrives at the heights, i. 423 noble conduct, ii. 433 deetlines the command, i. 433 deetlines the command, i. 433 deetlines the command, i. 433 death, ii. 437 pubble loss, wassinstorn, modifications of the name, wassinstorn, Augustine, father of		for the first time.	i.
WARD, Henry, transmits treasonable letter to General Greene, ii. 68 WARDER, Seth, Ethan Allen's Lientenant, in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, i. 406 regairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 detached to intercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 at Manchester, iii. 155 joins Stark, iii. 163 at Manchester, iii. 155 joins Stark, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 warrene's with the half-king, interview with the half-king, iii. 79 gives the alarm, ii. 391 gives the alarm, ii. 391 arrives from Boston iii. 396 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, ii. 422 noble conduct, ii. 437 deelines the command, ii. 433 death, ii. 437 public loss,  Washington, modifications of the name, washington, Augustine, father of letter to General Greene, ii. 63 WARNER, Seth, Ethan Allen's Licutanat, in the expedition against Ticonderoga, i. 404 surprises Crown Point, i. 406 roga, i. 406 surprises Crown Point, i. 406 surprises Crown Point, i. 406 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 detached Lieutenant Colonel, ii. 42 arrives at camp, ii. 56 detached to intercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 108 at Manchester, iii. 108 at Manchester, iii. 164 warrives at the scene of action, iii. 165 WAREEN, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 201 gives the alarm, i. 391 arrives from Boston doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 432 noble conduct, ii. 433 deatin, ii. 437 noble conduct, ii. 433 deatin, ii. 437 public loss, ii. 439 WASHINGTON, Augustine, father of			•
WARNER, Seth, Ethan Allen's Licntenant, i. 403 in the expedition against Ticonderoga, surprises Crown Point, i. 406 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 elected Licutenant Colonel, ii. 42 arrives at camp, ii. 56 detached to intercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 105 at Manchester, iii. 1			1.	62
tenant, in the expedition against Ticonderoga, in the expedition against the tenant of the constitution against the ticonderoga, in the expedition against Ticonderoga, in the			ż	co in the expedition against Ticonderogon and the expedition against Ticonderogon and the expedition against Ticonderogon and the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, arrives at the heights, arrives at the heights, arrives at the heights, and ceelines the command, and ceath, public loss, wassington, modifications of the name, wassington, and carried and content, and carried and content, and carried and content, and carried and ca	topent i 402		1.	0.0
roga, i. 404 repairs to Congress, ii. 36 repairs to Kew York Convention, ii. 36 repairs to Key Illies Instinctions, arrives at Wills' Creek, ii. 68 repairs to Measury, ii. 69 repairs to Key Illies Illies Inverse to the country, ii. 69 repairs to Measury, ii. 69 repairs to Wills Treek, ii. 79 resets the Indians in council, ii. 70 resets the Indians in council, ii. 70 resets the Indians in council, ii. 70 resets to Indian diplomacy, ii. 70 resets to Indian diplomacy, ii. 70 resets the Indians in council, ii. 70 resets the Indians in council			i	67 surprises Crown Point, 1. 406 repairs to Congress, 15. 36 repairs to Congress, 15. 36 repairs to New York Convention, 15. 36 repairs to Mis mission, 15. 36 repairs to New York Convention, 15. 36 repairs to New York Corek, 16. 36 repairs to New York Creek, 16. 36 repairs to New York Creek, 16. 36 repairs to New York Creek, 16. 36 repairs to New York Convention, 16. 36 repairs to New York Convent, 16. 36 repairs to New York Convent, 16. 36 repairs to New York Charles Miss Ammets Mr. Gist, whom he engages, 16. 36 repairs to New York Shingis, 16. 30 repairs to Least Mr. Gist, whom he engages, 16. 36 repairs to New Shingis, 26. 16 repairs to New York Shingis, 26 repairs to New York Shingis, 26 repairs to New York Sh	rogg. i 404 repairs to Congress, repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 cleeted Lieutenant Colonel, ii. 42 arrives at camp, ii. 56 detacked to intercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 103 at Manchester, iii. 105 repairs to New York Convention, ii. 36 cleated Lientenant Colonel, ii. 36 arrives at camp, ii. 56 deteched to intercept relief, ii. 59 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 105 at Manchester, iii. 105 york Stark, iii. 105 york Stark, iii. 105 warrives at the scene of action, iii. 105 warrives from Boston committee of Safety, i. 391 gives the alarm, i. 391 grives the capediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 arrives at the heights, i. 433 deatin, i. 437 noble conduct, i. 433 deatin, i. 437 public loss, wassinsoron, modifications of the name, wassinsoron, modifications of the name, i. 11 wassinsoron, Augustine, father of cleeted Lieutenant Colonel, ii. 42 arrives at camp, ii. 56 in St. Clair's retreat, iii. 103 at Manchester, iii. 103 at Manchester, iii. 103 at Manchester, iii. 105 ioins Stark, iii. 105 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, off Committee of Safety, i. 301 gives the alarm, i. 391 arrives from Boston ii. 396 doubts the expediency of occupy- ing Charlestown Heights, i. 492 arrives at the heights, i. 493 noble conduct, i. 493 deelines the command, i. 493 deelines the command, i. 493 deelines the command, i. 493 death, jubile loss, i. 497 washington, modifications of the name, wares to the council at Logstown, i. 70 arrives at the half-king, i. 70 first loestom in Indian diplomacy, i. 72 arrives at the Prench post, i. 73 arrives at Venango, i. 74 neets Captain Joncaire, i. 74 neets Captain Joncaire, i. 75 est out from Venango, i. 77 reaches the French fort, i. 78 is reception, chief of the Dela- wares to the council at Logstown, i. 70 arrives at Logstown, i. 70 first loestom in Indian diplomacy, i. 72 arrives at Venango, i. 74 reaches Venango, i. 74 neets Captain Joncaire, i. 74 neets Captain Joncaire, i. 75 est out from Venango homeward, i. 81 receives the reply of the Chevalier de St. Pierre to Gov. Dinwiddie, t. 81 reaches Venango, sets out from Venango homeward, i. 82 sets out from Venango homeward, i. 82 est out from Venango homeward, i. 82 arrives at Captain Joncaire, i. 74 neets Captain Joncaire, i. 75 neets Captain Joncaire, i. 74 neets Captain Joncaire, i. 74 neets Captain Joncaire, i. 74 neets Captain		meets Mr. Gist, whom he engages,		68 arrives at camp, detached to intercept relief, ii. 56 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 in St. Chir's retreat, iii. 163 at Manchester, iii. 155 joins Stark, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 165 Warren, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 291 gives the alarm, i. 391 arrives from Eoston ii. 896 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 arrives at the heights, i. 433 deedines the command, i. 433 deedines the command, i. 433 death, public loss, i. 439 Washington, modifications of the name, washington, Augustine, father of		his description of the country,	i.	69 attacks General Carleton, ii. 85 at Manchester, iii. 105 at Manchester, iii. 105 at Manchester, iii. 105 at Manchester, iii. 105 art Washington, member of Committee of Safety, i. 291 gives the alarm, arrives from Boston i. 896 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 arrives at the heights, i. 432 noble conduct, ii. 433 deetlines the command, ii. 433 deetlines the command, ii. 433 death, public loss, ii. 430 deaths, manchester, ii. 431 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 73 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 73 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 73 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 73 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 73 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 73 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 73 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, ii. 74 this rece		invites Shingis, chief of the Dela-in St. Clair's retreat, at Manchester, iii. 103 at Manchester, iii. 155 joins Stark, iii. 164 warrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 Warrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 Warrives the scene of action, iii. 163 Warrives the alarm, i. 201 arrives from Boston doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 492 arrives at the heights, i. 492 noble conduct, ii. 493 declines the command, i. 493 declines the command, i. 493 declines the command, i. 493 declines the command, ii. 50 declines the command, ii. 70 declines the command, ii. 70 declines the Condition, iii. 164 declines the findians in council, ii. 71 derives with the half-king, meets the Indians in council, ii. 72 derives at Venango, ii. 74 dest per with Joncaire, ii. 75 declines the French fort, ii. 75 demundication with the French officers, arrives at Venango, ii. 75 despendence the findians in council, ii. 72 derives at Venango, ii. 73 derives at Venango, ii. 74 despendence the findians in council, ii. 72 derives at Venango, ii. 74 despendence the findians in council, ii. 72 derives at Venango, ii. 74 despendence the findians in council, ii. 75 derives at Venango, ii. 74 derives at Venango, ii. 75 derives at Venango, ii. 75 derives at Venango,			i.
at Manchester, iii. 155 joins Stark, iii. 164 arrives at the scene of action, iii. 163 Warren, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 391 gives the alarm, i. 391 arrives from Boston i. 396 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 arrives at the heights, i. 432 noble conduct, i. 433 death, i. 437 public loss, i. 439 Washington, modifications of the name, Washington, Augustine, father of joins Stark, iii. 164 Wareen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 391 arrives at the saeme of action, iii. 168 Wareen, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 391 arrives from Boston i. 391 doubts the expediency of occupy- ing Charlestown Heights, i. 492 arrives at the heights, i. 492 arrives at the heights, i. 493 declines the command, i. 493 declines the command, i. 493 declines the command, i. 493 death, jubile loss, i. 493 Washington, modifications of the name, i. 11 Washington, Augustine, father of warenew, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 391 gives the alarm, i. 391 at supper with Joneaire, i. 73 at supper with Joneaire, i. 74 at supper with Joneaire, i. 75 at sufficient forms of the first the heights, i. 492 arrives at the heights, i. 493 noble conduct, i. 493 deelines the command, i. 497 propares to return, prepares to return, receives the reply of the Chevalier de St. Pierre to Gov. Dinwiddie, t. 81 reaches Venango, i. 73 at supper with Joneaire, i. 74 at supper with Joneaire, i. 75 at sufficient forms, i. 75 at sufficient forms, i. 78 at sufficient forms, i. 79 at suff WAREN, Dr. Joseph, member of Committee of Safety, i. 231 gives the alarm, i. 391 arrives from Boston i. 394 arrives from Boston doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 432 noble conduct, i. 433 declines the command, i. 437 public loss, i. 437 public loss, i. 437 washington, modifications of the name, Washington, Augustine, father of Safety arrives at Venango, i. 74 merches the officer, i. 75 communication with the French officers, i. 74 this reception, communication with the French officers, i. 74 communication with the French officers, i. 74 communication with the French officers, i. 75 communication with the Frenc Committee of Safety, i. 391 arrives from Boston i. 396 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 492 arrives at the heights, i. 492 arrives at the heights, i. 493 deelines the command, i. 493 deelines the command, i. 493 death, public loss, i. 497 mane, washington, and difference in the formal of the forma gives the alarm, a rives from Eoston i. 391 arrives from Eoston i. 396 doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 432 arrives at the heights, i. 433 declines the command, i. 433 declines the command, i. 433 death, public loss, i. 437 public loss, i. 438 Washington, modifications of the name, Washington, Augustine, father of the command of the control of the contr	Committee of Safety. i. 891 arrives from Boston doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 arrives at the heights, i. 433 declines the command, i. 433 death, i. 437 public loss, i. 439 Washington, modifications of the name, i. 11 Washington, Augustine, father of doubts the expediency of occupying Charlestown Heights, i. 422 arrives at the heights, i. 423 noble conduct, i. 433 declines the command, i. 433 death, public loss, i. 437 public loss, i. 437 washington, modifications of the name, washington, Augustine, father of the receives the reply of the Chevalier de St. Pierre to Gov. Dinwiddie, t. 81 reaches Venango, sets out from Venango homeward, i. 82 sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83 sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83 sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83 sets out from Venango homeward, i. 84 sets out from Venango homeward, i. 85 sets out from Venango homeward, i. 84 sets out from arrives at the heights, i. 432 communication with the French officers, i. 73 declines the command, i. 433 death, public loss, i. 437 public loss, i. 439 mame, i. 1487 receives the reply of the Chevalier de St. Pierre to Gov. Dinwiddie, t. 81 reaches Venango, i. 82 washington, Augustine, father of sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83	doubts the expediency of occupy-			77
noble conduct, i. 433 declines the command, i. 433 death, i. 437 public loss, washington, modifications of the name, i. 11 washington, Augustine, father of conduct, i. 438 different, i. 438 tikes observations of the fort, &c., i. 73 tikes observations of the fort, &c., i. 74 tikes observations of the fort, &c., i. 75 prepares to return, receives the reply of the Chevalier de St. Pierre to Gov. Dinwiddie, t. 81 reaches Venango, i. 83 sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83	ing Charlestown Heights, i. 422	his reception,	i.	78 declines the command, i. 433 death, propages to return, public loss, i. 437 public loss, washington, modifications of the name, i. 11 washington, Augustine, father of washington, Augustine, father of sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83		communication with the French death, i. 437 public loss, i. 438 prepares to return, receives the reply of the Chevalier de St. Pierre to Gov. Dinwiddie, t. 81 name, Washington, Augustine, father of sets out from Venango, homeward, i. 83 Dublic loss, Washington, modifications of the name, Namington, Augustine, father of  i. 439 receives the reply of the Chevalier de St. Pierre to Gov. Dinwiddie, t. 81 reaches Venango, i. 83 sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83
Washington, modifications of the name, i. 11 Washington, Augustine, father of sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83			1.	81
name, i. 11 reaches Venango, i. 82 Washington, Augustine, father of sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83	public loss, 1. 439			01
Washington, Augustine, father of sets out from Venango homeward, i. 83 sets out from Venenge homeward		83 and the state of t
	5,,	,	-

t and Africa I wise of Plants	1	01	takes up his abode at Mount Ver-arrives at Murdering Town,	1.	84	non,	i. 136 engages an Indian guide to Shanno-	i	85	his excitement at the military prep-treachery of the guide,	i	86	arations under Braddock,	i. 142 crosses the Alleghary River, im-	•	-	desires to join as a volunteer,	i. 142 minent peril,	i.	87	is invited to join Braddock's staff,	i. 143 arrives at Frazier's,	i.	88	accepts the appointment,	i. 143 appeases the anger of Queen Ali-		1	resists the appeals of his mother,	i. 144
quippa,	i.	88	arrives at Braddock's head-quar.
reaches Williamsburg,	i.	89	ters,	i. 144
his conduct through the expedition,	i.	89	his reception,	i. 144 made lieutenant colonel,	i.	94	his predictions,	i. 147 on recruiting service,	í.	94	horses disabled,	i. 154 sets out with two companies to the			sent for the military chest,	1. 166 fork of the Ohio,	i.	95	notions of frugality outraged by	1.164
toilful march to Wills' Creek,	į.	96	officers of Braddock's expedition,	i. 164
Calls a Council of There	i.	98	counsels Braddock,	i. 165 writes to Governor Dinwiddie,		99	personal example, his disappointment with their	1. 100
at Little Meadows,		101 102	movements,	i. 167 arrives at the Youghiogeny River,		102	illness,	i. 167 remonstrates against the insufficient		102	rests at the great crossings of the pay,		103	Youghiogeny,	i. 163 his motives of action, explores the river in a canoe,		103	from Captain Morris,	i. 172 letter from the half-king,		104	rejoins Braddock,	i. 172 rumors of advancing French,		104	cordial reception,	i. 173 takes a position at the Great Mea-	••		delighted with the appearance of dows,	i.	105	the army,	i. 175 interview with the half-king.		106	in battle,	i. 179 surprises the French,	i.	106	danger and preservation,	i. 179 letters to Governor Dinwiddie,		109	sent to Colonel Dunbar's camp expects to be attacked,	i.	110	for aid,	i. 182
his military excitement,		111	returns with supplies,	i. 182 whistling of bullets,		111	reads the funeral service over Brad-	. 100 to Croghan for supplies,		113	dock,	i. 183
to Governor Dinwiddie in behalf			reaches Fort Cumberland,	i. 184 of Van Braam,	i.	114	to his mother and brother,	f. 185 i. 190 to Governor Dinwiddie in reference			at Mount Vernon,	i. 190 to Captain Mackay's company,		114	to Augustine, prepares for the public safety,	i. 191 delivers presents to the Indians,	1.	116	his willingness to serve his coun-	1. 151 receives the name of Connotauca-	;	116	try,	i. 191 to Governor Dinwiddio about	1.	110	declines to solicit the command,	i. 192
	i	117	to his mother,	i. 192
French prisoners, to Governor Dinwiddic concerning	٠.		appointed commander-in-chief,	i. 193
Capt. Mackay,	i.	118	popularity among trials and re-resumes his march to Redstone			verses,	i. 193
Creek,	i.	118	fixes his head-quarters at Win-retreats,		119	ehester.	i. 194 reaches Great Meadows,	i.	119	panie at Winchester,	i. 195 strengthens Fort Necessity,	i.	120	his difficulties,	i. 196 deserted by the Indians,	i.	120	"insolence of the people,"	i. 196 attacked by French and Indians,		121	increased alarms,	i. 197 capitulates to the French,	i.	122	ludicrous result,	i. 197 destroys military stores,	į.	123	appreciation of Indian aid,	1. 199 returns to Williamsburg,		124	disciplines his troops,	i. 205 i. 206 receives a vote of thanks,	í.	124	questions of precedence,	i. 207 to William Fairfax about Croghan		10"	sets out for Boston,	1. 207 and Montour,		125	his equipment,	i. 207 rejoins his regiment,		128	aristocratical order for clothes,	1. 208 from Governor Dinwiddie ordering		130	the journey, interview with Governor Shirley,	1. 209 an advance to Wills' Creek,		130	disappointment in not being put	4. 203 his objections to the project,		132	upon the regular establishment,	i. 209 leaves the service.	1.	100	return to New York,	i. 210 is urged by Governor Sharpe to	i	132	meets Miss Mary Philipse,	i. 210 continue, his reply,		132	admiration of her,	i. 211 visits his mother,		136	return to Virginia,	i. 211
	•	4

421

repairs to Winchester,	i. 212	first effort,	1. 232 inhabitants in dismay,	i. 214	intrusted with the care of the prop-appealed to for protection,	i. 215	erty of Mr. Custis's children,	i, 283 to Governor Dinwiddie,	i. 216	intimates a desire to visit England,	1. 283 attacked by the press,	i. 216	happiness in retirement,	i. 283
	i. 216	vestryman,	i. 28
his indignation,	1. 210		i. 285
opposes the plan of defence devised	: 017	deportment in Church, by Governor Dinwiddie,	i. 217	his fortune,	i. 286 plan proposed,	i. 218	horses,	i. 286 recommendations with respect to	!		i. 287
military laws,	i, 219	riding equipments, (note,)	i. 287 superintends the measures taken for	1	management of his estate,	i. 258 frontier security,	i. 224		i. 288
tour of inspection,	i. 225		i. 289
	i. 226	demostic hobits	i. 289
the irregulars,	1. 220
cross purposes with Governor Din-			i. 289
widdie,	i. 226		i. 200
to Mr. Speaker Robinson,	i. 228		i. 290 asks permission to visit Philadel-			i. 290 phia,	i. 232	hunting dinners,	i. 291 to Lord Loudon in vindication of	}	hunting memoranda, (note,)	i. 291 his conduct,	i, 233		i, 292
his reception by Lord Loudon,	i. 234		i. 292 stationed at Winchester,	i. 237		i. 292 misunderstanding with Dinwiddie,	1. 238		i. 292 appeal to Dinwiddie,	i. 238		i. 293 illness,	i. 239		i. 293
retires to Mount Vernon,	i. 239	amusements,	i. 294
	i. 240		i. 294
	i. 240	domestic life,	i. 294
improved health,	i. 240		i. 295
	i. 240		i. 305
	1. 240	in the House of Burgesses,	i. 305 satisfaction at the decision to reduce		Stamp Act discussed,	1. 505
	i. 242	to Francis Dandridge on the Stamp
	i. 242	Act,	i. 307
to Major Halket,	i. 243	management of his estate,	i. 308 orders out the militia,	i. 252	conduct towards his wife's son,	i. 303
	i. 252	letters to London agents,	i. 308
	i. 253		i. 313
	i. 253	life at Mount Vernon,	i. 317
			i. 318
	i. 253	to Geo. Mason on non-importation,	1. 919
	i. 254	introduces resolutions of non-use
	i. 254	and importation,	i. 324
arrives at Winchester,	i. 254	on Botetourt,	i. 329 ordered to Fort Cumberland,	i. 254	expedition to the Ohio,	i. 330
	i. 254	arrives at Fort Pitt,	i. 881
	i. 255		i. 882
	i. 255		i, 333
	1. 200		i. 333
discountenances a project of Col.	1 055		i. 334
	i. 255
proposed as representative to the			i. 334
House of Burgesses,	i. 256		i. 334 elected and chaired,	i. 256		i. 335 hears of Amherst's success,	i. 256	encamps at the mouth of the Great to Colonel Bouquet,	i. 257	Kanawha,	i. 336 remonstrates against opening a new			i. 336
	i. 257		i. 336
	i. 258		i. 337
		return home,
	i. 261	to Colonel Muse,	i. 338
	i. 261	attends the Assembly,	i. 340 arrives before Fort Duquesne, occupies the ruins of Fort Du-	i. 262	friendly relations with Lord Dun-occupies the ruins of Fort Du-		more,	i. 34€ quesne,	i. 263	affliction at the death of Miss Custis,	i. 341
	i. 264	guardianship of John Parke Custis, marries Mrs. Custis,	i. 264	opposed to premature marriage,	i. 342 at the "White House."	i. 282	accompanies John P. Custis to takes his seat in the House of Bur-	1. 202	Now York	i. 342
	. 000	New York,
gessez,	i. 282	to President Cooper,	i. 343 to Jonathan Boncher on premature	1	to the President of Congress, 11.	. :

travel, (note,)	i. 343	requests a supply of money, ii.	. :
to Benedict Calvert on premature		advises hunting shirts for the ii.	. :
marriage, (note,)	1. 344	troops, intimacy with Lord Dunmore,	i. 350	apology for Massachusetts troops, ii.
attends meeting at Williamsburg,	i. 851	head-quarters, (note,) ii.
presides at a political meeting,	i. 354	style of living in camp, ii chairman of committee on resolu-		friendship for Joseph Reed, :i
tions,	i. 354	summons council of war, ii.
to Bryan Fairfax on a petition to		improves the defences, ii.
the Throne,	i. 355	compliments Gen. Putnam, ii reports patriotic resolutions,	i. 355	distribution of the army, ii delegate to General Convention,	i. 357	respect for religion, ii.
to Fairfax,	i. 857	declines to detach troops, ii.
on non-importation,	i. 358	reply to Gen. Assembly of Mass. ii.
presents resolutions to the conven-	i. 358	reply to Gov. of Conn. ii
tion,	i. 359	distresses Boston, ii.
enthusiasm, delegate to the General Congress,	i. 859	scarcity of powder, ii. to Gov. Cooke, ii.	_
to Bryan Fairfax,	i. 359
sets out for Philadelphia,	i. 363	arrival of supplies, il. poverty in ammunition, ii.
during prayer in the General Con-	1. 005	correspondence with Gen. Gage on	- 41
gress,	i. 366	the treatment of prisoners, ii.	20 to Captain Mackenzie on independ-	1. 500	confines British officers in jail, ence,	i. 371	revokes the order, returns to Mount Vernon,	i. 373	to Schnyler recommending patience, ii.
reviews military companies,	i. 384	reception of Indians, ii.
visit of Lee and Gates,	i. 385	to Schuyler, ii.
fox-hunting,	i. 388	to Schuyler recommending the at-	- attends convention at Richmond,	i. 388	tack of Quebec, ii.	46 one of a committee to prepare for		endeavors to bring on an engage-war,	i. 388	ment, ii.	49 offers to command a company,	i. 358	on the reluctance of the British to concerning the retreat from Con-		engage, ii.	50
eord,	i. 397	apprehension of a winter's campaign, ii.	. 50 hears of the affair at Lexington,	i. 399	summons a council, ii.
to George William Fairfax,	i. 400	to President of Congress, ii.	51 hopes of a reconciliation,	i. 403	detaches troops for the expedition chairman of committees on mili-		against Canada, ii.	52
tary affairs,	i. 410	to Arnold on the conduct of the ex-urged as commander-in-chief,	i. 410	pedition, ii.	53 modesty,	i. 412	to Arnold concerning Lord Chat-opposed,	i. 412	ham's son, ii.
elected commander-in-chief,	i. 413	opinion of Gen. Wooster, ii.
neceptance,	i. 413	concern at Schuyler's illness, ii.
to his wife,	i. 415	to Schuyler concerning Arnold, ii.
to his brother,	i. 416	solicitude for Arnold, ii.
receives his commission,	i. 416	on Allen's imprudence, ii.
beau ideal of a commander,	i. 417	to Schuyler about Arnold, ii.
sets out from Philadelphia,	i. 442	treasonable letter, ii.
harmony with Schuyler,	i. 443	orders the equipment of vessels, ii.	70
news of the battle of Bunker's Hill,	1. 440	on the destruction of Falmouth, ii.	72 78 determines to intrust Schuyler	: 440	measures of retaliation, ii.	43 with the command of New York,		to Gov. Trumbul! on the seizure of	70 at Newark,	i. 449	Tories, ii.	78 reply to President Livingston's	i. 450	orders Gen. Sullivan to seize public	78 address, instructions to General Schuyler,	i. 451	enemies, ii. want of artillery and ordnance	10 leaves New York,	i. 452	stores, ii.	79 at the American camp,	i. 452	to the Pres. of Congress on the re-	4 3 effect of personal appearance,	i. 453	enlistment of troops, ii.	80 to Governor Trumbull,	i. 454	to the same on the want of public	GU portraits of, (Appendix,)	i. 455	spirit, ii.	81
	ii. 1	to Reed, ii.
	ii. 2	confidence in Arnold, ii.
	ii. 4	to Schuyler on Arnold and the con-
	ii. 5	quest of Canada, ii.	93
	li. 7	to Schuyler on his resigning, ii.	96

summons a council to provide for		ii. 189 defence of the lines, ii. 100		ii. 193 to Gov. Trumbull on the desertion		ii. 19-of Connecticut troops, ii. 101		ii. 19-arrival of captured munitions, ii. 102	occupations,	ii. 19-orders restoration of pillage, ii. 103	to Congress on the defence of Canto Gen. Howe on the treatment of		ii. 19
Ethan Allen, ii. 104	secret designs of the enemy,	ii. 196 to Congress concerning Allen, ii. 105		ii. 209 to Levi Allen, ii. 106		ii. 20-prepares to bombard Boston, ii. 107		ii. 200 correspondence with Lund Wash-		ii. 200
ington, ii. 110		ii. 20
asks Mrs. Washington to join him		ii. 20
at eamp, if. 111		ii. 208
to Lund Washington on his affairs, ii. 111		ii. 208
directions concerning Mount Ver-		ii. 208
non, ii. 112		ii. 209
to Reed on invitations to dinner, ii. 113		ii. 21
attentions to General Court, ii. 113		ii. 210 relieved from his perplexity, ii. 114		ii. 216 religious duties, ii. 114		ii. 218
quells a brawl, ii. 116		ii, 229 to Arnold concerning capture of		ii. 229
Quebec, ii. 123		ii. 231
on Lord Dunmore, ii. 124		ii. 23:
to Gov. Cooke on Lee's proceedings		ii. 23 in Rhode Island, ii. 127	calls upon the troops to prepare for appeals to the soldiers' patriotism, ii. 127	a momentous conflict,	ii. 2 36 cheering news from Canada, ii. 129	concerning Amboy and Staten strength of the army, ii. 129	Island,	ii. 240 to Reed on the critical state of the	joy at the declaration of independ-army, ii. 130	ence,	ii. 24:
anxions vigils, to Reed, ii. 180	causes it to be read at the head of to Reed concerning attack on Boston, ii. 131	each brigade,	ii. 24:
from Knox, ii. 132	censures the destruction of the apprehensions for the safety of N.Y., ii. 134		ii. 243 authorizes Lee to carry out his plans, ii. 137	to Clinton on the safety of the despatches from Schuyler, ii. 141		ii. 246 to Schuyler on the death of Mont-	advises precautions against the gomery, ii. 154		ii. 250
solicitude about New York, ii. 156		ii. 259 to Lee relative to Tories, ii. 159	receives Col. Patterson,	ii. 253 to Lee on Capt. Parker's passivity, ii. 160	declines the letter to George Wash-anxiety to attack Boston, ii. 164	ington, Esq.,	ii. 25 to Reed, confidential, ii. 166	conduct applauded,	ii. 25 to Reed in favor of attacking Beston, ii. 167	sectional jealousies,	ii. 26 proposes an attack in council, ii. 168	on Connecticut light-horse,	ii. 268 arrival of Knox, ii. 168	to Gov. Trumbull on the Connecti-active measures, ii. 169	cut troops,	ii. 263 public gloom, ii. 169	concerning Connecticut light-horse,	ii. 26 plan of operations, ii. 170	to Schuyler on Sir Peter Parker's fortifies Dorchester Heights, ii. 174	repulse,	ii. 27 effect on the enemy of the fortifica-	general order concerning Sir Peter tion of Dorchester Heights, ii. 175		ii. 278 address to his troops, ii. 176	general order relative to sectional communication from the "select	jealousies,	ii. 28 men " of Boston, ii. 178	to the army on the observance of enters Boston, ii. 183	the Sabbath and blasphemy,	ii. 28 on Howe's retreat, ii. 183		ii. 28 throws up works on Fort Hill, ii. 184	general orders on the approach of national applause, ii. 184	the struggle, (note,)	ii, 28 receives a vote of thanks-gold	preparations for the conflict,	ii. 28 medal commemorative of the		ii. 28
evacuation of Boston, ii. 185	plans of defence,	ii, 29
on the destination of the British, ii. 186		20
Lee on his appointment to com-	landing of the British on Long Island,	ii. 29 exhortation to the troops,	ii. 294	advises removal of stores from Fort	:

concerning the burning of New York	.ii. 295	Lee,	ii. 8	37
urges the removal of the helpless,	ii. 296	disposition of troops,	ii. S erosses to Brooklyn,	ii. 296	instructions to Lee,	ii. a instructions to Putnam,	ii. 297	at Peekskill,	ii. S reinforces Long Island,	ii. 298	visits the Highland posts,	ii. S
	ii. 298		ii. 8
		reconnoissance,
	ii. 299	to Lee respecting new levies,	ii. S	,3 at Brooklyn,	ii. 303	leaves Heath in command of the
	ii. 303	Highlands,	ii. S	5
	ii. 813	intelligence from the Northern plan of retreat,	ii. 313	army,	ii. 8 and Gen. Millin's premature retreat	ii. 815		ii. 3	9: successful retreat,	ii. 316	arrives at Fort Lee,	ii. 3	9:
to Pres. of Congress on distressed		question of abandoning Fort Wash-
	ii. 318	ington,	ii. 3	:0:
question of destroying New York,	ii. 319	urges the increase of ordnance and
	ii. 321	artillery,	ii. S	9 concerning desertions,	ii. 322	attack on Fort Washington,	ii. 3 to Pres. of Congress on the inten-		Hessian cruelties, anecdote,	ii. 3 tions of the enemy,	ii. 328		ii. 3
	ii. 329		ii. 3	v
question of abandoning New York,	11. 529	to Lee on the defence of the High-
	ii. 331		ii. 2	9.
prepares for evacuation,	ii. 332	to Augustine on the loss of Fort baggage removed to King's Bridge	ii. 332 📗	Washington,	ii. 4	91
British crossing the river,	ii. 892	gloomy anticipations,	ii. 4	0 rage at the cowardice of the troops,	ii. 833		ii. 4	Ö.
perilous situation,	ii, 335	retreats from Fort Lee,	il. 4
	ii. 338		ii. 4
fortifies the approaches to his camp,		to Lee ordering him to cross the	,	0 on the conduct of his troops,	ii, 335		ii. 4	٥.
	ii. 339
			ii. 4
	ii. 340	Lee to Col. Reed,	ii. 4	U.
general orders, reference to Knowl-	041	correspondence with Lcc on crossing	ξ., ,	.,
	ii. 841		ii. 4
on the reorganization of the army,			ii. 4
	ii. 344		ii. 4
uncertainty of the enemy's inten-	1	Lee's letter to Reed,	ii. 4	16
tions,	ii. 346	to Reed, enclosing letter of Lee,	ii. 4	11 ceaseless vigilance,	ii, 346	concerning Reed, (note,)	ii. 4	Ι, reconnoitrings,	ii. 347		ii. 4
to Congress on the safety of the		to Congress explaining his retreat, ii. 359	indomitable spirit,	ii. 4	.)
	ii. 861		ii. 4
	ii. 353		ii. 4
	ii. 356		ii. 4
			ii. 4
	ii. 858	to Congress on the enemy's plans,	11. 4	- 1
	ii. 857	to Lee on the peril of Philadel-
	ii. 858		ii. 4
	ii. 859		ii. 4
	ii. 362		ii. 4
	ii. 863		ii. 4
offers reward for troopers,	ii. 365	retreat across the Jerseys,	ii. 4	3( ii, 365	moral qualities,	ii. 4:	37 draws his troops into White Plains, i	ii. 365	to Augustine on Lee's capture,	li. 4:	38
	ii. 367	to Augustine on the critical state of
	11. 368	affairs,	ii. 4	39
	ii. 868		ii. 4
	ii. 371		ii. 4
			ii. 4
	ii. 371
	ii. 373		ii. 4
	ii. 374		ii. 4	÷
	ii. 3 74	to Col. Reed concerning the proto Gen. Wm. Livingston, intentions			ii. 4 of the enemy,	ii. 876	to Reed relative to the time chosen, advises the evacuation of Fort		from Gates,	ii. 4	4
Washington.	ii 278	crosses the Delaware.	ii. 4	1

pushes forward to Trenton, march of troops,	ii. 419 ii. 451	questions of rank,	iii. 44 iii. 44 burst of indignation, anecdote,	ii. 451   ii. 451	to Henry Lee on Arnold's promo-	- iii. 45 advances with the artillery,	ii. 453	to Arnold explaining his non-pro-captures the Hessians, imminent hazard,	ii, 455 ii, 456	motion, to Congress on injustice to Arnold,	iii. 46 iii. 51 visits Rahl,	ii. 457		iii. 53 described by Hessian officer,	ii. 459	concerning Schuyler,	iii. 54
by another,	ii. 461		iii. 58 follows up the blow at Trenton, troops begin to cross the Dela-	ii. 466	to McDougall on the fortifications of the Hudson,	s iii. 65
ware,	ii. 467		iii. 66
re-enlistments,	ii. 468	his foresight,	iii. 65 to Robert Morris for money,	ii. 465	offers Arnold the command of the invested with dictatorial powers, acknowledgment to Congress,	ii. 468   ii. 469	Hndson, to McDougall describing Putnam,	iii. 67 critical situation,	ii. 472		iii. 69
takes position on the Assunpink,	ii. 472		iii. 69
during the attack,	ii. 473		iii. 69 desperate situation,	ii. 474	to Patrick Henry giving warning,	iii. 71 bold expedient, council of war,	ii. 474 ii. 475	strengthens his position, uncertainty of British movements,	iii. 71 iii. 72 determines to attack Princeton,	ii. 475		iii. 74
the army begins its march,	ii. 475	on Burgoyne's reported designs,	iii. 77
at Princeton,	ii. 478	speculations on the enemy's move-rallies the troops, anecdote,	ii. 478   ii. 479	ments, to Clinton and Putnam ordering	iii. S0 loss of Gen. Mercer,	ii. 480		iii. 81 pushes for Morristown,	ii. 481		iii. 96
orders Putuam to Crosswicks,	ii. 453	reinforces Schuyler,	iii. 97 to Heath concerning the enemy's	ii. 483		iii. 98 panic, to Heath repeating orders,	ii. 454	to Schuyler on St. Clair, ito Sir William Howe proposing	iii. 98 to Maj. Gen. Lincoln ordering an			iii. 113 advance on New York,	ii. 485	to Trumbull on the treatment of triumphant close of the campaign,			iii. 113 the American Fabius, to Cornwallis relativo to Hessians,	ii. 456		iii. 114 iii. 115
	iii. 5		iii. 116
prohibits plundering,	iii. 7	to Schuyler on the enemy's force,	iii. 117
	iii. 7		iii. 118
	iii. 8		iii. 119 iii. 12 0
	iii. 9		iii. 120
discourages vice and immorality,	iii. 10		iii. 121
to Sir William Howe proposing an	1		iii. 121
	iii. 13   iii. 13	to Putnam relative to Connecticut, declines to nominate commander concerning treatment of Colonel	111. 10		iii. 126
Campbell,	iii. 17	regret at the removal of Schnyler,
	iii. 17		iii. 126
	iii. 18   iii, 20		iii. 130
	iii. 24	to Putnam to be on the alert, sends Colonel Morgan to fight the	iii. 131 to Governor Cooke on the neces-	.	Indians,	iii. 13 2
	iii. 25	reinforces Gates,	iii. 133
urges the reinforcement of Schny- ler,	iii. 26		iii. 183
	iii. 26   iii. 26	makes the acquaintance of La- fayette,	iii. 134 critical situation,	iii. 27		iii. 137
	iii. 28	marches through Philadelphia,	iii. 133 designs of the enemy, to Gates on the adjutant general	iii. 28		iii. 189
	iii. 36		iii. 170 iii. 150
on foreign officers,	iii. 40	reconnoitres,	iii. 180 reprehends distinctions among the		risk of capture,	iii. 181 troops,	iii. 43	determines to risk a battle,	iiı. 184 stirring appeal to the army,	iii. 185 [	closing note to Gates,	iii. 8	32 changes position,	iii. 186	forged letters,	ili. 8	33 position of the army,	iii. 157	to General Henry Lee on the forge	d battle of Brandywine,	iii. 183	letters,	iii. 3	33 profits by Howe's inactivity,	iii. 197	to Landon Carter on the same.	iii. 3 retreats to Germantown,	iii. 195	introduction to forged letters,	iii. 3 manunvres of the armies.	iii, 198	Canada expedition,	iii. 8 at Warwick Furnace,	iii. 199	to Lafayette, consoling,	iii. 8 to Putnam for reinforcements,	iii. 202	to Patrick Henry on the cabal,	iii. 3	21 to Gates for Morgan's corps,	iii, 202	party opposed to Washington,	111. 0	,, rests at Pott's Grove,	iii. 203	(note,)	iii. 3	21 to Trumbull on the taking of Phi adelphia,	iii. 203	reforms in the army,	iii. S destitution in camp,	iii. 3

amount of force,	iii. 258	situation described,	iii. 3 a lyances to Skippack Creek,	iii. 258	to Captain Lee on his exploit,	iii. 3	ú to Congress on Howe's situation,	iii. 259	recommends Captain Lee for pro determines to attack the Britis		motion,	iii. 3	(٠) camp,	ili. 259	to General Lee on his exchange,	iii. 8 plan of attack,	iii. 261	arrival of Mrs. Washington,	iii. 3	١.)
conduct in the battle of German		better times,	iii. 3	(,) town,	iii. 266	arrival of Bryan Fairfax,	iii. 3	نز to Congress on the battle,	iii. 266	to Bryan Fairfax on their friend remains at Perkiomen Creek,	iii. 269	ship,	iii. 3	5 reinforced,	iii. 269	arrival of Baron Steuben,	iii, 3 at White Marsh,	iii. 269	promotion of Greene,	iii. 8 intercepts supplies,	iii. 269	project to capture Sir Henry Clin the importance of Fort Mercer,	iii. 271	ton,	iii. 3	c to Richard Henry Lee on the pre motion of Conway,	iii, 277	circular on plan of next campaign,	iii. 3 to Congress on forming a system,	iii. 3 to Gates on the surrender of Bur		downfall of Conway,	iii. 3	.61
goyne,	iii. 279	sends Lord North's bills to Con-to Conway on his letter to Gates,		gress,	iii. S	6 to Patrick Henry, apology for hi		to Governor Tryon enclosing reso	- army,	iii. 232	lutions of Congress,	iii, 8	G to Thomas Wharton for aid, (note,)		rejoicings at Valley Forge,	iii. 3	71 in want of reinforcements,	iii. 254	council of war determines on de-instructions in regard to the forts,		fensive measures,	iii. 3	7 toss of Fort Mithin,	iii. 2×7	American force,	iii. 3	7 hopes to keep Red Bank,	iii, 257	solicitude for Lafayette,	iii. 3 reprimands Putnam,	iii. 292	to Congress on Ethan Allen,	iii. 3 intrigues against,	iii. 292	prepares to decamp,	iii. 3
Fort Mercer taken,	iii, 294	sends Sir Henry Clinton's letter to		• • arrival of reinforcements,	iii. 294	Congress,	iii. 3	21 advising the sinking of the Amer			iii. 3
ican vessels,	iii. 295
reconnoitres Philadelphia,	iii. 296	to Lee, admonitory,	iii. 3 eonneil of war,	iii. 3
opportunity for a brilliant blow,	iii. 298		iii. 3 council of war,	iii. 298		iii. 3	53 on the promotion of Lafayette,	iii. 300	crosses the Delaware at Coryell's	š
camp menaced by Howe,	iii. 802		iii. 3 skirmishes,	iii. 803	council opposed to a general action,	iii. 3	50 encourages his troops,	iii. 304	determines to attack the army,	1ii. 8	94
the enemy retire,	iii, 304	perplexed to satisfy Lee,	iii. 89	91 to Congress on threatened attack,	iii, 305	resolves upon an attack,	lii. 89	9 approach of winter,	iii. 305		iii. 39
winter-quarters,	iii. 306		iii. 3:
urrival at Valley Forge,	iii. S07		iii. 3 destitution of troops,	iii. 803		iii. 3
In vindication,	iii. 809	meets Colonel Shreve and Major exercises his authority,	iii. 312		iii. 39	o s anomic mosting with Los to Congress on the consequences,	iii. 312		iii. 89 retrospect of 1777,	iii. 812		iii 3 to Gates on the Conway letter,	iii. 318	dispositions for battle,	iii. 39	31 to Laurens on the conduct of his		battle of Monmouth Court House, enemies,	iii. 321		iii. 40
correspondence with Gates,	iii, 323		iii. 40
scarching reply to Gates's explana			iii. 40
tion,	iii. 329	correspondence with General Lee.	ii i, 1 (	)4 puts Lee ander arrest,_	iii. 406	change of plans,	iii.	483 conduct in relation to Lec,	iii. 407	sends troops to the South,	iii.

on Lee's abuse,	iii. 409	to President Reed for aid,	iv.	2 magnanimity in regard to Lee,	iii. 413	on the destitution of the troops,	iv.	$^{2}$ arrival of French fleet,	in. 415	calls upon the counties for sup-correspondence with Count D'Es-			iv.	3
taing,	iii. 416	to Colonel Ogden, to regard the	, plan of operations,	iii. 417	rights of the people,	įv.	4 5 encamps at White Plains,	iii. 417	bay of New York, frozen over,	1 V.	J orders Sullivan to prepare for a de		projects a descent on Staten	iv.	5 scent upon Rhode Island,	iii. 418	Island, Arnold's government of Philadel-to John Augustine on the failure of the expedition against Rhod		phia,	iv.	10
Island,	iii. 429		iv.	10
anxiety as to its effects,	iii. 429	instructions to Arnold,	iv.	11 to D'Estaing on his failure,	iii. 430		iv.	17 enemy's movements,	iii, 435	reprimand to Arnold,	iv.	20 strengthens the Highlands,	iii. 436	solicitude for the safety of the moves his camp to Fredericks-	i		iv.	23
burg,	iii. 436	on the safety of Charleston.	iv.	28 moves to Fishkill,	iii. 437	to Congress, on his situation,	iv.	29 distribution of troops,	iii. 445		iv.	30 head-quarters near Middlebrook,	iii. 445		iv.	30 plan of alarm signals,	iii. 445	to Baron Steuben on his difficul-	iv.	30 opposes Lafayette's Canada	213 447	ties,	iv.	31 scheme,	iii. 447		1 1.	01
in Philadelphia,	iii. 448 iii. 449	committee appointed to consult with,	iv.	33 on the deterioration of Congress, to Colonel Harrison on the decline		to Lafayette on his return,	iv.	34 of public spirit,	iii. 449	reception of Lafayette,	iv.	35 disgust at the neglect of Con-		to Lafayette, on the reduction of gress,	iii. 451	New York,	iv.	35 policy of the next campaign,	iii. 451	reduction of the army,	iv.
unjust retaliation on the Indians,	iii. 452	mutiny in camp,	iv.
discontent of Jersey troops,	iii. 452	to Pres. Reed, for relief,		40 acts as a mediator,	iii. 453	endeavors to rouse Congress,	iv.	41 address to the officers,	iii. 454	surrender of Charleston,	iv.	56 reply of the officers,	ili. 454	supplies West Point,	1 V.	56 59 to General Maxwell on the deter		in position at Short Hills,	iv. iv.	61 mination of his officers,	iii. 455	watches Knyphausen,	iv.	61 apprehends an expedition agains	iii. 459	sets off towards Pompton, enemy move against Springfield,	iv.	62 the Highlands, measures for the protection of	111. 400	applies to the State Legislature for	- ' '	-
West Point,	iii. 461	aid,	iv.	67 removes to New Windsor,	iii. 461	congratulates the army on the ar-detaches General Heath to act		rival of French troops,	iv.	72 against the British in Connect-		his line of conduct,	iv.	73
ient,	iii. 464	crosses the Hudson,	iv.	74
plans the recapture of Stony		interview with Arnold,	ív.	74
Point and Fort Lafayette,	iii. 465	withdraws his forces,	iv.	76
proposes the storining of Stony		interposes in the difficulty bc-	·-	70
Point to Wayne,	iii. 465	tween Greene and Congress,	iv.	76 plan of surprisal,	iii. 465	on the derangement of the com-	iv.	77
evacuates Stony Point,	iii. 470	missariat,	iv.
at West Point,	iii. 470 iii. 472	on militia and regular troops,	iv.	92 expedition against Penobscot, on the surprise of Paulus Hook,	iii. 474	to Gates on the battle of Camden,		94 on the capture of Stony Point an		prepares to proceed to Hartford,	iv.	95
Paulus Hook,	iii. 476	crosses to Verplanck's Point,		104 furthers the defences of the Hud		interview with French officers,	iv.	118 son,	iii. 476	returns to head-quarters,	iv.	119
to Edmund Randolph for informa	-	reception by the people,	iv.
tion of affairs,	iii. 477	detained at Fishkill,		119 to Dr. Cochran describing style of	f	ride to the Robinson House,		119 living,	iii. 477	arrives at the Robinson House,		121 reception of the Chevalier de	ia	at West Point,		$\frac{121}{122}$
Luzerne,	iii. 480	hears of Arnold's treason,		122
tc Lafayette,	iii 4S0	sends in pursuit of Arnold,	14.

letters from Arnold and Colonel		to Greene on the chance of rein-
Robinson,	iv. 124	forcements,	iv. 26 to Colonel Wade, urging vigilance,	iv. 125	to Colonel Laurens on the failure to General Greene, to proceed to	1	of the Portsmouth expedition,	iv. 26
King's Ferry,	iv. 125	anxiety for Greene,	iv. 26 to Colonel Jameson, to prevent			iv. 26
Andre's escape.	iv. 126	to Lund Washington on his conduc	t interview with Mrs. Arnold,	iv. 127	towards the enemy,	iv. 26
André brought to the Robinson		force on the Hudson,	iv. 27
House,	iv. 128	death of Colonel Greene,	iv. 27 to Greene on the enstody of An-		arrival of Count de Barras,	iv. 27.
dré and Smith,	iv. 128	interview with Rochambean,	iv. 27 refers the case of André to a board		number of force,	iv. 27 of general officers,	iv. 134	plan of operations,	iv. 27 to Sir Henry Clinton, concerning		to Gov. Clinton on his designs,	iv. 27
André,	iv. 136	march to King's Bridge,	iv. 27
Andre's appeal,	iv. 141	failure of the enterprise,	iv. 27
enlogium on the captors of André,	iv. 147	at Dobb's Ferry,	iv. 28 on Arnold's address,	iv. 148	to Lee on his plans,	iv. 28 opinion of Arnold,	iv. 149	reconnoitres the British posts,	iv. 28 to Governor Reed on Arnold's con-		at King's Bridge,	iv. 28
duct,	iv. 149	awkward predicament,	iv. 28 strengthens West Point,	iv. 152	to Lafayette on the effect of the takes post at Prakeness,	iv. 152	reconnoissance,	iv. 28 plan to capture Arnold,	iv. 153	disappointment as to reinforce-failure of Champe's design,	iv. 155	ments,	iv. 30 appoints Greene to command the		to the Eastern States,	iv. 30
Southern army,	iv. 156	to Lalayette on the arrival of the confidence in Greene,	iv. 156	Count de Grasso	iv. 30 state of the army,	iv. 158	determines to command the expe-to Gen. Sullivan on the state of the		dition,	iv, 309 country and army,	iv. 158	crosses to Haverstraw,	iv. 31 to Lafayette on his desire for ac-		visits West Point with Rochamtion,	iv. 161	bean,	iv. 31
preparations to attack the British	j	move toward Virginia,	iv. 81 posts,	iv. 162	to Noah Webster on the Virginia his horsemanship,	iv. 163	expedition (note),	iv. 815 personal appearance,	iv. 166	welcome at Philadelphia,	iv. 81 his character,	iv. 166	concern about De Grasse,	iv. 31
at New Windsor,	iv. 167	to Lamyette on Cornwallis,	iv. 31:
to Franklin on his disappoint-		arrival of the Count De Grasse,	iv. 31
ment,	iv. 191	reaches the head of Elk,	iv. 819
necessitous state of the country,	iv. 192	to De Grasse on Cornwallis,	iv. 31 instructions to Colonel Laurens,	iv. 194	at Baltimore,	iv. 82 revolt of the Pennsylvania line,	iv. 195	revisits Mount Vernon,	iv. 32 to Wayne on the revolt,	iv. 197	pushes on to Williamsburg,	iv. 82
disaffection in the army,	iv. 203	lurries on the troops,	iv. 32 suppresses mutiny of Jersey troops.		on board the French fleet,	iv. 32 articles of confederation,	iv. 204	plan of operations,	iv. 32 heads of departments formed,	iv. 208	arrival of Admiral Digby,	iv. 32
eulogium on Hamilton,	iv. 208	threatened departure of the French	11.02 misunderstanding with Hamilton,			iv. 32
to Lafayette on Hamilton,	iv. 213	ileet,	14. 02 reconciliation with Hamilton,	iv. 213	army drawn up at Beaver Dam	iv, 82 to Greene on the battle of Guilford	11. 210	Creek,	iv. 32
Court House,	iv, 250	strength of forces, on the destruction of Arnold's	14. 200	anecdote,	iv. 83
	iv. 258	despatches from Greene,	iv. 38:
corps,	iv. 258	to Greene on the battle of Entaw	i 01/instructions to Lafayette,	iv. 259	Springs,	iv. 34 to Steuben on Arnold,		fires the first gun against York-	i 04 sets out for New York,	iv. 260	town,	iv. 84 to Lafayette on Cornwallis,	iv. 260 iv. 260	witnesses the storming of the re-	1 04
at Newport,	11. 200	doubts,	iv. 34
arranges plan of campaign with	i 000	anecdote,	iv. 84
Rochambeau,	iv. 260	and Knox, anecdote,	iv. 34 to Lafayette on the sailing of the	i 001	surrender of Yorktown,	iv. 35
French floet,	iv. 261	and General O'Hara,	iv. 85 returns to New Windsor,	iv. 261	on the victory,	iv. 35

iv. 42 iv. 42 iv. 42 iv. 42 iv. 42 iv. 42
iv. 42 l iv. 49 iv. 49
iv. 42 l iv. 49 iv. 49
iv. 42 l iv. 42 iv. 42
iv. 42 iv. 42 iv. 42
iv. 49 iv. 49
iv. 42
iv. 42
iv. 42
iv. 22
iv. 42
:- 40
iv. 42
iv. 42
iv. 42
iv. 42
·
iv. 45
iv. 43
iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 49 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 42 iv. 43 iv. 43 iv. 43 iv. 43 iv. 45 iv. 45 iv. 45 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 49 iv. 49 iv. 49 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv
iv. 48 iv. 49 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44
iv. 48 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44
iv. 48 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44
iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 48 iv. 44 iv. 48 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv
iv. 48 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44
iv. 48 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44 iv. 44
iv. 48 iv. 44
iv. 48 iv. 44 iv
iv. 48 iv. 44 iv
iv. 48 iv. 44
iv. 48 iv. 44 iv
iv. 48 iv. 44 iv
17. 44
iv. 44
iv. 444.4 iv. 44
17、 44
17、 42
iv. 44
17、 42
iv. 44
iv, 44 % (iv, 44 % ) (iv, 44 %
iv. 44 % 44 % 44 % 44 % 44 % 44 % 44 % 44
17. 44
1v. 44 1v.
17. 44
17、 12
17、 基準 24
17、 42 年 17
17、 基準 22
17、 42 年 17
i .

to Lafayette on the same,	i۷. ۰	465 1	residence at Philadelpnia,	v.	75 elected President,	iv			v.	79
	ív.			ν.
	iv.		opposite cabinet policy,		81
				v.
	iv.		addresses Seneca chiefs,
	į٧. ٠			v.
	iv.		cautions General St. Clair,	v.	84
	iv.		tour through the Southern States,		85 reception at Trenton,	iv.	469	return to Philadelphia,	v.	86
	iv	470	to David Humphreys on the stabil-
	iv.		ity of the government,	ν.	86
	iv.		public credit,	v.	86
	v.	``i	to Lafayette on the state of the	•••	0., 89
	v.	4	country,	v.
	v.	5	to Lafayette on his personal danger,	v.	90
	V .	6	concerning the flight and capture privacy invaded,	v.	7	of Louis XVI.,	v.	92
	v.	S	to Larayette on French affairs,	v.	92
first levee, anecdote,	v.	12	at Mount Vernon,	v.	93 attends balls,	v.	13	speech on the opening of the second
	v.	15		v.	93
presidential dinner,			Congress,		101
		16	intelligence of St. Clair's disaster,
		16	effect upon him,		102
his equipage,	v.	18	vetoes the apportionment bill,		105
love of horses,	V.	18	weary of political strife,	v.	106 residence in New York, (note,)	v.	19	intention of retirement,	v.	106 alarming illness,	v.	20	to St. Clair on a court of inquiry,	v.	110 exercises of the nominating power,		21	retains his confidence in St. Clair,		112
	v.	22	visits Mount Vernon.		113
rebukes the Senate,		23	to Madison on his intention to re-	٠.	112 death of his mother,	. V.	2.5			110 nominates Hamilton as secretary of			tire,		113
the treasury,	v.	24	asks Madison's advice,		113 and Edmund Randolph.	v.	25	valedictory address,		113 to Jay, enclosing his commission,	v.	26	conversation with Jefferson on po-department of state.	v.	28	litical matters,	v.	119 to Rochambeau on the French rev-			to Jefferson on his dissensions with olution,	v.	36	Hamilton,		125 to Gouverneur Morris on the same,		36	to Hamilton on the same,		126
		50			136
offers to appoint Jefferson secretary		0~	on taking the oath of office, of state,	ν.	37	takes the oath of office,		136 journey through the Eastern States,		88	state of affairs in France,		137 Hancock's invitation,	v.	39	Lafayette's downfall,		189 reception at Boston, question of		- }	atrocities of the French revolution,	v.	140 etiquette,	v.	40	to Madame de Lafayette,	v.	141 account of the ceremony,	v.	41	commencement of second term,	v.	144 reply to Governor Hancock,	v.	42	war between France and England, address of the Cincinnati Society of		1-	proclamation of neutrality,		145
	ν.	43	view of French affairs,		151
Massachusetts,			wasantian of Const return to New York,	v.	41	reception of Genet,	٧.	152 message from Lafayette on affairs in	1	1	conversation with Jefferson on at-
France,	v.	45	tacks of the press,		153 appoints Jefferson secretary of state	) V.	48	estitution of French prizes,		155 opens the session, (note,)	v.	50	newspaper attacks,	v.	157 measures suggested in his address,	v.	51	adherence to duty,	v.	157 public credit,	v.	51	called to Mount Vernon,		159 on sectional jealousies,	v.	55	case of the Little Sarah,		163
		60			161
assumption of State debts,			trial of Gideon Hentield,		165 forms and ceremonies,	v.	64	concerning the recall of Genet, to Dr. Stuart on his levees,	v.	64	burst of feeling,		166 to Lafayette on his cabinet,	v.	66	threatened dissolution of the cablto Luzerne on the French revolu-	-		net,	v.	163
tion,	v.	70	interview with Jefferson,	v.	169 receives the key of the Bastille,	ν.	72	ill-advised measures of Great Britto Lafayette, solicitude for,	v.	72	ain,	v.	176 visits Rhode Island,	v.	73	Indian hostilities,		177
		73	opening address to Congress,		173 return to Mount Vernon,	v.	74			179 difficulties with the Indians,	v.		message relative to Genet, information of Indian expedition,	v.	77	to Jefferson on his retirement,	v.	183 characterized by Jefferso ,	v. 184	denounces spurious letters,	v. 253 concerning French exped tions	v. 189	farewell dinner,	v. 253 relative to Genet,	v. 189	at the inauguration of Adams,	v. 254 relative to British aggressions,	v. 191	farewell to the people,	v. 254 wise moderation,	v. 192	banquet in honor of,	v. 254 to Monroe in regard to Hamil-		sets off for Mount Vernon,	v. 256 ton,	v. 193	arrives at home,	v. 256

nominates Jay as envoy to Great		letters relating to,	v. 257
Britain,	v. 193	to Mrs. S. Fairfax on Belvoir,	v. 259 inimical letter,	v. 197	strange faces,	v. 259 insurrection in Pennsylvania,	v. 197	invites Lawrence Lewis to Mount proclamation to the insurgents,	v. 198		v. 259 to Governor Lee on the Demo-		Vernon, advice to Nelly Custis,	v. 261 cratic Societies,	v. 199	anecdote of Miss Custis,	v. 263 issues second proclamation,	v. 199	to Lafayette by his son,	v. 264 leaves for Carlisle,	v. 199	on the French indignities,	v. 267
correspondence with Morgan,	v. 200	pamphlet from General Dumas,	v. 268 to the Suprotory of State	v. 200	reply to Dumas,	v. 269 to the Secretary of State,	v. 201	threatened war with France,	v. 271 arrives at Cumberland,	v. 201	on accepting the command,	v. 273 to Gov. Lee concerning the army,	v. 202	appointed commander-in-chief,	v. 273 arrives at Philadelphia,	v. 203		v. 274 to Hamilton, his paternal care,		accepts the commission,	v. 277 to Jay on the Pennsylvania insur-	v. 203	to Knox on his appointment,	v. 278
rection,	V. 205	to Adams concerning Knox,	v. 279 denunciation of self-created socie-	v. 295	to Knox, explanatory,	v. 280 ties,		to Knox urging his acceptance,	v. 252 to Knox on his resignation,	v. 211	repairs to Philadelphia, anxiety about the negotiation with	010	taxed with the cares of office,	v. 282
England,	v. 212	return to Mount Vernon,	v. 253
Jay's treaty,	v. 213	correspondence with Latayette,	v. 284 ratification of the treaty,	v. 215	surprise at the appointment of	- 000 at Mount Vernon,	v. 217	minister to France,	v. 286 excitement against,	v. 217	the conflict in Europe,	v. 257 reply to the select men of Boston,	v. 218	solicitude for the army,	v. 288 public clamors,	v. 219	life at Mount Vernon,	v. 291 to Randolph requesting to be ad-		plan for the management of his	004
vised,	v. 220	estate,	v. 291 recalled to the seat of govern-		to Hamilton on military academy,	v. 292
ment,	v. 220	illness,	v. 293
Fauchet's intercepted despatch,	v. 221	remedies,	v. 294 signs the ratification,	v. 223	his last hours,	v. 295 conduct toward Randolph,	v. 223	his death,	v. 296 permits unlimited disclosure,	v. 225	his funeral,	v. 297 inalignant attacks of the press,	v. 226	his will,	v. 293 reply to the Gov. of Maryland,	v. 227	to John F. Mercer on slavery,	v. 298 arrival of Lafayette's son,	v. 229	to Lawrence Lewis on the same,	v. 299 to George Cabot concerning young	5	public testimonials of grief,	v. 300
Lafayette,	v. 230	retrospect,	v. 300 speech at the opening of Congress,	v. 231	discharge of his civil functions,	v. 300 to Gouverneur Morris on the con-		character of,	v. 321
duct of Great Britain,	v. 234	his fame,	v. 321 receives the colors of France,	v. 235	Washington, Major George A.,	v. 93 treaty with Great Britain,	v. 236	Washington, John Augustine, raises	, demand by the House of Repre		an independent company,	i. 388 sentatives,	v. 236	entreats Mrs. Washington to leave reply to the resolution,	v. 236	Mount Vernon,	ii. 110 to Colonel Humphrey on the state		Washington, Lawrence, return from	ı of politics,	v. 238	England,	i. 19 noble reply to Jefferson,	v. 240	campaign in the West Indies,	i. 20 to Monroe on intercepted letter,	v. 242	return home,	i. 21 determines to retire,	v. 244	marries Miss Fairfax,	i. 21 farewell address,	v. 245	his attachment to George,	i. 25 sensation produced by,	v. 246	becomes manager of the Ohio Comlast speech to Congress,	v. 247	pany,	i. 46 complaints of the French minister.		his views on restraints on con-letter to Mr. Pinckney,	v. 251	science,	1. 46 to Knox on the prospect of retire-		failing health, departs for the West ment,	v. 252	Indies,	i. 60

arrives at Barbadoes,	i. 60	detached to attack the enemy,	ili. 393 goes to Bermuda,	i. 62	at Monmouth Court House,	iii. 398 letters home,	i. 62	opposes Cornwallis,	iii. 437 return,	i. 63	to storm Story Point,	iii. 465 death,	i. 63	ancedote, (note,)	iii. 465 his character,	i. 63	marches against Stony Point,	iii. 466 his will,	i. 63	carries the fort,	iii. 467
Washington, Lund, on the danger :	at	on the conduct of his soldiers,	iii. 46S
Mount Vernon,	ii, 111	revolt of troops,	iv. 196 compromises with the enemy,	iv. 269	pursues the mutineers,	iv. 197
Washington, Martha, death and		overtakes the troops,	iv. 199
character of,	v. 23	in a morass,	iv. 292
Washington, Mrs., at Mount Verno		ordered South,	iv. 257 arrival at Cambridge,	ii112	joins Lafavette.	iv. 289 equipage,	ii. 112	joins Lafayette, appointed to Western command,	v. 111 presides at head-quarters,	ii. 114	takes the field against the In-celebration of Twelfth Night,	ii. 114	dians,	v. 173
at New York,	ii. 194	expedition against the Indians,	v. 207 arrival at Valley Forge,	iii, 353	builds Fort Defiance,	v. 207 presides at Mount Vernon,	iv. 417	overtures of peace,	v. 208 journey to New York,	v. 14	defeats the Indians.	v. 20S general reception,	v. 15	treaty with the Indians, Wевв, Colonel, Wевв, Major General,	v. 281 her deportment,	v. 17	WEBB, Colonel,	ii. 270 death of Washington,	v. 296	WEBE, Major General,	i. 230
Washington, Mary, 1	. 22, 143	marches to the relief of Oswego,	i. 230
Washington, Colonel William A.	•,	Webster, Lieutenant Colonel, to leads the advance at Trenton,	ii, 452	break up American posts.	iv, 47 takes two cannon,	ii. 453	Webster, Col., detached to Beattie	's described,	iv. 44	Ford,	iv. 229
brush with the enemy,	iv. 45	at Guilford Court House,	iv, 247 joins Colonel White,	iv. 45 iv. 49 iv. 49	WEEDON, Colonel, conducts Hessian	1 surprised at Laneau's Ferry,	iv. 49	prisoners to Newtown.	ii. 4 59 exploit at Clermont,	iv. 187	Westmuller's portrait of Washing under Morgan,	iv. 189	ton, (Appendix.)	i. 455 at the battle of the Cowpens,	iv. 219	WESHINGTON, William, of Wesh-in charge of the prisoners,	iv. 222	ington,	1. 6 nt Guilford Court House,	iv. 245	Wessyngton, De, origin of the nam	e, i. 5 with Marion,	iv. 333	West, Major,	iii. 82
at Eutaw Springs,	iv. 335	West Point, decided to be fortified,	iii. 362 brings up the reserve,	iv. 337	Westchester County, British inroad,	iv. 7 taken prisoner,	iv. 338	Wetzell's Mill, affair at,	iv. 242
WATERBURY, Colonel, raises and dis	S	WIMPPLE, Commodore, command	3 bands a regiment,	ii. 137	fleet at Charleston,	iv. 27 gallant conduct,	ii. 357	changes his position,	iv. 23 taken prisoner,	ii. 359	retrograde move,	iv. 43
Warson, Elkanah, picture of Wash-		Whipple, Gen. Wm.,	iii. 164
ington in retirement,	iv. 435	WHITE, Bishop, on Washington's ar	i- 400
Watts, Major, at Oriskany,	iii. 153	assuming manners,	iv. 436
Woulded,	iii. 154	Washington's farewell dinner,	v. 253
Waxhaw, Tarleton's butchery at, Wayne, Anthony,	iv. 53 ii. 266	White, Col., with American cavalry   surprised by Tarleton,	iv. 49
in command at Ticonderoga,	iii, 26	White, Philip, captured and killed,	iv. 969 examines the defences of the	111, 20	Warre Mings enough to Washingto	n i 999
Highlands,	iii. 67	White Mingo, speech to Washingto White Plains, camp at,	ii. 367
Graydon's account of	iii. S4	incendiarism at,	ii. 575
at Chester,	iii. 138	White Thunder with Washington, at Brandywine,	iii. 193	in Braddock's camp,	i. 158 hovers about the enemy,	iii. 199	WHITING, Mr., death of,	v. 159 to Washington concerning the		Wild Hunter of Juniata,	i. 149 enemy,	iii. 200	WILKES on the appointment of the hears of premeditated attack,	iii, 200	Earl of Carlisle,	iii. 879 attacked by the British,	iii. 200	WILKINSON, General, interview wit demands a court-martial,	iii. 201	Gen. Lee,	ii, 43 1 is exonerated,	iii. 201	account of Lee's capture,	ii. 433 in the battle of Germantown,	iii. 262	hastens to Sullivan,	ii. 435 drives in the enemy,	iii. 262	secret of Lee's conduct,	ii. 435
in favor of attacking Philadelphia,	iii. 296	joins Washington,	ii. 440 detached to the advance,	iii, 390	Washington's difficulties	ii. 441
•		•	>

takes a letter from Gates to Wash-	WOLCOTT (the elder) on Washington's ington, ii. 448	farewell address, v. 246
panders to Gates, iii. 217	Wolfe, military services, i. 243 watches Burgovne, iii. 236	lands before Louisburg and storms at Burgoyne's surrender, lii. 252	the works, i. 244
at Burgoyne's surrender, lii. 252 despatched by Gates to Congress, iii. 279	surprises Light House Point, i. 245 to Gates on the respect of Congress, 111. 280	reception in England, i. 246
breveted brigadier general, III. 280	to besiege Quebec, i. 265 relative to the Conway correspond-	ascends the St. Lawrence, i. 268
ence, iii. 329	debarks on the Isle of Orleans, i. 269
correspondence with Stirling on	his transports damaged by a storm, i. 269
the Conway letter, iii. 338	establishes batteries, i. 269 honor wounded by Gates, iii. 339	crosses the St. Lawrence, and en-arrives at Yorktown, iii. 340	camps below the Montmoreninterview with Capt. Stoddart, iii. 340	су, racets Lieut, Col. Ball, iii. 340	reconnoitres up the river, i. 270 reconciliation with Gates, iii. 341	resolves to attack Montcalm in his subsequent reception by Gates, iii. 342	camp, i. 270 sends in his resignation, iii. 342	crosses the Montmorency, i. 271 is repulsed, i. 271 to Stirling on the Conway letter, iii. 342 interview with Washington, iii. 343 to Washington on the Conway letter, iii. 343 calls a council of wer i 979 resigns position as secretary of the Board of War, iii, 844	changes plan of operations, i. 272 retirement, iii. 344	reconnoitres the town, 1. 273 expedition against Indians, v. 94	his health, 1. 273
WILLARD, Counsellor, i. 427	campaigning song, i. 273
WILLET, Lieut. Col. Marinus, defeats	Gray's elegy, anecdote, i. 274
British scouting party, iii. 30	descends the river, i. 274
sallies from Fort Schuyler, iii. 151	passes the sentincl, i. 274 sacks the enemy's camp, iii. 156	lands near Cape Diamond, i. 275 volunteers to seek Schuyler, iii. 157	takes possession of the plains of expedition against the Onondagas, iii, 456 l	Abraham, i. 275
WILLIAMS, David, and Andrè, iv. 111	attacked by Montealm, i. 275
WILLIAMS, David, and Andrè, iv. 111 WILLIAMS, Col., driven in, i. 202	wounded, 1. 276
at Brooklyn, ii. 296	his last words and death, i. 276
WILLIAMS, Col. Jas., takes the field, iv. 172	Wood Creek, fight at, iii. 107 in the battle of King's Mountain, iv. 175	WOODFORD, Brig. Gen., reinforces killed, iv. 177	Charleston, iv. 45
WILLIAMS, Col. Otho H., commands	WOOLFORD, Col., reinforces Sumter, iv. 86 WOOSTER, David, appointed Brigathe rear-guard, iv. 235	WOOSTER, David, appointed Brigacrosses the Dan, iv. 235	dier general, 1. 414
at Guilford Court House, iv. 245	noble conduct, ii. 58
at Eutaw Springs, iv. 335	before Quebec, ii. 199 attacks the British. iv. 337	recalled, ii. 220
WILLIAMS, Major, with the artillery, iii. 237	hastens to Danbury, iii. 47 captured. 111, 238	joins Silliman, and takes command, iii. 49
Williamsburg rejoicings, i. 310	attacks the British rear-guard, iii. 49
Wills Creek, 1. 60	mortally wounded, iii. 49
Wills, Major, killed in battle, v. 76	death, iii. 51
Wilmington taken by the British, iv. 228	Worcester, military stores collected
Wilson, Jas., member of the Board	at, i. 384 of War and Ordnance, ii. 209	WRIGHT, portrait of Washington, (Ap-Wilson, James, Judge of Supreme	pendix,) i. 457
Court, v. 26	Writs of assistance, i. 301
Winchester, panic at, i. 195	Wyoming Valley, description of, iii. 432 alarm at, i. 214	expedition against, iii. 433 rayaged by Brant and Butler. iii. 434 attack apprehended, i. 215 WINGATE, Mr., account of Presidential dinner, v. 15
Wintermoot's Fort, Colonel J. But-	massacre of Americans, iii. 434 ler at, iii. 433
Wirt on the organization of the General Congress, i. 366	Y.
General Congress, i. 366 WITHERSPOON, Dr., proposes a pair of	1.
spurs for Wilkinson, iii. 280	Yankee Doodle, 1. 395
WOLCOTT, Oliver, Secretary of the	Yorktown, situation of iv. 317
Treasury, v. 210
vol. v.—19	1
VOL. V.— (3)

invested,	lv. 330 [	number of prisoners, killed, wound siege of,	iv. 342	ed, and missing, and troops of	n description of bombardment,	iv, 344	both sides, (note,)	iv. 3.	52 storming of the redoubts,	iv. 346	effect of surrender,	lv. 3	56 capitulates,	iv. 852	Young's House, expedition against,	lv.	7
terms of capitulation,	iv. 352	taken and burnt,	iv.	8

See page 378.

BRADDOCK, General, leaves Fort Cum-		sends scouts to Fort Duquesne,	1. 170
berland,	1. 163	Scarooyadi's son killed by mistake,	1. 177 asks the advice of Washington,	i. 164	admirable conduct,	i. 171 advances to attack Fort Duquesne	i. 165	tardiness of his march,	i. 173 reception of Captain Jack,	1. 166	erosses the Monongahela,	1. 174 his delay,	i. 167	commencement of the battle,	i. 176 solicitude for Washington,	i. 168	panic of the advanced guard.	i. 178
continued march,	i. 168	attempts to rally them,	i. 178 deserted Indian camp,	i. 168	is wounded; his despair,	i. 180
three stragglers shot and scalped,	i. 169	the route,	1, 180 difficulties of the march,	i. 169	reach the Great Meadows,	I. 182 precautions.	1, 170	his death, dying requests,	i, 188
encomps at Thicketty Run	i. 170	character.	1. 184

